Panel Wants $10 Billion Slash In Pentagon Budget

Proxmire Declares Russ Really 'Not 10 Feet Tall'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire says U.S. military spending should be geared to a Soviet warmaking potential that he judges is about half that of the United States. And he wants such spending chopped by $10 billion.

"We found from the expert testimony we took that the Russians are not 10 feet tall," the Wisconsin Democrat said today in releasing a report by a House Joint Economic Committee. Proxmire is chairman of the subcommittee and vice chairman of the parent panel.

"In fact, based on our military outlays and economic strength," he said, "if we are six feet tall, the Russians by comparison are three feet tall and the Chinese are six inches tall."

The subcommittee—with all four Republican members dissenting—urged President Nixon to cut defense requests in his new budget for fiscal 1971 by $10 billion from actual spending in fiscal 1969.

The Pentagon lists 1969 spending at $78.4 billion but Proxmire said it was about $75 billion and that after trimming to $65 billion next year defense spending should be dropped to $60 billion in the near future and kept there.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said the $10-billion figure was "pulled out of thin air."

The three other Republican dissenters—Sen. Len Jordan of Idaho and Reps. Clarence J. Brown of Ohio and Barber B. Conable of New York—said it has not been substantiated by the 10-member subcommittee.

Pentagon sources say the 1971 figure is likely to be $73 billion to $75 billion.

The subcommittee on economy in government recommended also an annual State Department report on U. S. commitments abroad, and more information on the over-all impact of defense requests so Congress can better assess their worth in relation to domestic needs.

The subcommittee said further that Congress' General Accounting Office should be given expanded authority to analyze defense spending, particularly costs and contract performances on weapons.

Air-Sea Hunt For Crewmen Off Steamer

The floating powder keg was abandoned in mid-Pacific after its cargo of bombs and rockets destined for Vietnam broke loose in rough weather.

Fourteen other crewmen were rescued by the Greek ship Khian Star yesterday, shortly after the Military Sea Transport ship was ripped by an explosion that tore a hole in the aft starboard section of the Badger State.

The 459-foot Badger State was floating deserted with her stern section smoking some 1,500 miles northeast of Hawaii when darkness closed in last night.

Some of the missing men, most believed from the state of Washington, were seen clinging to life rafts before it got dark. A U.S. plane dropped flares during the night in an effort to

15-Story Courthouse Square Plan Envisioned By Potential Buyers

A 15-story high-rise on Courthouse Square built with space age techniques and materials, has been envisioned by one group of potential investors.

The group has hired International Environmental Dynamics, a Menlo Park firm, to study the feasibility of applying IED's revolutionary building techniques to the courthouse development.

David E. Termohlen, vice president of IED, outlined the building method yesterday on Ernest N. Kettenhofen's program on radio station KTIM.

High-rise buildings are built by IED around a pair of central cores by suspending floors and outer walls from the cores in semi-floating style. Putting all the weight on the cores makes the building earthquake-resistant — one scale model was tested in a simulated quake 50 per cent higher than an 8 reading on the Richter scale and was undamaged, Termahlen said.

With new techniques, construction costs could be cut by a fourth, he said.

The firm has built high-rise buildings in various parts of the country, including its own building in Menlo Park and another under construction in Berkeley.

The building cores would use only 5,000 of the square's 79,000 square feet, leaving the rest free for open space, shops or parking, Tremohlen said. He estimated the building would have to be 10 to 15 stories to be economically feasible. Most likely building use would be commercial on the lower floors and offices on the upper.

His firm started a study seven years ago, Tremohlen said,to design a quake-proof type of building at lower cost. Using computers throughout the company studied present construction methods and found 90 per cent were based on tradition rather than utility, he said.

Termohlen said outer walls of the proposed building could be a fiberglass material, weighing a tenth of conventional concrete walls. Floors would be built like aircraft wings, light-weight but stronger than conventional floors.

"It's the first building we know of using today's technology to the maximum," he said.

The group hiring International Environmental Dynamics is a group of Marin businessmen who have not yet made their names known. It is not the same group that offered Marin County $750,000 for courthouse square early this month.

Agnew, Military Talk In Hawaii, First Leg Of Far East Journey

HONOLULU (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew planned a military briefing with the Commander in Chief of U.S. Pacific Forces today before leaving for Guam on his 37,000-mile trip to the Far East.

The place where Agnew was to stay in Hawaii had been kept secret "for security reasons," according to a Navy official who would not elaborate. A local security officer said, "The orders came from Washington."

Agnew was scheduled to depart for Guam at 3:30 p.m., PST, aboard Air Force Two.

Agnew was traveling amid tight security on his journey to the Far East, where he hoped "to get a reaction to the Nixon doctrine" in foreign policy.

Agnew's stops during the 25-day trip will be, for the most part, in countries President Richard M. Nixon had to pass by on his Asian trip last summer. But—like the President—Agnew was expected to make an unannounced trip to iVetnam.

Besides Guam, Agnew will visit the Philippines, Formosa, Thailand, Nepal, Afghanistan, Malaysia, Singapore, Bali, Australia and New Zealand.

Nixon, explaining the purpose of Agnew's trip, said the Vice President would discuss post-Vietnam plans with leaders of the nations he visits.

The framework of the discussions will be the "Nixon Doctrine" of emphasizing future economic and military independence for U.S. friends in the Far East.

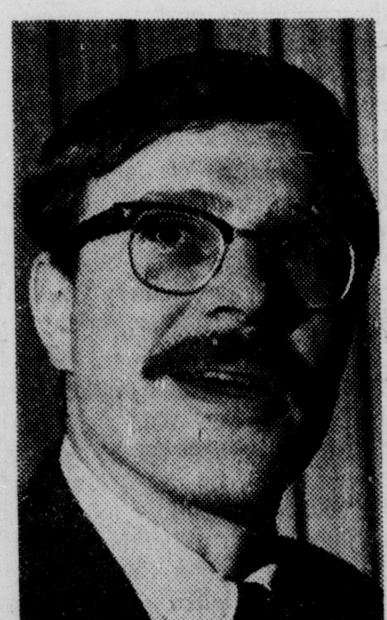
Social Services Consultant Takes Over New Careers



WILLIAM R. PRYOR
New job for county

William R. Pryor, 28, employment consultant for the Marin County Department of Social Services, will take over next month as New Careers coordinator for Marin County.

Personnel Director Maren Rinne announced late yesterday that Pryor has accepted the job at $937 per month, starting on Jan. 12. Pryor is now drawing $860 per month in the social services department.

A graduate of Reed College in Portland, Ore., Pryor was a social services worker in Humboldt County before joining the Marin staff in August of 1966. A big man physically (six feet, one-inch, 180 pounds) he has had two years of logging experience.

He is a member of the California National Guard. He and his wife live in Mill Valley.

Pryor succeeds Michael R. James, 28, of Oakland, who was fired two weeks ago after he was arrested in San Francisco on suspicion of drug possession.

Pryor was one of two men interviewed for the job by the Marin County Board of Supervisors last Tuesday. The other was James E. Thompson, 31, of Fairfax, supervising probation officer in the Marin County probation department.

Oops—Commute Book Snarl

Some commuters yesterday were able to purchase Golden Gate Bridge commute books for the old price of $6.50 up to 22 hours after the new $10 commute books had gone into effect.

The lower priced books were sold, according to bridge officials, to commuters who complained they had been informed by a report in the Independent-Journal Wednesday that the deadline for purchase of the old books would be 10 p.m. yesterday.

According to Dale W. Luehring, bridge general manager, the deadline was moved back from 10 p.m. to 12:01 a.m. yesterday after the district's attorney interpreted the ordinance changing the commute rates to be effective at the earlier time.

The Independent-Journal failed to report the time change in Wednesday's paper.

"Because of the newspaper story, we told the collectors in the toll lanes to refer customers who complained to the office, where 500 of the $6.50 books were still available," bridge Sgt. Russell J. Gordier said.

Gordier said 94 of the $6.50 books were sold yesterday in the office. Many of these, he said, were sold to customers who were unable to purchase $6.50 books Wednesday when the district temporarily ran out.

Most commuters, however, made sure they got their books at the old price before the deadline. On Wednesday and Thursday, 6,252 old books were sold, while yesterday only 236 new books were sold.

According to Luehring, the bridge normally sells 600 to 800 books on a weekday. "It's pretty obvious most commuters were able to get the $6.50 books and are still using them," he said.

Total December sales of the old books, which are valid through Feb. 20, should be well over 30,000, Luehring said. The bridge used up all of its regular books, approximately 20,000, by Wednesday and was forced to print undated emergency books for sale Thursday and yesterday.

Bridge directors voted Dec. 12 to raise commute rates to $10 per book and to eliminate commute books entirely as of next July 1.

HONOLULU (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew planned a military briefing with the Commander in Chief of U.S. Pacific Forces today before leaving for Guam on his 37,000-mile trip to the Far East.

The place where Agnew was to stay in Hawaii had been kept secret "for security reasons," according to a Navy official who would not elaborate. A local security officer said, "The orders came from Washington."

Agnew was scheduled to depart for Guam at 3:30 p.m., PST, aboard Air Force Two.

Agnew was traveling amid tight security on his journey to the Far East, where he hoped "to get a reaction to the Nixon doctrine" in foreign policy.

Agnew's stops during the 25-day trip will be, for the most part, in countries President Richard M. Nixon had to pass by on his Asian trip last summer. But—like the President—Agnew was expected to make an unannounced trip to iVetnam.

Besides Guam, Agnew will visit the Philippines, Formosa, Thailand, Nepal, Afghanistan, Malaysia, Singapore, Bali, Australia and New Zealand.

Nixon, explaining the purpose of Agnew's trip, said the Vice President would discuss post-Vietnam plans with leaders of the nations he visits.

The framework of the discussions will be the "Nixon Doctrine" of emphasizing future economic and military independence for U.S. friends in the Far East.

Social Services Consultant Takes Over New Careers

William R. Pryor, 28, employment consultant for the Marin County Department of Social Services, will take over next month as New Careers coordinator for Marin County.

Personnel Director Maren Rinne announced late yesterday that Pryor has accepted the job at $937 per month, starting on Jan. 12. Pryor is now drawing $860 per month in the social services department.

A graduate of Reed College in Portland, Ore., Pryor was a social services worker in Humboldt County before joining the Marin staff in August of 1966. A big man physically (six feet, one-inch, 180 pounds) he has had two years of logging experience.

He is a member of the California National Guard. He and his wife live in Mill Valley.

Pryor succeeds Michael R. James, 28, of Oakland, who was fired two weeks ago after he was arrested in San Francisco on suspicion of drug possession.

Pryor was one of two men interviewed for the job by the Marin County Board of Supervisors last Tuesday. The other was James E. Thompson, 31, of Fairfax, supervising probation officer in the Marin County probation department.

Oops—Commute Book Snarl

Some commuters yesterday were able to purchase Golden Gate Bridge commute books for the old price of $6.50 up to 22 hours after the new $10 commute books had gone into effect.

The lower priced books were sold, according to bridge officials, to commuters who complained they had been informed by a report in the Independent-Journal Wednesday that the deadline for purchase of the old books would be 10 p.m. yesterday.

According to Dale W. Luehring, bridge general manager, the deadline was moved back from 10 p.m. to 12:01 a.m. yesterday after the district's attorney interpreted the ordinance changing the commute rates to be effective at the earlier time.

The Independent-Journal failed to report the time change in Wednesday's paper.

"Because of the newspaper story, we told the collectors in the toll lanes to refer customers who complained to the office, where 500 of the $6.50 books were still available," bridge Sgt. Russell J. Gordier said.

Gordier said 94 of the $6.50 books were sold yesterday in the office. Many of these, he said, were sold to customers who were unable to purchase $6.50 books Wednesday when the district temporarily ran out.

Most commuters, however, made sure they got their books at the old price before the deadline. On Wednesday and Thursday, 6,252 old books were sold, while yesterday only 236 new books were sold.

According to Luehring, the bridge normally sells 600 to 800 books on a weekday. "It's pretty obvious most commuters were able to get the $6.50 books and are still using them," he said.

Total December sales of the old books, which are valid through Feb. 20, should be well over 30,000, Luehring said. The bridge used up all of its regular books, approximately 20,000, by Wednesday and was forced to print undated emergency books for sale Thursday and yesterday.

Bridge directors voted Dec. 12 to raise commute rates to $10 per book and to eliminate commute books entirely as of next July 1.

Irish Tension

DUBLIN (AP) — The Irish Republic canceled all police leave and started special checks of cars and passengers on the border with Northern Ireland today after a bomb attack on the statue of an Irish patriot in Dublin.

The blast yesterday destroyed a one-ton bronze angel at the foot of the monument of Daniel O'Connell, who led the Irish party in the British parliament in the early 19th Century and won the vote for Roman Catholics. Dublin's main thoroughfare, where the statue is located, is named for him.

Police said they believe the explosion was the work of the Ulster Volunteer Force, the Protestant extremist counterpart to the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Thailand Pullout

BANGKOK (AP) — A total of 2,400 American troops were withdrawn from Thailand as of Dec. 15, the U.S. Embassy announced today.

The number is about two-fifths of the target announced in a U.S.Thai declaration last Oct. 1 that some 6,000 U.S. troops would be withdrawn from Thailand by July 1, 1970.

There are now about 45,600 American troops, mostly U.S. Air Force personnel, remaining in the six major air bases around Thailand, officials said.

Prisoner Trade?

PARIS (AP) — A Puerto Rican independence movement leader says he is optimistic that North Vietnam will consider a proposal to free five American prisoners of war if the United States releases five Puerto Rican nationalists jailed for terrorism in the 1950s.

The leader, Juan-Mari Bras, presented the proposal to the North Vietnamese delegates at the Paris peace talks who said they will send it on to Hanoi.

One of the jailed nationalists, Oscar Collazo, is serving a life sentence for his part in an attempt to assassinate former President Harry S Truman in Washington in 1950. The others received long prison terms for an armed attack in 1954 on the House of Representatives in which four congressmen were wounded.

Texan's Yule Odyssey Hits Frustrations

VIENTIANE (UPI)—American millionaire H. Ross Perot of Texas, rebuffed by Hanoi in his attempt to personally deliver a planeload of Christmas gifts for U.S. war prisoners in North Vietnam, left Vientiane today for Moscow where the goods, instead, will be mailed.

Perot departed Vientiane aboard a Boeing 707 loaded with food, clothing and medical supplies on the 8,000 mile trip to Moscow where the gifts will be mailed to some 1,400 American prisoners held in North Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese had agreed the goods could be mailed from Moscow. They could have been mailed directly from the United States but the Texas millionaire wanted to deliver them personally to the captured U.S. servicemen.

ON TO BANGKOK

The chartered jet headed first for Bangkok where it will refuel and probably stay overnight before proceeding to Moscow.

When North Vietnamese autorities in Vi entiane yesterday rejected his proposal to fly in the gifts, Perot decided to go to Moscow. Today he visited the Soviet embassy in Vientiane before leaving to request landing permission. His request was forwarded by the Soviet embassy to Moscow.

TALKS TO REDS

Perot also visited the Communist Pathet Lao Vientiane headquarters today where he talked for about 90 minutes with Col. Sotte Petrasy and showed Petrasy a list of 172 names of Americans missing in Laos.

Perot paid another call on the Laotian government prison camp near Vientiane where 63 North Vietnamese soldiers are said to be held. The prisoners were gathered in the prison yard when Perot arrived with several newsmen.

Perot spoke to the prisoners through a Cietnamese interpreter, saying, "We came here as friends." He later toured the prison compound and his impression was that the North Vietnamese being held there were "treated humanely."

Blizzards Still Buff et Eastern U.S.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

winds continued to belt the eastern United States last night and early today.

Snow was in progress from the north Atlantic Coast to the Great Lakes and the central Appalachians with as much as two feet blanketing the ground from New York state to northern New England.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect over north and central Maine and gale warnings were flying from Virginia Beach, Va., to Eastport, Maine.

Roads and highways were reported treacherous all over the East. Yesterday's six-inch snowfall in New York City caused delays in public transportation but a light post-holiday commuter turnout prevented serious bottlenecks.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay flew back to the city yesterday to oversee snow removal efforts, after directing crews from the Bahamas by telephone in the early hours of the storm.

Power was being restored today for thousands of North Carolinians left without electricity by a Christmas night ice storm which snapped many power lines.

The current was turned on yesterday in about 5,000 Raleigh homes which were without electricity Christmas night. Extra linemen were still at work in the early hours today to restore power for some 10,000 more customers from Durham to Spartanburg.

North Carolina highway patrolmen and sheriff's deputies from Burke County rescued three carloads of travelers early today after their vehicles became stuck in snow drifts two to three feet deep. The travelers were stranded atop Jonas Ridge on U.S. 181 between Morgantown and Lineville Falls for nearly three hours.

The patrol said wind gusts up to 35 miles an hour were piling snow back on the roads in northwestern North Carolina as fast as they could be cleaned off. No snow was falling in the area, but six to 12 inches had been recorded since Christmas night.

Another storm was shaping up in the Southwest as snow spread through the Rockies to the adjacent high plains. Travelers warnings were posted from the southern Rockies to the central plains.

More precipitation hit the north Pacific Coast in the form of rain or showers. Snow was falling over the interior mountains.

Frigid arctic air kept temperatures near or below the zero mark from Minnesota and the Dakotas to northwest Illinois. Predawn temperatures ranged from 12 below zero at Pellston, Mich., to 68 at Brownsville, Tex.

Defendant's Illness Recesses Yippie Trial

CHICAGO (UPI)—The prosecution, the defendants and defense attorneys got a long holiday weekend after all in the riot conspiracy trial of the "Chicago Seven" because of Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman's illness.

Although attorneys for both sides and the defendants were required to appear in court yesterday, U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman recessed the trial after a government-appointed physician testified that he had examined Hoffman in a hospital and found him ill.

Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's appearance at the trial was put off at least until Monday because of the delay. Court sources said the mayor arrived at the federal building yesterday and was ready to testify.

The defense of the seven men charged with crossing state lines to incite the bedlam that surrounded the 1968 Democratic National Convention has charged that the disturbances were a result of Daley's determination not to allow mass protests around the convention site.

Yippie Hoffman has been absent from the court since Wednesday with what his physician described as bronchial pneumonia.

A physician appointed by the court, Dr. Joseph Freilich, testified yesterday that the long-haired revolutionary was suffering from acute bronchitis and should be able to resume testimony Monday.

Senator Discounts Nixon Health Bill Veto Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wash., says he believes President Richard M. Nixon is "reconsidering his threat to veto" the health and education money bill but, if a veto comes, he thinks the Senate may be able to override it.

Proxmire told newsmen yesterday that the measure is close to the President's request, explaining: "Over-all there's only a difference of 2 or 3 per cent and that shouldn't be the basis of a veto by President Nixon."

Earlier in the week, Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said the President still considers the bill to be inflationary and unacceptable. The $19.75 billion appropriation measure is $1.1 billion above Nixon's request.

The bill has been held over by the Senate for action after Congress comes back Jan. 19.

Meanwhile, Proxmire said that although he believes the President will back down on the veto threat, there could be "nothing healthier than a battle over national priorities" between the administration and Congress.

The administration's emphasis has been on foreign affairs and military posture while Congress has put a priority on domestic programs, he said.

"We can't be the policeman of the world and at the same time have the kind of country we want to have," Proxmire added.

Student Leader Draws $100 Fine

College of Marin's student body president, Martin James Fleischman, 19, of Belvedere, yesterday was placed on one year probation and fined $100 by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court for possessing a device for smoking narcotics.

A felony count of possessing marijuana against Fleischman had earlier been dismissed.

The youth was arrested Oct. 8 by sheriff's deputies who stopped his car for a defective taillight. They said that Fleischman threw a package of what appeared to be hashish out of the car.

Daley Talks Softly Of Young Ideals

CHICAGO (AP) — Youth's idealism — and its trappings, such as long hair — received an almost paternal grin and understanding endorsement from Mayor Richard J. Daley.

"Young people have many problems . . . but we must understand that the idealism they have — if it's to make a better society — is a good thing for society," the mayor said last night in a filmed television interview.

"We should be a lot more patient instead of trying to impose our own ideas on them.

"Humor is part of it, you have to be able to laugh at yourself. Some people think that young people are going to pot because of their long hair and mustache. But if you look at pictures of Christ, Abraham Lincoln, you see them with wings and beards."

The mayor said he does not believe there is a generation gap. Daley said the only reason people think it exists is because so many write about it.

The mayor said he hopes there will be many more young delegates at the 1972 Democratic convention and that the hatred and bitterness "that was built up against President (Lyndon B.) Johnson in 1968," will disappear.

He blamed the Vietnam war for the bitterness and hatred that caused the youths who came to Chicago during the 1968 Democratic National Convention "to disrupt the convention inside and outside."

"In 1972, I hope young people come to the convention, not to fight the establishment, but to offer constructive suggestions."

Asked if he was the last of the big city mayors who could handle urban problems, the mayor replied, "I don't think I'm the last. I hope I'm the first."

The mayor obliquely took a shot at television reporting of the news saying that time prohibits a full presentation of the story, and that television sometimes "goes to extremes" in reporting the news.

"You put on a fellow who makes a statement and there is no checking to see if the statement is true, no checking to see who he is, where he came from," Daley added.

Czech Tourists Flee En Masse In Sweden

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The first Czechoslovakian tourist group to visit the West in a month came to Sweden for Christmas and 74 of its 96 members decided not to return home.

Police said today 52 of the 74 have appied for political asylum while the remaining 22 apparently have gone into hiding and are expected to file their applications with the aliens police next week.

The group flew to Stockholm Dec. 20 on a tour set up by Czechoslovakian government authorities. It was the first such tour allowed to the West in a month, and some of the tourists said it would be the last.

The 22 group members who returned home left by train for Prague on Christmas Day.

Police said the tourists who decided to remain in the West cited the deteriorating political situation at home, with hard-line Communists cracking down on the men those participated in shaping the "Prague Spring" reforms under Alexander Dubcek.

Entire families were among the defectors. Police said that some of the others had left wives, children or husbands behind in Czechoslovakia.

The Social Welfare Authority has been taking care of the tourists until the government rules on their applications for political asylum, expected to be granted without delay.

After the holiday season, the defectors will be moved to special camps for immigrants, where they will be taught to speak Swedish before joining the labor market.

Since the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia Aug. 21, 1968, several hundred Czechoslovaks have received permission to stay in Sweden after fleeing their home country. The Prague government has now cracked down severely on travel to the West.

Valley Food Charity Spurs Mud-Slinging By Officials

MODESTO (UPI)—What was supposed to be a joyous Christmas for needy families in Stanislaus County is winding up as a mud-slinging holiday season between county officials and sponsors of the give-away program.

After 10 tons of surplus food was trucked from Sacramento and passed out to 200 poor families, county officials yesterday criticized poverty workers for presenting a "one-sided picture" of the plight of the recipients in this agriculturally rich valley.

"The board of supervisors reviewed the situation just last week and reported at the time the food was not needed," Charles Dixon, chief county administrative officer, said.

In supporting Dixon, Capt. R. C. Fitton, superintendent of the Salvation Army, which serves as the clearing house for emergency food programs in the county, said more food was available than officials of the Community Action Commission (CAC) distributed Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

"We have boxes and cases of food that haven't even been touched," said Fitton.

But Phil Young, economic development specialist for the CAC, said the trucked food was needed because of "high unemployment, high rent and welfare checks based on 1957 payments."

Young, in addition, charged Dixon with playing politics with the situation and giving in to pressure from business interests in the county.

He said unemployment rate in the county was approaching 20 per cent and may reach as high as 24 per cent after the first of the year.

"Oh boy, I wonder who Dixon talks to," said Dan Lowenstein of the CDC. "That all is just not true. The supervisors have kept in touch with us and they have not reversed their position.

"We began distributing that food at 8 p.m. Wednesday and, you know, by 3 p.m., we had only two bags of bulgar left. We turned away 100 families because we ran out of food."

One of the recipients of the surplus food, Buford Pennington, said he and his wife were out of food when he received word the trucks had arrived.

"We didn't have anything in the house to eat," he said. "It was a thrill to get what they gave us."

Prisoner Trade?

PARIS (AP) — A Puerto Rican independence movement leader says he is optimistic that North Vietnam will consider a proposal to free five American prisoners of war if the United States releases five Puerto Rican nationalists jailed for terrorism in the 1950s.

The leader, Juan-Mari Bras, presented the proposal to the North Vietnamese delegates at the Paris peace talks who said they will send it on to Hanoi.

One of the jailed nationalists, Oscar Collazo, is serving a life sentence for his part in an attempt to assassinate former President Harry S Truman in Washington in 1950. The others received long prison terms for an armed attack in 1954 on the House of Representatives in which four congressmen were wounded.

The poll of more than 30,000 listeners was announced yesterday by the British Broadcasting Corp.

Four Americans in the list of the 10 most important men of the 1960s were the late President John F. Kennedy, 3; the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.; 6; Dr. Billy Graham, the evangelist, 8; and astronaut Neil A. Armstrong, first man on the moon, 9.

Huks Execute Two

MANILA (UPI) — A group of 20 heavily armed Communist Huks invaded a village in the central Luzon province of Pampanga Friday and executed a 3-year-old boy and a 52-year-old woman.

Police said the Huks herded about 100 village residents near a creek, selected the child and woman, tied them up and killed them with submachine guns as other villagers watched.

Gunboats Puzzle

PARIS (AP) — The Defense Ministry said today a Norwegian oil shipping service had purchased five gunboats once ordered by Israel, but the Norwegian foreign ministry denied any knowledge of the deal.

Some reports also said Norwegian ships' officers were aboard the gunboats, originally built for Israel by a French yard before France embargoed all arms exports to Israel. Others said Israeli crews manned them.

BERKELEY TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A mother and five of her nine children died early today when fire swept their apartment in a one-story wood frame house, a former barracks. Local authorities were in the process of condemning the structure.

Texan's Yule Odyssey Hits Frustrations

VIENTIANE (UPI)—American millionaire H. Ross Perot of Texas, rebuffed by Hanoi in his attempt to personally deliver a planeload of Christmas gifts for U.S. war prisoners in North Vietnam, left Vientiane today for Moscow where the goods, instead, will be mailed.

Perot departed Vientiane aboard a Boeing 707 loaded with food, clothing and medical supplies on the 8,000 mile trip to Moscow where the gifts will be mailed to some 1,400 American prisoners held in North Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese had agreed the goods could be mailed from Moscow. They could have been mailed directly from the United States but the Texas millionaire wanted to deliver them personally to the captured U.S. servicemen.

ON TO BANGKOK

The chartered jet headed first for Bangkok where it will refuel and probably stay overnight before proceeding to Moscow.

When North Vietnamese autrorities in Vi entiane yesterday rejected his proposal to fly in the gifts, Perot decided to go to Moscow. Today he visited the Soviet embassy in Vientiane before leaving to request landing permission. His request was forwarded by the Soviet embassy to Moscow.

TALKS TO REDS

Perot also visited the Communist Pathet Lao Vientiane headquarters today where he talked for about 90 minutes with Col. Sotte Petrasy and showed Petrasy a list of 172 names of Americans missing in Laos.

Perot paid another call on the Laotian government prison camp near Vientiane where 63 North Vietnamese soldiers are said to be held. The prisoners were gathered in the prison yard when Perot arrived with several newsmen.

Perot spoke to the prisoners through a Cietnamese interpreter, saying, "We came here as friends." He later toured the prison compound and his impression was that the North Vietnamese being held there were "treated humanely."

Defendant's Illness Recesses Yippie Trial

CHICAGO (UPI)—The prosecution, the defendants and defense attorneys got a long holiday weekend after all in the riot conspiracy trial of the "Chicago Seven" because of Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman's illness.

Although attorneys for both sides and the defendants were required to appear in court yesterday, U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman recessed the trial after a government-appointed physician testified that he had examined Hoffman in a hospital and found him ill.

Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's appearance at the trial was put off at least until Monday because of the delay. Court sources said the mayor arrived at the federal building yesterday and was ready to testify.

The defense of the seven men charged with crossing state lines to incite the bedlam that surrounded the 1968 Democratic National Convention has charged that the disturbances were a result of Daley's determination not to allow mass protests around the convention site.

Yippie Hoffman has been absent from the court since Wednesday with what his physician described as bronchial pneumonia.

A physician appointed by the court, Dr. Joseph Freilich, testified yesterday that the long-haired revolutionary was suffering from acute bronchitis and should be able to resume testimony Monday.

Senator Discounts Nixon Health Bill Veto Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wash., says he believes President Richard M. Nixon is "reconsidering his threat to veto" the health and education money bill but, if a veto comes, he thinks the Senate may be able to override it.

Proxmire told newsmen yesterday that the measure is close to the President's request, explaining: "Over-all there's only a difference of 2 or 3 per cent and that shouldn't be the basis of a veto by President Nixon."

Earlier in the week, Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said the President still considers the bill to be inflationary and unacceptable. The $19.75 billion appropriation measure is $1.1 billion above Nixon's request.

The bill has been held over by the Senate for action after Congress comes back Jan. 19.

Meanwhile, Proxmire said that although he believes the President will back down on the veto threat, there could be "nothing healthier than a battle over national priorities" between the administration and Congress.

The administration's emphasis has been on foreign affairs and military posture while Congress has put a priority on domestic programs, he said.

"We can't be the policeman of the world and at the same time have the kind of country we want to have," Proxmire added.

Student Leader Draws $100 Fine

College of Marin's student body president, Martin James Fleischman, 19, of Belvedere, yesterday was placed on one year probation and fined $100 by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court for possessing a device for smoking narcotics.

A felony count of possessing marijuana against Fleischman had earlier been dismissed.

The youth was arrested Oct. 8 by sheriff's deputies who stopped his car for a defective taillight. They said that Fleischman threw a package of what appeared to be hashish out of the car.

The ideal temperature for a Finnish sauna bath is 190 to 200 degrees.

Blizzards Still Buffet Eastern U.S.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

winds continued to belt the eastern United States last night and early today.

Snow was in progress from the north Atlantic Coast to the Great Lakes and the central Appalachians with as much as two feet blanketing the ground from New York state to northern New England.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect over north and central Maine and gale warnings were flying from Virginia Beach, Va., to Eastport, Maine.

Roads and highways were reported treacherous all over the East. Yesterday's six-inch snowfall in New York City caused delays in public transportation but a light post-holiday commuter turnout prevented serious bottlenecks.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay flew back to the city yesterday to oversee snow removal efforts, after directing crews from the Bahamas by telephone in the early hours of the storm.

Power was being restored today for thousands of North Carolinians left without electricity by a Christmas night ice storm which snapped many power lines.

The current was turned on yesterday in about 5,000 Raleigh homes which were without electricity Christmas night. Extra linemen were still at work in the early hours today to restore power for some 10,000 more customers from Durham to Spartanburg.

North Carolina highway patrolmen and sheriff's deputies from Burke County rescued three carloads of travelers early today after their vehicles became stuck in snow drifts two to three feet deep. The travelers were stranded atop Jonas Ridge on U.S. 181 between Morgantown and Lineville Falls for nearly three hours.

The patrol said wind gusts up to 35 miles an hour were piling snow back on the roads in northwestern North Carolina as fast as they could be cleaned off. No snow was falling in the area, but six to 12 inches had been recorded since Christmas night.

Another storm was shaping up in the Southwest as snow spread through the Rockies to the adjacent high plains. Travelers warnings were posted from the southern Rockies to the central plains.

More precipitation hit the north Pacific Coast in the form of rain or showers. Snow was falling over the interior mountains.

Frigid arctic air kept temperatures near or below the zero mark from Minnesota and the Dakotas to northwest Illinois. Predawn temperatures ranged from 12 below zero at Pellston, Mich., to 68 at Brownsville, Tex.

Daley Talks Softly Of Young Ideals

CHICAGO (AP) — Youth's idealism — and its trappings, such as long hair — received an almost paternal grin and understanding endorsement from Mayor Richard J. Daley.

"Young people have many problems . . . but we must understand that the idealism they have — if it's to make a better society — is a good thing for society," the mayor said last night in a filmed television interview.

"We should be a lot more patient instead of trying to impose our own ideas on them.

"Humor is part of it, you have to be able to laugh at yourself. Some people think that young people are going to pot because of their long hair and mustache. But if you look at pictures of Christ, Abraham Lincoln, you see them with wings and beards."

The mayor said he does not believe there is a generation gap. Daley said the only reason people think it exists is because so many write about it.

The mayor said he hopes there will be many more young delegates at the 1972 Democratic convention and that the hatred and bitterness "that was built up against President (Lyndon B.) Johnson in 1968," will disappear.

He blamed the Vietnam war for the bitterness and hatred that caused the youths who came to Chicago during the 1968 Democratic National Convention "to disrupt the convention inside and outside."

"In 1972, I hope young people come to the convention, not to fight the establishment, but to offer constructive suggestions."

Asked if he was the last of the big city mayors who could handle urban problems, the mayor replied, "I don't think I'm the last. I hope I'm the first."

The mayor obliquely took a shot at television reporting of the news saying that time prohibits a full presentation of the story, and that television sometimes "goes to extremes" in reporting the news.

"You put on a fellow who makes a statement and there is no checking to see if the statement is true, no checking to see who he is, where he came from," Daley added.

Czech Tourists Flee En Masse In Sweden

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The first Czechoslovakian tourist group to visit the West in a month came to Sweden for Christmas and 74 of its 96 members decided not to return home.

Police said today 52 of the 74 have appied for political asylum while the remaining 22 apparently have gone into hiding and are expected to file their applications with the aliens police next week.

The group flew to Stockholm Dec. 20 on a tour set up by Czechoslovakian government authorities. It was the first such tour allowed to the West in a month, and some of the tourists said it would be the last.

The 22 group members who returned home left by train for Prague on Christmas Day.

Police said the tourists who decided to remain in the West cited the deteriorating political situation at home, with hard-line Communists cracking down on the men those participated in shaping the "Prague Spring" reforms under Alexander Dubcek.

Entire families were among the defectors. Police said that some of the others had left wives, children or husbands behind in Czechoslovakia.

The Social Welfare Authority has been taking care of the tourists until the government rules on their applications for political asylum, expected to be granted without delay.

After the holiday season, the defectors will be moved to special camps for immigrants, where they will be taught to speak Swedish before joining the labor market.

Since the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia Aug. 21, 1968, several hundred Czechoslovaks have received permission to stay in Sweden after fleeing their home country. The Prague government has now cracked down severely on travel to the West.

Valley Food Charity Spurs Mud-Slinging By Officials

MODESTO (UPI)—What was supposed to be a joyous Christmas for needy families in Stanislaus County is winding up as a mud-slinging holiday season between county officials and sponsors of the give-away program.

After 10 tons of surplus food was trucked from Sacramento and passed out to 200 poor families, county officials yesterday criticized poverty workers for presenting a "one-sided picture" of the plight of the recipients in this agriculturally rich valley.

"The board of supervisors reviewed the situation just last week and reported at the time the food was not needed," Charles Dixon, chief county administrative officer, said.

In supporting Dixon, Capt. R. C. Fitton, superintendent of the Salvation Army, which serves as the clearing house for emergency food programs in the county, said more food was available than officials of the Community Action Commission (CAC) distributed Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

"We have boxes and cases of food that haven't even been touched," said Fitton.

But Phil Young, economic development specialist for the CAC, said the trucked food was needed because of "high unemployment, high rent and welfare checks based on 1957 payments."

Young, in addition, charged Dixon with playing politics with the situation and giving in to pressure from business interests in the county.

He said unemployment rate in the county was approaching 20 per cent and may reach as high as 24 per cent after the first of the year.

"Oh boy, I wonder who Dixon talks to," said Dan Lowenstein of the CDC. "That all is just not true. The supervisors have kept in touch with us and they have not reversed their position.

"We began distributing that food at 8 p.m. Wednesday and, you know, by 3 p.m., we had only two bags of bulgar left. We turned away 100 families because we ran out of food."

One of the recipients of the surplus food, Buford Pennington, said he and his wife were out of food when he received word the trucks had arrived.

"We didn't have anything in the house to eat," he said. "It was a thrill to get what they gave us."

Irish Tension

DUBLIN (AP) — The Irish Republic canceled all police leave and started special checks of cars and passengers on the border with Northern Ireland today after a bomb attack on the statue of an Irish patriot in Dublin.

The blast yesterday destroyed a one-ton bronze angel at the foot of the monument of Daniel O'Connell, who led the Irish party in the British parliament in the early 19th Century and won the vote for Roman Catholics. Dublin's main thoroughfare, where the statue is located, is named for him.

Police said they believe the explosion was the work of the Ulster Volunteer Force, the Protestant extremist counterpart to the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

BANGKOK (AP) — A total of 2,400 American troops were withdrawn from Thailand as of Dec. 15, the U.S. Embassy announced today.

The number is about two-fifths of the target announced in a U.S.Thai declaration last Oct. 1 that some 6,000 U.S. troops would be withdrawn from Thailand by July 1, 1970.

There are now about 45,600 American troops, mostly U.S. Air Force personnel, remaining in the six major air bases around Thailand, officials said.

He blamed the Vietnam war for the bitterness and hatred that caused the youths who came to Chicago during the 1968 Democratic National Convention "to disrupt the convention inside and outside."

"In 1972, I hope young people come to the convention, not to fight the establishment, but to offer constructive suggestions."

Asked if he was the last of the big city mayors who could handle urban problems, the mayor replied, "I don't think I'm the last. I hope I'm the first."

The mayor obliquely took a shot at television reporting of the news saying that time prohibits a full presentation of the story, and that television sometimes "goes to extremes" in reporting the news.

"You put on a fellow who makes a statement and there is no checking to see if the statement is true, no checking to see who he is, where he came from," Daley added.

Czech Tourists Flee En Masse In Sweden

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The first Czechoslovakian tourist group to visit the West in a month came to Sweden for Christmas and 74 of its 96 members decided not to return home.

Police said today 52 of the 74 have appied for political asylum while the remaining 22 apparently have gone into hiding and are expected to file their applications with the aliens police next week.

The group flew to Stockholm Dec. 20 on a tour set up by Czechoslovakian government authorities. It was the first such tour allowed to the West in a month, and some of the tourists said it would be the last.

The 22 group members who returned home left by train for Prague on Christmas Day.

Police said the tourists who decided to remain in the West cited the deteriorating political situation at home, with hard-line Communists cracking down on the men those participated in shaping the "Prague Spring" reforms under Alexander Dubcek.

Entire families were among the defectors. Police said that some of the others had left wives, children or husbands behind in Czechoslovakia.

The Social Welfare Authority has been taking care of the tourists until the government rules on their applications for political asylum, expected to be granted without delay.

After the holiday season, the defectors will be moved to special camps for immigrants, where they will be taught to speak Swedish before joining the labor market.

Since the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia Aug. 21, 1968, several hundred Czechoslovaks have received permission to stay in Sweden after fleeing their home country. The Prague government has now cracked down severely on travel to the West.

Valley Food Charity Spurs Mud-Slinging By Officials

MODESTO (UPI)—What was supposed to be a joyous Christmas for needy families in Stanislaus County is winding up as a mud-slinging holiday season between county officials and sponsors of the give-away program.

After 10 tons of surplus food was trucked from Sacramento and passed out to 200 poor families, county officials yesterday criticized poverty workers for presenting a "one-sided picture" of the plight of the recipients in this agriculturally rich valley.

"The board of supervisors reviewed the situation just last week and reported at the time the food was not needed," Charles Dixon, chief county administrative officer, said.

In supporting Dixon, Capt. R. C. Fitton, superintendent of the Salvation Army, which serves as the clearing house for emergency food programs in the county, said more food was available than officials of the Community Action Commission (CAC) distributed Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

"We have boxes and cases of food that haven't even been touched," said Fitton.

But Phil Young, economic development specialist for the CAC, said the trucked food was needed because of "high unemployment, high rent and welfare checks based on 1957 payments."

Young, in addition, charged Dixon with playing politics with the situation and giving in to pressure from business interests in the county.

He said unemployment rate in the county was approaching 20 per cent and may reach as high as 24 per cent after the first of the year.

"Oh boy, I wonder who Dixon talks to," said Dan Lowenstein of the CDC. "That all is just not true. The supervisors have kept in touch with us and they have not reversed their position.

"We began distributing that food at 8 p.m. Wednesday and, you know, by 3 p.m., we had only two bags of bulgar left. We turned away 100 families because we ran out of food."

One of the recipients of the surplus food, Buford Pennington, said he and his wife were out of food when he received word the trucks had arrived.

"We didn't have anything in the house to eat," he said. "It was a thrill to get what they gave us."

Eaton Turns 86

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cyrus S. Eaton, the millionaire industrialist and frequent visitor to Communist countries in his search for peace, is 86 today.

He completed his most recent trip to a Communist nation this month when he returned from talks with the North Veitnamese in Hanoi. He will hold a news conference Monday.

Nixon Hints He'll Agree To Tax Change

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Richard M. Nixon, having strongly hinted he intends to sign the tax reform bill, continued to work today on budget problems in an effort to offset the bill's projected $2.5 billion revenue loss for fiscal 1971.

Although he had earlier threatened to veto the reform-relief measure on the grounds it is inflationary, the President indicated yesterday his budget trimming decisions were based on the assumption that the newly-passed tax bill would become law.

The disclosure came when Nixon talked to reporters after meeting for most of the day on the projected budget for 12 months beginning July 1 with budget director Robert May and defense secretary Melvin R. Laird and other aides.

"One of our major problems is we have got to readjust our whole thinking because there is a $2.5 billion shortfall which resulted from the tax bill," the President said.

Nixon told newsmen that the House-Senate Conference Committee had "commendably reduced the loss of revenue" in its compromise version of the bill which Congress approved Monday.

However, he emphasized that the bill still carries a revenue loss $2.5 billion greater than the original administration bill.

Nixon has six more days in which to sign the bill or it will be pocket vetoed.

In discussing the budget, which he hopes to deliver to Congress the final week in January, the President said that defense expenditures would be the smallest percentage of the overall budget since World War II.

Neither Nixon nor Mayo gave any figures, but the new budget is expected to exceed $200 billion for the first time in history, despite the trimming.

"We are closing all the zippers between revenue and expenditures and this involved some very heavy breathing in," said Mayo.

Th President and his family had canceled plans to fly to San Clemente yesterday for the remainder of the holiday season in order to work on the budget. They are now expected to depart the White House on Tuesday.

Nixon will spend much of his time at the oceanside villa preparing his State of the Union address which he plans to deliver on Jan. 22.

Stores Have Bad Christmas Sales All Over U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Retail sources reported yesterday that 1969 was one of the poorest Christmas-shopping seasons in recent years. What increases there were in total sales over last year were barely enough to offset the inflationary increase in prices.

Among major cities, New York, Atlanta and Dallas reported the best Christmas sales.

Snow Tuesday and Wednesday slowed the final shopping rush in the Midwest and Northeast.

Poor sales in San Francisco, which had relatively good weather through the Yule season, were blamed on market and economic conditions.

Chicago and some other centers introduced Sunday shopping, but even this intended stimulus failed to push sales much above the 5 to 6 per cent inflationary increase.

Israelis Invade Egypt Army Post

TEL AVIV (AP) — An Israeli commando force supported by aircraft struck an Egyptian army post on the Suez Gulf during the night and returned with four captive Egyptian soldiers, the military command said today.

The Israelis claimed inflicting "several casualties" on the Egyptian defenders. They said one Israeli soldier was slightly wounded.

A spokesman said the raiding force hit Ras Ghareb, an Egyptian army post on the Suez Gulf about 115 miles south of Suez City. The gulf at that point is about 17 miles wide. The Israelis hold the eastern shore.

It was the second land penetration of Egypt by Israel in five days. Last Monday an Israeli command unit hit Safaga more than 100 miles to the south on the Red Sea.

Bel Aire Merchants Staggered By Flood, Mud; Customers Help

By JOANNE GRANT

The recent torrential storm took a disastrous toll in the Bel Aire Shopping Center on the Tiburon Peninsula and businessmen today were still doggedly cleaning up, hoping to salvage a little more merchandise.

The storm did crazy things, sloshing mud and water into strange places.

It produced an unexpected, heartwarming response from customers.

But it may drive some of the merchants away.

One of the hardest hit stores was White's Ace Hardware, where owner George White found a foot of water last Saturday.

When the water receded, he and helpers spent six hours hosing out the worst of the silt. He has spent most of the week cleaning up.

Extensive damage was reported also at Alfie's variety store.

Margie Barnett, who operates the store with her husband, Norman, said they found two feet of water in the front of the store and three feet in the rear when they arrived last Saturday.

"I don't know what we're going to do," said Mrs. Barnett. She said she is hoping it will be declared a disaster area so they will be able to get loans.

Meanwhile, like her fellow merchants, she is trying to clean up. And, she reported, customers have been helping.

One man entered as a customer last Saturday and on surveying the damage went home for rags and returned and pitched in. "He really gave me courage," Mrs. Barnett said.

Other customers brought food ("You'd think there had been a death at our store") and still others came in and bought things "just to be buying, to help," she said.

Elsewhere in the center, a dentist and hairdresser had to cancel appointments because of mud; color television sets were ruined; customers' clothes and shoes at the cleaners and shoe repair shop were damaged.

Most worry it will happen again.

White said two drainage culverts are still silted up.

Damage estimates have not been made as businesses continue to tally losses. However, preliminary guesses put the losses at 30 to 50 per cent of stock, merchants said.

Yule Truce Ends With Big Battle

SAIGON (AP) — The war's post-Christmas lull was shattered today by U.S. forces, who destroyed a large enemy camp near Cambodia in the biggest battle involving American troops since November.

The fighting broke out in a familiar jungle battlefield two miles from Cambodia and 83 miles north of Saigon. It raged for eight hours.

The U.S. Command said 79 North Vietnamese were killed and 40 bunkers smashed. U.S. losses were one killed and one wounded. Most of the deadly work was done by artillery, helicopter gunships and warplanes. South Vietnamese regional forces sent as reinforcements also suffered light casualties, a spokesman said.

The spokesman said it was the biggest battle involving American troops since last Nov. 12-13, when 178 North Vietnamese were killed in heavy fighting just below the demilitarized zone separating the Vietnams. Fifteen Americans were killed and 62 wounded in that engagement.

The action north of Saigon, began about dawn, six hours after a 72-hour Viet Cong cease-fire for Christmas ended.

The fighting was nine miles northwest of the district capital of Loc Ninh, near Highway 13, which leads from North Vietnamese bases inside Cambodia into South Vietnam.

It was around Loc Ninh that allied troops bore the brunt of a mid-August high point kicking off the enemy's fall campaign in South Vietnam.

U.S. officers in the field said the scene of the fighting was far from normal enemy infiltration routes from Cambodia and probably was a jungle rest and staging camp for enemy riflement.

U.S. B52 bombers raided suspected North Vietnamese camps and staging areas near the borders of Laos and Cambodia, flying at least nine missions Friday and early Saturday, the U.S. Command said.

Woman On Mend After Knifing

A Marin City woman was in fair condition at Marin General Hospital after she was knifed early today in her home.

Pauline Moore, 32, of 1 Cole Drive, was placed in the hospital's intensive care unit about 2:30 a.m. suffering from a stab wound just below her heart.

Details were not available, but Marin County sheriff's deputies reported they were seeking Ivory Weeks, 38, no known address, for questioning in connection with the attack. Weeks has been sought also by deputies on a 1967 warrant charging him with battery.

Larkspur Man Hurt In Manzanita Crash

Robert R. Harris, 20, of 6 Acacia Avenue, Larkspur, was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with head cuts suffered in a rear-end auto collision at 12:55 a.m. today on Highway 1 near the Fountain Motel in Manzanita.

California Highway Patrol officers said a car driven by George Jeffrey Dias, 21, of 172 Prince Royal Drive, Corte Madera, hit the rear of one driven by John Frank Marchini, 27, of Nevada, in which Harris was a passenger.

Industries Say Recession Unlikely

NEW YORK (UPI)—America's gross national product will break the $1 trillion barrier in 1970 and there will be no recession, the National Industrial Conference Board predicted yesterday.

NICB said none of the 11 prominent economists participating in its annual economic forum foresees a recession next year.

Chief NICB Economist Martin R. Gainsbrugh, chairman of the panel, said the GNP will increase about 5.7 per cent in 1970, but that only about 2 per cent of that will represent real growth. The balance will be due to inflation.

The GNP rose 7.7 per cent in 1969 and 9.1 per cent in 1968.

Prosecutor Hit As Unethical

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Attorney Vincent Hallinan has accused Alameda County Deputy District Attorney Frank Vukota of unethical conduct and demanded his resignation.

Hallinan made the accusation in the case of black activist Wayne Greene, who was acquitted last month on charges of throwing a firebomb at two Highway Patrolmen during a Berkeley campus disturbance.

Hallinan, who defended Greene, claimed Vukota knew Greene did not throw the firebomb, but prosecuted him anyway. He also charged Vukota tried to supress police records identifying another person as having thrown the bomb.

Hospital Truce; Abernathy Freed

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 12-week strike against St. Joseph Hospital has been called off by union leaders and the union rank and file has voted to return to work Monday morning.

The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy announced the strike's end yesterday on the steps of the Criminal Courts Building. Abernathy, chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and four other ministers were released from jail on $1 bond each.

The strike had been called after the hospital and the State, County and Municipal Employes Union could not agree on what classes of nonprofessional employees should take part in a union representation election. Most of the strikers are Negroes.

Suspect Found Outside Building

An 18-year-old Novato youth was arrested yesterday on suspicion of burglary and car theft after San Rafael police found him hiding next to a building which had just been broken into.

Held in lieu of $10,000 bail was Randall James Race, of 16 Peach Street.

San Rafael police reported they found Race hiding under a service dock at MacPhee Plumbing, 58 Woodland Avenue, about 6:30 a.m.

Race was driving a rental car stolen from the San Francisco Airport, officers said.

The MacPhee Plumbing building had also been broken into on Christmas day, police reported, with the burglar fleeing when officers arrived, leaving behind two cash boxes and a drill. Race has also been charged with this burglary, police said.

Sparks Fly Too Easily For Harry

LONDON (London Express News Service) — Harry Hull has had a run of bad luck. It has left him tired and jumpy. And it has sparked off an old problem.

For Harry, 44, puzzled experts three years ago when he started giving out static electricity — enough to knock over a full-grown man.

It started when he picked up a pen from his office desk and saw a blue flash.

It continued when a friendly dog sniffed his knee and was sent spinning away.

For TV cameras, he wore rubber boots to insulate himself, and registered a staggering 14,400 volts on a voltometer. At one state he could not kiss his wife.

Since then Harry has taken the best advice well-wishers and experts can offer. He keeps his fingernails short. And wears leather shoes.

But now he has only to take off a sweater to get back that old tingling feeling.

Said Harry, a small trucking firm operator: "It all started when I bought a new truck to take on continental work. The truck failed and so did another manufacturers sent me.

"I have lost the $480 a week continental work and I'm near bankruptcy because I've been off the road for most of eight weeks.

"The worry has left me feeling really low — and I'm once again full of static. I could probably light the gas if I wanted to.

"I'm used to leg pulls, so I don't mind that, but on top of all my problems it is no joke to get a jolt while undressing. And I have to take care leaving my truck after travelling on rubber wheels."

Accused Hospital Official Resigns

FREMONT (UPI) — J. Timothy Stone, former president of the board of directors of Washington Township Hospital District, resigned from the board yesterday, 18 days after pleading guilty to embezzling hospital district funds.

Stone pleaded guilty in Alameda County Superior Court Dec. 8 after an audit by fellow directors disclosed that $3,000 in travel funds had been misappropriated.

Stone resigned as president Oct. 1 without giving any indication he was being investigated for suspicion of grand theft. He attributed his resignation to "pressures of personal business."

Three weeks later the voters in southern Alameda County approved a $9.7 million bond issue for the hospital district. Two days later, Cowell announced that Stone had been accused.

Ex-Marinite Hit By Enemy Fire

Army Sp4 Michael B. Lowther, 20, a former Los Ranchitos resident, was wounded in Vietnam on Christmas Day, his father, retired Navy Capt. Robert Lowther of San Francisco, reported.

Young Lowther was wounded in the left hand and head by enemy fire while on patrol with a 25th Infantry Division unit north of Saigon, his father said. The wounds were not considered serious, he explained, but the soldier is hospitalized.

Lowther, a graduate of Terra Linda High School, lived in Marin County until he enlisted in the Army in 1967.

Independent Algerians In School Boom

PARIS — (Toronto News Service) — Seven years after gaining their independence from France, the 13 million Algerians are experiencing a school boom.

Though most of the people of this North African Moslem republic on the Mediterranean are still bitterly poor, practically all the children now go regularly to school.

The revolutionary side of this voracious hunger for reading, writing and arithmetic is that the girls go to school, too.

In a Moslem country this means a big upheaval in traditional behavior. The government brings constant pressure on parents to send not only their sons to school but also their daughters. Parents who do not do so are punished by having their game-shooting and hunting licenses withdrawn.

Gradually the traditional idea of the veiled and "soulless" female is losing ground, and often the fathers will volunteer to help in the building of the local schoolhouse. Although the government of Algeria is a ruthless dictatorship, with strong pro-Maoist and pro-Arab sympathies, it has not basically adopted the policy of guns before butter, but rather, education before butter.

The total number of school children today is reported to be over 2 million of which 700,000 are girls.

Arabic is the language for the first two school years, but from then on teaching is in French and Arabic. The result is that today five times as many Algerian children are learning to speak and write French as before the French left in 1962.

Young Algerians are discovering the French classics, their favorite author apparently being the 17th century playwright Moliere, who had a few pertinent things to say about the emancipation of women.

One French teacher, who has remained in Algeria despite the change, said that in expounding Moliere to a class of boys he was led to explain that girls are just as intelligent as boys.

"Their reaction was violent at first," he said. "But I was able to show them they were arguing in bad faith since the girls at school worked harder and were often more clever than the boys."

The Algerian education minister, Dr. Taleb, explained recently why this very Arab-conscious republic insists on French as a major part of the school curriculum, covering 15 to 20 hours of study a week.

"We have to provide for two basic requirements," he said. "We must rediscover our own civilization, but we must also have a window open on modern technology and science.

"Through Arabic we seek to recover our cultural heritage, just as we have recovered the soil from its former French owners. But French remains a privileged language for us because it provides us with an entry into the modern world."

In the mountainous areas children often walk five or six miles to school, where they are supplied with free milk, and in the poorest areas there is also soup at noon. This, for many, is all the food they get in a day, but their enthusiasm for school seems to be undiminished.

The Algerian budget sets aside 32 per cent of its revenue for education. It is expected that in another 10 years the social picture in Algeria will be unrecognizable by people who only knew Algeria before independence.

This development is expected partly as a result of the great educational drive, but is also closely connected with the oil in the Sahara. The Sahara makes up nine-tenths of Algeria's territory.

New oil cities are springing up, bringing a new kind of life even to the nomad. The children of nomad parents are being placed in boarding schools at the age of six or seven.

There are still a lot of French teachers in Algeria, and no doubt they will continue to be there for another generation at least.

And since independence a flock of young French teachers has arrived in Algeria, many without much previous teaching.

"It is comforting," said one teacher, "to be among children who respect knowledge. Also, we are not pestered by the children's parents."

Old Antarctic Skull Proves Drift Theory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists say a 200-million-year-old reptile skull found in Antarctica proves conclusively the icy south polar land mass was once part of a supercontinent which broke up into drifting fragments.

The discovery, announced Friday by the National Science Foundation, was hailed as "one of the truly great fossil finds of all times."

The foundation said Dr. Laurence M. Gould, a University of Arizona geologist and veteran of antarctic research, relayed news of the discovery Thursday night in a telephone call from Antarctica. Gould is part of a team organized by Ohio State University.

The fossil was described as consiting of parts of the head of a Lystrosaurus, a creature two to four feet long that flourished more than 200 million years ago and was an ancestor of the giant dinosaurs which once dominated life on earth.

The foundation said Gould reported the fossil was found along with many others in a sandstone bed about 400 miles from the South Pole. Its presence, the foundation said, "is very strong evidence of the probability of continental drift" because such creatures could not have migrated "between continental areas across oceanic barriers."

Since similar fossisl hve been uncovered in other parts of the world, scientists believe they can say with certainty Antarctica was once joined to other land masses now widely separated.

"With every passing hour it looks worse," an Air Force spokesman said. "The seas out there are bad, real bad. And it's pitch black and windy."

An Air Force HC130 long-range rescue plane from Honolulu circled the search area through the night dropping flares.

A second merchantman, the German vessel Brunstor, was reported enroute to the scene. The waves in the area were estimated at 20 feet and winds were 40 knots and higher.

Nixon Hints He'll Agree To Tax Change

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Richard M. Nixon, having strongly hinted he intends to sign the tax reform bill, continued to work today on budget problems in an effort to offset the bill's projected $2.5 billion revenue loss for fiscal 1971.

Although he had earlier threatened to veto the reform-relief measure on the grounds it is inflationary, the President indicated yesterday his budget trimming decisions were based on the assumption that the newly-passed tax bill would become law.

The disclosure came when Nixon talked to reporters after meeting for most of the day on the projected budget for 12 months beginning July 1 with budget director Robert May and defense secretary Melvin R. Laird and other aides.

"One of our major problems is we have got to readjust our whole thinking because there is a $2.5 billion shortfall which resulted from the tax bill," the President said.

Nixon told newsmen that the House-Senate Conference Committee had "commendably reduced the loss of revenue" in its compromise version of the bill which Congress approved Monday.

However, he emphasized that the bill still carries a revenue loss $2.5 billion greater than the original administration bill.

Nixon has six more days in which to sign the bill or it will be pocket vetoed.

In discussing the budget, which he hopes to deliver to Congress the final week in January, the President said that defense expenditures would be the smallest percentage of the overall budget since World War II.

Neither Nixon nor Mayo gave any figures, but the new budget is expected to exceed $200 billion for the first time in history, despite the trimming.

"We are closing all the zippers between revenue and expenditures and this involved some very heavy breathing in," said Mayo.

Th President and his family had canceled plans to fly to San Clemente yesterday for the remainder of the holiday season in order to work on the budget. They are now expected to depart the White House on Tuesday.

Nixon will spend much of his time at the oceanside villa preparing his State of the Union address which he plans to deliver on Jan. 22.

Stores Have Bad Christmas Sales All Over U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Retail sources reported yesterday that 1969 was one of the poorest Christmas-shopping seasons in recent years. What increases there were in total sales over last year were barely enough to offset the inflationary increase in prices.

Among major cities, New York, Atlanta and Dallas reported the best Christmas sales.

Snow Tuesday and Wednesday slowed the final shopping rush in the Midwest and Northeast.

Poor sales in San Francisco, which had relatively good weather through the Yule season, were blamed on market and economic conditions.

Chicago and some other centers introduced Sunday shopping, but even this intended stimulus failed to push sales much above the 5 to 6 per cent inflationary increase.

Israelis Invade Egypt Army Post

TEL AVIV (AP) — An Israeli commando force supported by aircraft struck an Egyptian army post on the Suez Gulf during the night and returned with four captive Egyptian soldiers, the military command said today.

The Israelis claimed inflicting "several casualties" on the Egyptian defenders. They said one Israeli soldier was slightly wounded.

A spokesman said the raiding force hit Ras Ghareb, an Egyptian army post on the Suez Gulf about 115 miles south of Suez City. The gulf at that point is about 17 miles wide. The Israelis hold the eastern shore.

It was the second land penetration of Egypt by Israel in five days. Last Monday an Israeli command unit hit Safaga more than 100 miles to the south on the Red Sea.

Bel Aire Merchants Staggered By Flood, Mud; Customers Help

By JOANNE GRANT

The recent torrential storm took a disastrous toll in the Bel Aire Shopping Center on the Tiburon Peninsula and businessmen today were still doggedly cleaning up, hoping to salvage a little more merchandise.

The storm did crazy things, sloshing mud and water into strange places.

It produced an unexpected, heartwarming response from customers.

But it may drive some of the merchants away.

One of the hardest hit stores was White's Ace Hardware, where owner George White found a foot of water last Saturday.

When the water receded, he and helpers spent six hours hosing out the worst of the silt. He has spent most of the week cleaning up.

Extensive damage was reported also at Alfie's variety store.

Margie Barnett, who operates the store with her husband, Norman, said they found two feet of water in the front of the store and three feet in the rear when they arrived last Saturday.

"I don't know what we're going to do," said Mrs. Barnett. She said she is hoping it will be declared a disaster area so they will be able to get loans.

Meanwhile, like her fellow merchants, she is trying to clean up. And, she reported, customers have been helping.

One man entered as a customer last Saturday and on surveying the damage went home for rags and returned and pitched in. "He really gave me courage," Mrs. Barnett said.

Other customers brought food ("You'd think there had been a death at our store") and still others came in and bought things "just to be buying, to help," she said.

Elsewhere in the center, a dentist and hairdresser had to cancel appointments because of mud; color television sets were ruined; customers' clothes and shoes at the cleaners and shoe repair shop were damaged.

Most worry it will happen again.

White said two drainage culverts are still silted up.

Damage estimates have not been made as businesses continue to tally losses. However, preliminary guesses put the losses at 30 to 50 per cent of stock, merchants said.

Yule Truce Ends With Big Battle

SAIGON (AP) — The war's post-Christmas lull was shattered today by U.S. forces, who destroyed a large enemy camp near Cambodia in the biggest battle involving American troops since November.

The fighting broke out in a familiar jungle battlefield two miles from Cambodia and 83 miles north of Saigon. It raged for eight hours.

The U.S. Command said 79 North Vietnamese were killed and 40 bunkers smashed. U.S. losses were one killed and one wounded. Most of the deadly work was done by artillery, helicopter gunships and warplanes. South Vietnamese regional forces sent as reinforcements also suffered light casualties, a spokesman said.

The spokesman said it was the biggest battle involving American troops since last Nov. 12-13, when 178 North Vietnamese were killed in heavy fighting just below the demilitarized zone separating the Vietnams. Fifteen Americans were killed and 62 wounded in that engagement.

The action north of Saigon, began about dawn, six hours after a 72-hour Viet Cong ceasefire for Christmas ended.

The fighting was nine miles northwest of the district capital of Loc Ninh, near Highway 13, which leads from North Vietnamese bases inside Cambodia into South Vietnam.

It was around Loc Ninh that allied troops bore the brunt of a mid-August high point kicking off the enemy's fall campaign in South Vietnam.

U.S. officers in the field said the scene of the fighting was far from normal enemy infiltration routes from Cambodia and probably was a jungle rest and staging camp for enemy riflement.

U.S. B52 bombers raided suspected North Vietnamese camps and staging areas near the borders of Laos and Cambodia, flying at least nine missions Friday and early Saturday, the U.S. Command said.

Woman On Mend After Knifing

A Marin City woman was in fair condition at Marin General Hospital after she was knifed early today in her home.

Pauline Moore, 32, of 1 Cole Drive, was placed in the hospital's intensive care unit about 2:30 a.m. suffering from a stab wound just below her heart.

Details were not available, but Marin County sheriff's deputies reported they were seeking Ivory Weeks, 38, no known address, for questioning in connection with the attack. Weeks has been sought also by deputies on a 1967 warrant charging him with battery.

Larkspur Man Hurt In Manzanita Crash

Robert R. Harris, 20, of 6 Acacia Avenue, Larkspur, was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with head cuts suffered in a rear-end auto collision at 12:55 a.m. today on Highway 1 near the Fountain Motel in Manzanita.

California Highway Patrol officers said a car driven by George Jeffrey Dias, 21, of 172 Prince Royal Drive, Corte Madera, hit the rear of one driven by John Frank Marchini, 27, of Nevada, in which Harris was a passenger.

Industries Say Recession Unlikely

NEW YORK (UPI)—America's gross national product will break the $1 trillion barrier in 1970 and there will be no recession, the National Industrial Conference Board predicted yesterday.

NICB said none of the 11 prominent economists participating in its annual economic forum foresees a recession next year.

Chief NICB Economist Martin R. Gainsbrugh, chairman of the panel, said the GNP will increase about 5.7 per cent in 1970, but that only about 2 per cent of that will represent real growth. The balance will be due to inflation.

The GNP rose 7.7 per cent in 1969 and 9.1 per cent in 1968.

Prosecutor Hit As Unethical

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Attorney Vincent Hallinan has accused Alameda County Deputy District Attorney Frank Vukota of unethical conduct and demanded his resignation.

Hallinan made the accusation in the case of black activist Wayne Greene, who was acquitted last month on charges of throwing a firebomb at two Highway Patrolmen during a Berkeley campus disturbance.

Hallinan, who defended Greene, claimed Vukota knew Greene did not throw the firebomb, but prosecuted him anyway. He also charged Vukota tried to supress police records identifying another person as having thrown the bomb.

Hospital Truce; Abernathy Freed

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 12-week strike against St. Joseph Hospital has been called off by union leaders and the union rank and file has voted to return to work Monday morning.

The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy announced the strike's end yesterday on the steps of the Criminal Courts Building. Abernathy, chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and four other ministers were released from jail on $1 bond each.

The strike had been called after the hospital and the State, County and Municipal Employes Union could not agree on what classes of nonprofessional employees should take part in a union representation election. Most of the strikers are Negroes.

Suspect Found Outside Building

An 18-year-old Novato youth was arrested yesterday on suspicion of burglary and car theft after San Rafael police found him hiding next to a building which had just been broken into.

Held in lieu of $10,000 bail was Randall James Race, of 16 Peach Street.

San Rafael police reported they found Race hiding under a service dock at MacPhee Plumbing, 58 Woodland Avenue, about 6:30 a.m.

Race was driving a rental car stolen from the San Francisco Airport, officers said.

The MacPhee Plumbing building had also been broken into on Christmas day, police reported, with the burglar fleeing when officers arrived, leaving behind two cash boxes and a drill. Race has also been charged with this burglary, police said.

Sparks Fly Too Easily For Harry

LONDON (London Express News Service) — Harry Hull has had a run of bad luck. It has left him tired and jumpy. And it has sparked off an old problem.

For Harry, 44, puzzled experts three years ago when he started giving out static electricity — enough to knock over a full-grown man.

It started when he picked up a pen from his office desk and saw a blue flash.

It continued when a friendly dog sniffed his knee and was sent spinning away.

For TV cameras, he wore rubber boots to insulate himself, and registered a staggering 14,400 volts on a voltometer. At one state he could not kiss his wife.

Since then Harry has taken the best advice well-wishers and experts can offer. He keeps his fingernails short. And wears leather shoes.

But now he has only to take off a sweater to get back that old tingling feeling.

Said Harry, a small trucking firm operator: "It all started when I bought a new truck to take on continental work. The truck failed and so did another manufacturers sent me.

"I have lost the $480 a week continental work and I'm near bankruptcy because I've been off the road for most of eight weeks.

"The worry has left me feeling really low — and I'm once again full of static. I could probably light the gas if I wanted to.

"I'm used to leg pulls, so I don't mind that, but on top of all my problems it is no joke to get a jolt while undressing. And I have to take care leaving my truck after travelling on rubber wheels."

Accused Hospital Official Resigns

FREMONT (UPI) — J. Timothy Stone, former president of the board of directors of Washington Township Hospital District, resigned from the board yesterday, 18 days after pleading guilty to embezzling hospital district funds.

Stone pleaded guilty in Alameda County Superior Court Dec. 8 after an audit by fellow directors disclosed that $3,000 in travel funds had been misappropriated.

Stone resigned as president Oct. 1 without giving any indication he was being investigated for suspicion of grand theft. He attributed his resignation to "pressures of personal business."

Three weeks later the voters in southern Alameda County approved a $9.7 million bond issue for the hospital district. Two days later, Cowell announced that Stone had been accused.

Ex-Marinite Hit By Enemy Fire

Army Sp4 Michael B. Lowther, 20, a former Los Ranchitos resident, was wounded in Vietnam on Christmas Day, his father, retired Navy Capt. Robert Lowther of San Francisco, reported.

Young Lowther was wounded in the left hand and head by enemy fire while on patrol with a 25th Infantry Division unit north of Saigon, his father said. The wounds were not considered serious, he explained, but the soldier is hospitalized.

Lowther, a graduate of Terra Linda High School, lived in Marin County until he enlisted in the Army in 1967.

Independent Algerians In School Boom

PARIS — (Toronto News Service) — Seven years after gaining their independence from France, the 13 million Algerians are experiencing a school boom.

Though most of the people of this North African Moslem republic on the Mediterranean are still bitterly poor, practically all the children now go regularly to school.

The revolutionary side of this voracious hunger for reading, writing and arithmetic is that the girls go to school, too.

In a Moslem country this means a big upheaval in traditional behavior. The government brings constant pressure on parents to send not only their sons to school but also their daughters. Parents who do not do so are punished by having their game-shooting and hunting licenses withdrawn.

Gradually the traditional idea of the veiled and "soulless" female is losing ground, and often the fathers will volunteer to help in the building of the local schoolhouse. Although the government of Algeria is a ruthless dictatorship, with strong pro-Maoist and pro-Arab sympathies, it has not basically adopted the policy of guns before butter, but rather, education before butter.

The total number of school children today is reported to be over 2 million of which 700,000 are girls.

Arabic is the language for the first two school years, but from then on teaching is in French and Arabic. The result is that today five times as many Algerian children are learning to speak and write French as before the French left in 1962.

Young Algerians are discovering the French classics, their favorite author apparently being the 17th century playwright Moliere, who had a few pertinent things to say about the emancipation of women.

One French teacher, who has remained in Algeria despite the change, said that in expounding Moliere to a class of boys he was led to explain that girls are just as intelligent as boys.

"Their reaction was violent at first," he said. "But I was able to show them they were arguing in bad faith since the girls at school worked harder and were often more clever than the boys."

The Algerian education minister, Dr. Taleb, explained recently why this very Arab-conscious republic insists on French as a major part of the school curriculum, covering 15 to 20 hours of study a week.

"We have to provide for two basic requirements," he said. "We must rediscover our own civilization, but we must also have a window open on modern technology and science.

"Through Arabic we seek to recover our cultural heritage, just as we have recovered the soil from its former French owners. But French remains a privileged language for us because it provides us with an entry into the modern world."

In the mountainous areas children often walk five or six miles to school, where they are supplied with free milk, and in the poorest areas there is also soup at noon. This, for many, is all the food they get in a day, but their enthusiasm for school seems to be undiminished.

The Algerian budget sets aside 32 per cent of its revenue for education. It is expected that in another 10 years the social picture in Algeria will be unrecognizable by people who only knew Algeria before independence.

This development is expected partly as a result of the great educational drive, but is also closely connected with the oil in the Sahara. The Sahara makes up nine-tenths of Algeria's territory.

New oil cities are springing up, bringing a new kind of life even to the nomad. The children of nomad parents are being placed in boarding schools at the age of six or seven.

There are still a lot of French teachers in Algeria, and no doubt they will continue to be there for another generation at least.

And since independence a flock of young French teachers has arrived in Algeria, many without much previous teaching.

"It is comforting," said one teacher, "to be among children who respect knowledge. Also, we are not pestered by the children's parents."

Old Antarctic Skull Proves Drift Theory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists say a 200-million-year-old reptile skull found in Antarctica proves conclusively the icy south polar land mass was once part of a supercontinent which broke up into drifting fragments.

The discovery, announced Friday by the National Science Foundation, was hailed as "one of the truly great fossil finds of all times."

The foundation said Dr. Laurence M. Gould, a University of Arizona geologist and veteran of antarctic research, relayed news of the discovery Thursday night in a telephone call from Antarctica. Gould is part of a team organized by Ohio State University.

The fossil was described as consiting of parts of the head of a Lystrosaurus, a creature two to four feet long that flourished more than 200 million years ago and was an ancestor of the giant dinosaurs which once dominated life on earth.

The foundation said Gould reported the fossil was found along with many others in a sandstone bed about 400 miles from the South Pole. Its presence, the foundation said, "is very strong evidence of the probability of continental drift" because such creatures could not have migrated "between continental areas across oceanic barriers."

Since similar fossisl hve been uncovered in other parts of the world, scientists believe they can say with certainty Antarctica was once joined to other land masses now widely separated.

"With every passing hour it looks worse," an Air Force spokesman said. "The seas out there are bad, real bad. And it's pitch black and windy."

An Air Force HC130 long-range rescue plane from Honolulu circled the search area through the night dropping flares.

A second merchantman, the German vessel Brunstor, was reported enroute to the scene.

The waves in the area were estimated at 20 feet and winds were 40 knots and higher.

Nixon Hints He'll Agree To Tax Change

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Richard M. Nixon, having strongly hinted he intends to sign the tax reform bill, continued to work today on budget problems in an effort to offset the bill's projected $2.5 billion revenue loss for fiscal 1971.

Although he had earlier threatened to veto the reform-relief measure on the grounds it is inflationary, the President indicated yesterday his budget trimming decisions were based on the assumption that the newly-passed tax bill would become law.

The disclosure came when Nixon talked to reporters after meeting for most of the day on the projected budget for 12 months beginning July 1 with budget director Robert May and defense secretary Melvin R. Laird and other aides.

"One of our major problems is we have got to readjust our whole thinking because there is a $2.5 billion shortfall which resulted from the tax bill," the President said.

Nixon told newsmen that the House-Senate Conference Committee had "commendably reduced the loss of revenue" in its compromise version of the bill which Congress approved Monday.

However, he emphasized that the bill still carries a revenue loss $2.5 billion greater than the original administration bill.

Nixon has six more days in which to sign the bill or it will be pocket vetoed.

In discussing the budget, which he hopes to deliver to Congress the final week in January, the President said that defense expenditures would be the smallest percentage of the overall budget since World War II.

Neither Nixon nor Mayo gave any figures, but the new budget is expected to exceed $200 billion for the first time in history, despite the trimming.

"We are closing all the zippers between revenue and expenditures and this involved some very heavy breathing in," said Mayo.

Th President and his family had canceled plans to fly to San Clemente yesterday for the remainder of the holiday season in order to work on the budget. They are now expected to depart the White House on Tuesday.

Nixon will spend much of his time at the oceanside villa preparing his State of the Union address which he plans to deliver on Jan. 22.

Stores Have Bad Christmas Sales All Over U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Retail sources reported yesterday that 1969 was one of the poorest Christmas-shopping seasons in recent years. What increases there were in total sales over last year were barely enough to offset the inflationary increase in prices.

Among major cities, New York, Atlanta and Dallas reported the best Christmas sales.

Snow Tuesday and Wednesday slowed the final shopping rush in the Midwest and Northeast.

Poor sales in San Francisco, which had relatively good weather through the Yule season, were blamed on market and economic conditions.

Chicago and some other centers introduced Sunday shopping, but even this intended stimulus failed to push sales much above the 5 to 6 per cent inflationary increase.

Israelis Invade Egypt Army Post

TEL AVIV (AP) — An Israeli commando force supported by aircraft struck an Egyptian army post on the Suez Gulf during the night and returned with four captive Egyptian soldiers, the military command said today.

The Israelis claimed inflicting "several casualties" on the Egyptian defenders. They said one Israeli soldier was slightly wounded.

A spokesman said the raiding force hit Ras Ghareb, an Egyptian army post on the Suez Gulf about 115 miles south of Suez City. The gulf at that point is about 17 miles wide. The Israelis hold the eastern shore.

It was the second land penetration of Egypt by Israel in five days. Last Monday an Israeli command unit hit Safaga more than 100 miles to the south on the Red Sea.

Bel Aire Merchants Staggered By Flood, Mud; Customers Help

By JOANNE GRANT

The recent torrential storm took a disastrous toll in the Bel Aire Shopping Center on the Tiburon Peninsula and businessmen today were still doggedly cleaning up, hoping to salvage a little more merchandise.

The storm did crazy things, sloshing mud and water into strange places.

It produced an unexpected, heartwarming response from customers.

But it may drive some of the merchants away.

One of the hardest hit stores was White's Ace Hardware, where owner George White found a foot of water last Saturday.

When the water receded, he and helpers spent six hours hosing out the worst of the silt. He has spent most of the week cleaning up.

Extensive damage was reported also at Alfie's variety store.

Margie Barnett, who operates the store with her husband, Norman, said they found two feet of water in the front of the store and three feet in the rear when they arrived last Saturday.

"I don't know what we're going to do," said Mrs. Barnett. She said she is hoping it will be declared a disaster area so they will be able to get loans.

Meanwhile, like her fellow merchants, she is trying to clean up. And, she reported, customers have been helping.

One man entered as a customer last Saturday and on surveying the damage went home for rags and returned and pitched in. "He really gave me courage," Mrs. Barnett said.

Other customers brought food ("You'd think there had been a death at our store") and still others came in and bought things "just to be buying, to help," she said.

Elsewhere in the center, a dentist and hairdresser had to cancel appointments because of mud; color television sets were ruined; customers' clothes and shoes at the cleaners and shoe repair shop were damaged.

Most worry it will happen again.

White said two drainage culverts are still silted up.

Damage estimates have not been made as businesses continue to tally losses. However, preliminary guesses put the losses at 30 to 50 per cent of stock, merchants said.

Yule Truce Ends With Big Battle

SAIGON (AP) — The war's post-Christmas lull was shattered today by U.S. forces, who destroyed a large enemy camp near Cambodia in the biggest battle involving American troops since November.

The fighting broke out in a familiar jungle battlefield two miles from Cambodia and 83 miles north of Saigon. It raged for eight hours.

The U.S. Command said 79 North Vietnamese were killed and 40 bunkers smashed. U.S. losses were one killed and one wounded. Most of the deadly work was done by artillery, helicopter gunships and warplanes. South Vietnamese regional forces sent as reinforcements also suffered light casualties, a spokesman said.

The spokesman said it was the biggest battle involving American troops since last Nov. 12-13, when 178 North Vietnamese were killed in heavy fighting just below the demilitarized zone separating the Vietnams. Fifteen Americans were killed and 62 wounded in that engagement.

The action north of Saigon, began about dawn, six hours after a 72-hour Viet Cong cease-fire for Christmas ended.

The fighting was nine miles northwest of the district capital of Loc Ninh, near Highway 13, which leads from North Vietnamese bases inside Cambodia into South Vietnam.

It was around Loc Ninh that allied troops bore the brunt of a mid-August high point kicking off the enemy's fall campaign in South Vietnam.

U.S. officers in the field said the scene of the fighting was far from normal enemy infiltration routes from Cambodia and probably was a jungle rest and staging camp for enemy riflement.

U.S. B52 bombers raided suspected North Vietnamese camps and staging areas near the borders of Laos and Cambodia, flying at least nine missions Friday and early Saturday, the U.S. Command said.

Woman On Mend After Knifing

A Marin City woman was in fair condition at Marin General Hospital after she was knifed early today in her home.

Pauline Moore, 32, of 1 Cole Drive, was placed in the hospital's intensive care unit about 2:30 a.m. suffering from a stab wound just below her heart.

Details were not available, but Marin County sheriff's deputies reported they were seeking Ivory Weeks, 38, no known address, for questioning in connection with the attack. Weeks has been sought also by deputies on a 1967 warrant charging him with battery.

Larkspur Man Hurt In Manzanita Crash

Robert R. Harris, 20, of 6 Acacia Avenue, Larkspur, was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with head cuts suffered in a rear-end auto collision at 12:55 a.m. today on Highway 1 near the Fountain Motel in Manzanita.

California Highway Patrol officers said a car driven by George Jeffrey Dias, 21, of 172 Prince Royal Drive, Corte Madera, hit the rear of one driven by John Frank Marchini, 27, of Nevada, in which Harris was a passenger.

Industries Say Recession Unlikely

NEW YORK (UPI)—America's gross national product will break the $1 trillion barrier in 1970 and there will be no recession, the National Industrial Conference Board predicted yesterday.

NICB said none of the 11 prominent economists participating in its annual economic forum foresees a recession next year.

Chief NICB Economist Martin R. Gainsbrugh, chairman of the panel, said the GNP will increase about 5.7 per cent in 1970, but that only about 2 per cent of that will represent real growth. The balance will be due to inflation.

The GNP rose 7.7 per cent in 1969 and 9.1 per cent in 1968.

Prosecutor Hit As Unethical

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Attorney Vincent Hallinan has accused Alameda County Deputy District Attorney Frank Vukota of unethical conduct and demanded his resignation.

Hallinan made the accusation in the case of black activist Wayne Greene, who was acquitted last month on charges of throwing a firebomb at two Highway Patrolmen during a Berkeley campus disturbance.

Hallinan, who defended Greene, claimed Vukota knew Greene did not throw the firebomb, but prosecuted him anyway. He also charged Vukota tried to supress police records identifying another person as having thrown the bomb.

Hospital Truce; Abernathy Freed

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 12-week strike against St. Joseph Hospital has been called off by union leaders and the union rank and file has voted to return to work Monday morning.

The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy announced the strike's end yesterday on the steps of the Criminal Courts Building. Abernathy, chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and four other ministers were released from jail on $1 bond each.

The strike had been called after the hospital and the State, County and Municipal Employes Union could not agree on what classes of nonprofessional employees should take part in a union representation election. Most of the strikers are Negroes.

Suspect Found Outside Building

An 18-year-old Novato youth was arrested yesterday on suspicion of burglary and car theft after San Rafael police found him hiding next to a building which had just been broken into.

Held in lieu of $10,000 bail was Randall James Race, of 16 Peach Street.

San Rafael police reported they found Race hiding under a service dock at MacPhee Plumbing, 58 Woodland Avenue, about 6:30 a.m.

Race was driving a rental car stolen from the San Francisco Airport, officers said.

The MacPhee Plumbing building had also been broken into on Christmas day, police reported, with the burglar fleeing when officers arrived, leaving behind two cash boxes and a drill. Race has also been charged with this burglary, police said.

Sparks Fly Too Easily For Harry

LONDON (London Express News Service) — Harry Hull has had a run of bad luck. It has left him tired and jumpy. And it has sparked off an old problem.

For Harry, 44, puzzled experts three years ago when he started giving out static electricity — enough to knock over a full-grown man.

It started when he picked up a pen from his office desk and saw a blue flash.

It continued when a friendly dog sniffed his knee and was sent spinning away.

For TV cameras, he wore rubber boots to insulate himself, and registered a staggering 14,400 volts on a voltometer. At one state he could not kiss his wife.

Since then Harry has taken the best advice well-wishers and experts can offer. He keeps his fingernails short. And wears leather shoes.

But now he has only to take off a sweater to get back that old tingling feeling.

Said Harry, a small trucking firm operator: "It all started when I bought a new truck to take on continental work. The truck failed and so did another manufacturers sent me.

"I have lost the $480 a week continental work and I'm near bankruptcy because I've been off the road for most of eight weeks.

"The worry has left me feeling really low — and I'm once again full of static. I could probably light the gas if I wanted to.

"I'm used to leg pulls, so I don't mind that, but on top of all my problems it is no joke to get a jolt while undressing. And I have to take care leaving my truck after travelling on rubber wheels."

Accused Hospital Official Resigns

FREMONT (UPI) — J. Timothy Stone, former president of the board of directors of Washington Township Hospital District, resigned from the board yesterday, 18 days after pleading guilty to embezzling hospital district funds.

Stone pleaded guilty in Alameda County Superior Court Dec. 8 after an audit by fellow directors disclosed that $3,000 in travel funds had been misappropriated.

Stone resigned as president Oct. 1 without giving any indication he was being investigated for suspicion of grand theft. He attributed his resignation to "pressures of personal business."

Three weeks later the voters in southern Alameda County approved a $9.7 million bond issue for the hospital district. Two days later, Cowell announced that Stone had been accused.

Ex-Marinite Hit By Enemy Fire

Army Sp4 Michael B. Lowther, 20, a former Los Ranchitos resident, was wounded in Vietnam on Christmas Day, his father, retired Navy Capt. Robert Lowther of San Francisco, reported.

Young Lowther was wounded in the left hand and head by enemy fire while on patrol with a 25th Infantry Division unit north of Saigon, his father said. The wounds were not considered serious, he explained, but the soldier is hospitalized.

Lowther, a graduate of Terra Linda High School, lived in Marin County until he enlisted in the Army in 1967.

Independent Algerians In School Boom

PARIS — (Toronto News Service) — Seven years after gaining their independence from France, the 13 million Algerians are experiencing a school boom.

Though most of the people of this North African Moslem republic on the Mediterranean are still bitterly poor, practically all the children now go regularly to school.

The revolutionary side of this voracious hunger for reading, writing and arithmetic is that the girls go to school, too.

In a Moslem country this means a big upheaval in traditional behavior. The government brings constant pressure on parents to send not only their sons to school but also their daughters. Parents who do not do so are punished by having their game-shooting and hunting licenses withdrawn.

Gradually the traditional idea of the veiled and "soulless" female is losing ground, and often the fathers will volunteer to help in the building of the local schoolhouse. Although the government of Algeria is a ruthless dictatorship, with strong pro-Maoist and pro-Arab sympathies, it has not basically adopted the policy of guns before butter, but rather, education before butter.

The total number of school children today is reported to be over 2 million of which 700,000 are girls.

Arabic is the language for the first two school years, but from then on teaching is in French and Arabic. The result is that today five times as many Algerian children are learning to speak and write French as before the French left in 1962.

Young Algerians are discovering the French classics, their favorite author apparently being the 17th century playwright Moliere, who had a few pertinent things to say about the emancipation of women.

One French teacher, who has remained in Algeria despite the change, said that in expounding Moliere to a class of boys he was led to explain that girls are just as intelligent as boys.

"Their reaction was violent at first," he said. "But I was able to show them they were arguing in bad faith since the girls at school worked harder and were often more clever than the boys."

The Algerian education minister, Dr. Taleb, explained recently why this very Arab-conscious republic insists on French as a major part of the school curriculum, covering 15 to 20 hours of study a week.

"We have to provide for two basic requirements," he said. "We must rediscover our own civilization, but we must also have a window open on modern technology and science.

"Through Arabic we seek to recover our cultural heritage, just as we have recovered the soil from its former French owners. But French remains a privileged language for us because it provides us with an entry into the modern world."

In the mountainous areas children often walk five or six miles to school, where they are supplied with free milk, and in the poorest areas there is also soup at noon. This, for many, is all the food they get in a day, but their enthusiasm for school seems to be undiminished.

The Algerian budget sets aside 32 per cent of its revenue for education. It is expected that in another 10 years the social picture in Algeria will be unrecognizable by people who only knew Algeria before independence.

This development is expected partly as a result of the great educational drive, but is also closely connected with the oil in the Sahara. The Sahara makes up nine-tenths of Algeria's territory.

New oil cities are springing up, bringing a new kind of life even to the nomad. The children of nomad parents are being placed in boarding schools at the age of six or seven.

There are still a lot of French teachers in Algeria, and no doubt they will continue to be there for another generation at least.

And since independence a flock of young French teachers has arrived in Algeria, many without much previous teaching.

"It is comforting," said one teacher, "to be among children who respect knowledge. Also, we are not pestered by the children's parents."

Old Antarctic Skull Proves Drift Theory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists say a 200-million-year-old reptile skull found in Antarctica proves conclusively the icy south polar land mass was once part of a supercontinent which broke up into drifting fragments.

The discovery, announced Friday by the National Science Foundation, was hailed as "one of the truly great fossil finds of all times."

The foundation said Dr. Laurence M. Gould, a University of Arizona geologist and veteran of antarctic research, relayed news of the discovery Thursday night in a telephone call from Antarctica. Gould is part of a team organized by Ohio State University.

The fossil was described as consiting of parts of the head of a Lystrosaurus, a creature two to four feet long that flourished more than 200 million years ago and was an ancestor of the giant dinosaurs which once dominated life on earth.

The foundation said Gould reported the fossil was found along with many others in a sandstone bed about 400 miles from the South Pole. Its presence, the foundation said, "is very strong evidence of the probability of continental drift" because such creatures could not have migrated "between continental areas across oceanic barriers."

Since similar fossisl hve been uncovered in other parts of the world, scientists believe they can say with certainty Antarctica was once joined to other land masses now widely separated.

"With every passing hour it looks worse," an Air Force spokesman said. "The seas out there are bad, real bad. And it's pitch black and windy."

An Air Force HC130 long-range rescue plane from Honolulu circled the search area through the night dropping flares.

A second merchantman, the German vessel Brunstor, was reported enroute to the scene.

The waves in the area were estimated at 20 feet and winds were 40 knots and higher.

Cigarettes Stolen

A burglar who entered through the roof took three cartons of cigarettes from the 7-11 Store on North San Pedro Road, Santa Venetia, sometime late Tuesday or early Wednesday, sheriff's deputies have reported.

Alfa Romeo
Spider Veloce.

Be a sport.

That's at least one thousand dollars less than any car in an Alfa Romeo's class.

And what a class.

This year, Alfa's 1750 Spider Veloce has a larger, more powerful twin-overhead-cam engine. It turns out 132 hp. And at 90 mph about half its power is still in reserve.

The 1750 Spider now also has a new race-proven fuel injection system. A system that improves performance and saves gas. And it's standard.

What else is new?

New pressure-equalized disc brakes on all four wheels. Which means you're going to stop like you never stopped before.

And of course you still get five forward speeds, fully synchronized. And wide-tread, high-performance premium radial-ply tires on all four wheels.

All this, and a beautiful Italian body, for $4248 POE.

That's Alfa's 1750 Spider Veloce.
What are you waiting for, sport?

Plays Scheduled At Tomorrow's Morning Rites

Two plays will be presented tomorrow at the United Methodist Church of Novato by the Methodist Actors Serving the Church.

"Tears and Candlesticks" will be presented at the 8:30 a.m. service.

The play tells the story of all mankind — of fear, hate, greed and finally love.

"Andante" will be presented at the 10:55 a.m. service. It tells of the struggle of a great violinist who became bitter and cynical after suffering a severe injury to his left hand.

The troup of Methodist actors last summer toured the western states giving 22 performances in 14 days. Nancy Hamilton, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Leo W. Hamilton of the Novato church, is a member of the troup.

Driver Sustains Injury To Shoulder

Sheri Ann Dodson, 20, of 27 Woodland Avenue, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital Thursday for a bruised shoulder after her car skidded, knocked down a parking sign, hit a car sales building and came to rest in a center island on Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael police reported.

Mrs. Dodson was cited for driving without a license in her possession. Police said the accident occurred at 12:15 a.m. when her car slid on a turn and crashed into Marin Bay Lincoln Mercury at Third Street and Lincoln Avenue.

Minor Injuries To Driver In Accident

Rustin D. Bingham, 28, of 25B Circle Drive, Tiburon, was treated for a cut scalp Thursday at Marin General Hospital after the car he was riding in hit a tree at 1:49 a.m. on Glenwood Avenue, Ross police reported.

The car was driven by David J. Deneen of Inglewood, Los Angeles County, police said, and left the road on a sharp turn.

Cash Stolen

About $60 was stolen Thursday from the room of Irene E. Teeter at the Carmel Hotel, 830 B Street, San Rafael, police reported.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Stroke Victim With Aphasia May Lose More Than Speech

VAN DELLEN

M.L. writes: My husband just returned home after being hospitalized for a stroke. His speech is garbled and it is hard to understand him. When the family cannot make out what he is saying, he cries. Is this unusual or to be expected? Will he improve?

Strokes may affect language in two ways. There may be impairment or paralysis of the organs of speech (dysarthria) including an inability to control breathing in order to enunciate clearly.

APHASIA, THE SECOND and more common cause, stems from damage to the brain center that controls all language functions. The victim converses with difficulty and in blurred tones, if he can speak at all.

Others may lose the ability to read, write, understand other people, count, spell, tell time, or recognize familiar objects. Aphasia varies in severity and is best treated by a speech therapist in a rehabilitation center.

VARIOUS PERSONALITY changes may occur. But because of the brain damage the victim has no control over his emotions. Crying is common; so are anger and frustration. Partial recovery may take place from six months to a year after the stroke, but better progress is made with speech therapy. There is always hope even tho years elapse before treatment is started.

THE FAMILY CAN HELP by giving tender, loving care. Avoid ridicule and criticism. The smallest gain must be accepted as a step forward. A helpful home tool is the Aphasia Rehabilitation Manual and Therapy Kit (Martha L. Taylor and Morton Marks, M.D., Saxon Press, New York). This manual consists of a 100 basic noun vocabulary, picture and word cards for each noun, and considerable basic information on the subject.

The aim of the speech therapist is to teach the individual terms he already knows; new words are avoided.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

HALOS AROUND LIGHTS

Mrs. D.A. writes: I consulted an eye specialist because I was seeing halos around street lights. He said this phenomenon does not necessarily indicate glaucoma. Please comment.

REPLY

This is true, but a test for glaucoma is indicated when this symptom occurs. I assume the specialist you consulted is a physician (ophthalmologist) capable of doing adequate tests.

FAT DETERMINES WRINKLING

Mrs. C.N. writes: My baby was not wrinkled when he was born. Is this because I had a caesarean birth?

REPLY

No. The ampunt of fat under the skin determines the extent of wrinkling. This never presents a problem, however, as the wrinkles disappear soon after the baby takes nourishment and fills out.

TOXEMIA OF PREGNANCY

Y.A. writes: Does the toxemia of pregnancy affect the kidneys?

REPLY

Yes, in that albumin appears in the urine, blood pressure increases, and the tissues become waterlogged. A woman with kidney disease may also develop toxemia after she gets pregnant.

CORN FORMERS

S.W. writes: Why are some people plagued by corns and others never bothered?

REPLY

The person with corns does not know how to walk properly or is buying shoes that do not fit. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on corns and calluses.

Plays Scheduled At Tomorrow's Morning Rites

Two plays will be presented tomorrow at the United Methodist Church of Novato by the Methodist Actors Serving the Church.

"Tears and Candlesticks" will be presented at the 8:30 a.m. service.

The play tells the story of all mankind — of fear, hate, greed and finally love.

"Andante" will be presented at the 10:55 a.m. service. It tells of the struggle of a great violinist who became bitter and cynical after suffering a severe injury to his left hand.

The troup of Methodist actors last summer toured the western states giving 22 performances in 14 days. Nancy Hamilton, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Leo W. Hamilton of the Novato church, is a member of the troup.

Driver Sustains Injury To Shoulder

Sheri Ann Dodson, 20, of 27 Woodland Avenue, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital Thursday for a bruised shoulder after her car skidded, knocked down a parking sign, hit a car sales building and came to rest in a center island on Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael police reported.

Mrs. Dodson was cited for driving without a license in her possession. Police said the accident occurred at 12:15 a.m. when her car slid on a turn and crashed into Marin Bay Lincoln Mercury at Third Street and Lincoln Avenue.

Minor Injuries To Driver In Accident

Rustin D. Bingham, 28, of 25B Circle Drive, Tiburon, was treated for a cut scalp Thursday at Marin General Hospital after the car he was riding in hit a tree at 1:49 a.m. on Glenwood Avenue, Ross police reported.

The car was driven by David J. Deneen of Inglewood, Los Angeles County, police said, and left the road on a sharp turn.

Cash Stolen

About $60 was stolen Thursday from the room of Irene E. Teeter at the Carmel Hotel, 830 B Street, San Rafael, police reported.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Stroke Victim With Aphasia May Lose More Than Speech

VAN DELLEN

M.L. writes: My husband just returned home after being hospitalized for a stroke. His speech is garbled and it is hard to understand him. When the family cannot make out what he is saying, he cries. Is this unusual or to be expected? Will he improve?

Strokes may affect language in two ways. There may be impairment or paralysis of the organs of speech (dysarthria) including an inability to control breathing in order to enunciate clearly.

APHASIA, THE SECOND and more common cause, stems from damage to the brain center that controls all language functions. The victim converses with difficulty and in blurred tones, if he can speak at all.

Others may lose the ability to read, write, understand other people, count, spell, tell time, or recognize familiar objects. Aphasia varies in severity and is best treated by a speech therapist in a rehabilitation center.

VARIOUS PERSONALITY changes may occur. But because of the brain damage the victim has no control over his emotions. Crying is common; so are anger and frustration. Partial recovery may take place from six months to a year after the stroke, but better progress is made with speech therapy. There is always hope even tho years elapse before treatment is started.

THE FAMILY CAN HELP by giving tender, loving care. Avoid ridicule and criticism. The smallest gain must be accepted as a step forward. A helpful home tool is the Aphasia Rehabilitation Manual and Therapy Kit (Martha L. Taylor and Morton Marks, M.D., Saxon Press, New York). This manual consists of a 100 basic noun vocabulary, picture and word cards for each noun, and considerable basic information on the subject.

The aim of the speech therapist is to teach the individual terms he already knows; new words are avoided.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

HALOS AROUND LIGHTS

Mrs. D.A. writes: I consulted an eye specialist because I was seeing halos around street lights. He said this phenomenon does not necessarily indicate glaucoma. Please comment.

REPLY

This is true, but a test for glaucoma is indicated when this symptom occurs. I assume the specialist you consulted is a physician (ophthalmologist) capable of doing adequate tests.

FAT DETERMINES WRINKLING

Mrs. C.N. writes: My baby was not wrinkled when he was born. Is this because I had a caesarean birth?

REPLY

No. The ampunt of fat under the skin determines the extent of wrinkling. This never presents a problem, however, as the wrinkles disappear soon after the baby takes nourishment and fills out.

TOXEMIA OF PREGNANCY

Y.A. writes: Does the toxemia of pregnancy affect the kidneys?

REPLY

Yes, in that albumin appears in the urine, blood pressure increases, and the tissues become waterlogged. A woman with kidney disease may also develop toxemia after she gets pregnant.

CORN FORMERS

S.W. writes: Why are some people plagued by corns and others never bothered?

REPLY

The person with corns does not know how to walk properly or is buying shoes that do not fit. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on corns and calluses.

Sheri Ann Dodson, 20, of 27 Woodland Avenue, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital Thursday for a bruised shoulder after her car skidded, knocked down a parking sign, hit a car sales building and came to rest in a center island on Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael police reported.

Mrs. Dodson was cited for driving without a license in her possession. Police said the accident occurred at 12:15 a.m. when her car slid on a turn and crashed into Marin Bay Lincoln Mercury at Third Street and Lincoln Avenue.

The car was driven by David J. Deneen of Inglewood, Los Angeles County, police said, and left the road on a sharp turn.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Stroke Victim With Aphasia May Lose More Than Speech

VAN DELLEN

M.L. writes: My husband just returned home after being hospitalized for a stroke. His speech is garbled and it is hard to understand him. When the family cannot make out what he is saying, he cries. Is this unusual or to be expected? Will he improve?

Strokes may affect language in two ways. There may be impairment or paralysis of the organs of speech (dysarthria) including an inability to control breathing in order to enunciate clearly.

APHASIA, THE SECOND and more common cause, stems from damage to the brain center that controls all language functions. The victim converses with difficulty and in blurred tones, if he can speak at all.

Others may lose the ability to read, write, understand other people, count, spell, tell time, or recognize familiar objects. Aphasia varies in severity and is best treated by a speech therapist in a rehabilitation center.

VARIOUS PERSONALITY changes may occur. But because of the brain damage the victim has no control over his emotions. Crying is common; so are anger and frustration. Partial recovery may take place from six months to a year after the stroke, but better progress is made with speech therapy. There is always hope even tho years elapse before treatment is started.

THE FAMILY CAN HELP by giving tender, loving care. Avoid ridicule and criticism. The smallest gain must be accepted as a step forward. A helpful home tool is the Aphasia Rehabilitation Manual and Therapy Kit (Martha L. Taylor and Morton Marks, M.D., Saxon Press, New York). This manual consists of a 100 basic noun vocabulary, picture and word cards for each noun, and considerable basic information on the subject.

The aim of the speech therapist is to teach the individual terms he already knows; new words are avoided.

HALOS AROUND LIGHTS

Mrs. D.A. writes: I consulted an eye specialist because I was seeing halos around street lights. He said this phenomenon does not necessarily indicate glaucoma. Please comment.

REPLY

This is true, but a test for glaucoma is indicated when this symptom occurs. I assume the specialist you consulted is a physician (ophthalmologist) capable of doing adequate tests.

FAT DETERMINES WRINKLING

Mrs. C.N. writes: My baby was not wrinkled when he was born. Is this because I had a caesarean birth?

REPLY

No. The ampunt of fat under the skin determines the extent of wrinkling. This never presents a problem, however, as the wrinkles disappear soon after the baby takes nourishment and fills out.

TOXEMIA OF PREGNANCY

Y.A. writes: Does the toxemia of pregnancy affect the kidneys?

REPLY

Yes, in that albumin appears in the urine, blood pressure increases, and the tissues become waterlogged. A woman with kidney disease may also develop toxemia after she gets pregnant.

CORN FORMERS

S.W. writes: Why are some people plagued by corns and others never bothered?

REPLY

The person with corns does not know how to walk properly or is buying shoes that do not fit. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on corns and calluses.

New Heart, Lungs Put In Emphysema Victim

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York Hospital officials said yesterday a 43-year-old Newton, N.J., man was making "satisfactory progress" after receiving a new heart and lungs in a three-hour and 13-minute transplant operation.

A hospital spokesman said Edward Falk underwent the operation Thursday.

Falk, whose name had been previously withheld at the request of relatives, had been dying of emphysema, a lung disease, prior to the operation.

He received the organs of a 50-year-old woman who had died of a brain hemorrhage. The donor's identity has not been revealed.

An earlier hospital bulletin said Falk "is making satisfactory progress. He is awake and displays no signs of rejection."

A team of 14 surgeons performed the opeation under the direction of Dr. C. Walton Lillehei.

Such an operation had been attempted only once before, in Houston in 1968, when a two-month-old girl was given the heart and lungs of another infant. The girl died the following day.

Lillehei told a news conference at the hospital yesterday that Falk had passed the first hurdle by surviving the operation but that other obstacles remain.

Among these obstacles, he said, were rejection of the new organs, infection and the need for "auxiliary pathways" for breathing.

The 51-year-old surgeon disclosed that the donor's corneas and kidneys also had been removed for transplantation and that one kidney had already been transplanted into a patient at Mount Sinai Hospital in Manhattan. The patient was not identified.

Lillehei said in the near future he expected that an East Coast or national computerized data bank would be set up to facilitate improved tissue matching in organ transplants,

With Lillehei at the news conference were 11 of the 13 other physicians who participated in Thursday's transplants.

Lillehei led the surgical teams that performed the nine other heart transplants at New York Hospital. None of the nine patients is still alive.

Kidnap Count Arraignment In San Rafael

A Mill Valley man, who allegedly lived a life of expensive leisure on credit cards stolen from a Homestead Valley man, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on charges of kidnapping, armed robbery and car theft.

The suspect, Stuart Harry Amey, was scheduled to enter a plea Monday.

Amey and two companions were booked in connection with the Thanksgiving night kidnapping and robbery of Calvin C. Gaare, 39, of 136 Harvard Avenue who was left in Hayward. San Rafael police said Amey was arrested Dec. 5 in Denver, Colo., on suspicion of using a stolen credit card.

Previously arrested in connection with the crime was Larry David White of 1222 Fourth Street, San Rafael. A third suspect, Clark Anderson, also known as Steven Room, is still at large.

Motel Patron Lists Theft Of Clothing

Robert M. Borden of Philadelphia, Pa., reported to sheriff's deputies Wednesday that clothing and personal possessions, valued at $393, were taken from his room at Rancho Rafael Motel, Ignacio.

Deputies said the room door was pried open sometime between Dec. 10 and Sunday.

Lagunitas Crash Injures Driver

Danny Alford Ward, 23, of 184 Resaca Street, Forest Knolls, suffered facial and scalp cuts early Christmas day when his car swerved into a culvert beside Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near Lagunitas School.

California Highway Patrol officers reported Ward's westbound car crossed the eastbound lane and went down an embankment into the culvert at 4:20 a.m. Ward's head went through the windshield. He was treated at Marin General Hospital.

HIGH SPEED CHASE

Escaper Captured One Month Later

A vacationing California Highway Patrolman and an alert Mill Valley policeman combined yesterday to capture a man who escaped from Marin County Sheriff's Department custody more than a month ago.

Back in jail today and being held without bail was Paul Kenneth McSweeney, 22, of Mill Valley.

McSweeney, who has along history of arrests, escaped Nov. 25 from a bailiff at the old Marin County Courthouse in San Rafael, where he had appeared for revocation of probation of a previous burglary conviction.

Mill Valley Police officer Rodney J. Sheran said he saw McSweeney yesterday about 3:30 p.m. while directing traffic at East Blithedale and North Ashford avenues.

Sheran recruited Duane Friesen, a former Mill Valley reserve officer now with the CHP in Santa Ana, who was standing nearby. They pursued McSweeney for more than a mile with red lights and siren going.

The chase, in heavy traffic, hit speeds of 65 miles an hour before the two officers forced McSweeney's small foreign car into the guard rail on Tiburon Boulevard near Strawberry, Sheran said.

McSweeney was also booked on suspicion of possession of dangerous drugs and marijuana. Sheran said the marijuana and a substance which McSweeney said was cocaine were found in the car.

Also charged with possession of dangerous drugs and marijuana was a passenger with McSweeney, Richard Kenneth Johnson, 18, no known address. He was held in lieu of $1,795 bail.

Welfare Fraud Cases Ruled Misdemeanors

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The state Supreme Court has ruled that a person who obtained welfare payments by making a false statement as to eligibility may be prosecuted for a misdemeanor, but not for a felony.

The ruling Tuesday was in the case of the people vs. Sherry Lee Gilbert in Los Angeles County, where the defendant failed to notify welfare authorities that a man was living with her in her home.

She accepted welfare payments which were based upon a statement that did not disclose his presence, according to the administrative office of the courts.

She was charged with a felony, grand theft, and convicted. However, the state has a special statute making welfare fraud a misdemeanor, which was not applied by the prosecution.

The court concluded that in view of the penal section dealing with welfare fraud, the defendant could not be convicted for the more general crime of grand theft.

Japan Vote: Status Quo

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's voters sent the pro-American ruling Liberal Democratic party (LDP) back to power for four more years today and gave Prime Minister Eisaku Sato a strong mandate to carry out his policy of "Pacific partnership" with the United States.

Early returns from a nationwide election to fill the 486-seat lower house of the Diet, or Parliament, showed the LDP held an unbeatable lead after the lightest turnout of Japanese voters since World War II.

With races for 307 of the 486 seats decided seven hours after the polls closed, Sato's Liberal Democrats had won 213. They needed 244 seats for a majority.

The Japan Socialist party, a longtime critic of American policy in Asia, had captured 60 seats and faced a severe loss of its strength in the Diet.

The Buddhist-oriented Komeito (Clean Government) party won 15 seats and appeared well on the way to its declared goal of becoming the No. 3 party in the Diet. The moderate Democratic Socialist party held seven seats and the Communists had three while independent candidates, many of whom will vote with the LDP, cornered 10 seats.

Holiday Thief Hits Planned Parenthood

The Christmas day theft of $125 in cash and $200 in endorsed checks from the Planned Parenthood Association, 710 C Street, was reported to San Rafael police yesterday.

Association secretary Jeanne T. Sherman told officers the money and checks were taken from a metal cash box kept in her desk drawer. There was no sign of forced entry, officers reported.

Law Teachers Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Nearly 3,000 law educators will attend the annual convention of the Association of American Law Schools which begins today.

The convention, which ends Tuesday, will be highlighted by special awards presented to former U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren and California Supreme Court Chief Justice Roger J. Traynor.

The term "Indian" was first given aborigines of the New World by Columbus in 1492 on the false assumption that he had landed in the vicinity of India.

'WITHOUT MERCY'

Survivor Recalls Ambush Horror

SAIGON (AP) — "I raised my hands to surrender and they shot me down without mercy," Army Capt. John W. Marshall said today of a nightmare ambush he survived by playing dead on a narrow side road 28 miles north of Saigon.

The 27-year-old officer lived to tell the story, but the three men riding with him in a jeep to a Christmas celebration Tuesday were killed by the ambushers, who wore South Vietnamese army uniforms.

A handsome career soldier from Lawton, Okla., and formerly of Livonia, Mich., Marshall suffered a broken leg from one of the bullets. He was found the next morning by a road mine sweeping team.

He was interviewed today at Tan Son Nhut airbase as he waited for a medical evacuation flight that will fly him to a military hospital in Japan.

Marshall and the others had left Lai Khe, base camp of the 1st Infantry Division, for the artillery firebase where they were stationed, a few miles away.

Three miles east of Lai Khe, 15 to 20 Vietnamese suddenly opened fire from the four-foot elephant grass bordering the road, Marshall related.

They wore South Vietnamese army uniforms and a few carried American-made M16 rifles which South Vietnamese troops carry. But most, Marshall said were armed with the standard enemy AK-47 assault rifle.

"After the initial volley, I was the only one alive," Marshall recalled. The Jeep careened off the road into the elephant grass, he said. "They were all around me so the only thing to do was surrender. Obviously, they didn't accept that.

"After they shot me they were very excited because they thought they got a dai yu (Vietnamese word for captain). Thinking I was dead, they unbuttoned my flak jacket, took my dog tags, personal effects and watch. All I could do was breathe shallow and hope they didn't discover I was still alive," he recalled.

"They dumped the other three bodies over mine and then poured gasoline over the jeep and the bodies. As they started to leave they threw a match, setting the gas on fire.

"Luckily, they moved away without looking back. I had to move as the fire spread and by the time I was 15 feet away, I could smell the burning flesh," he said. "For the next few hours I crawled away from the fire and tried to avoid the enemy who were all around with flashlights."

When dawn came, Marshall crawled back to the road and waited for help.

Newspaper Claims 10 Black Panthers Killed By Police

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (UPI) —A newspaper investigation into the series of clashes between Black Panthers and police produced indisputable evidence that 10 Panthers were killed by police, it was reported Saturday.

Newsday, a Long Island newspaper, said it also had determined that five policemen were killed by Panthers, although one of the deaths was described as "disputed and even mysterious."

The newspaper said it had been investigating the Panthers in a number of cities throughout the country for the past three weeks in conjunction with a charge by Panther attorney Charles Garry that police have killed 28 members of the revolutionary organization in the past two years.

Newsday listed the 10 Panthers "indisputably were killed by the police" as:

Bobby Hutton, 17, killed April 6, 1968 in a shootout at Oakland.

Steven Bartholomew, Thomas Lewis and Robert Lawrence, killed Aug. 5, 1968 in a shootout in Los Angeles.

Welston Armstead, 17, killed Oct. 15, 1968, in Seattle, Wash., when carrying a rifle, he allegedly resisted police efforts to question him about a robbery.

Larry Robertson, killed Sept. 4 in a shootout in Chicago.

Walter "Toure" Pope, 20, killed Oct. 18 in a shootout in Los Angeles.

Spurgeon Jake Winters, killed Nov. 13, in a gunbattle in Chicago.

Fred A. Hampton, 21, leader of the Black Panthers in Illinois, and Mark Clark, 23, leader in downstate Peoria, killed earlier this month when Chicago police looking for an alleged arms cache raided a Panther apartment.

Newsday said the "disputed and mysterious" police death was that of Oakland Policeman John Frey on Oct. 28, 1967. Huey Newton, cofounder of the Panthers, is serving a two to 15-year sentence for voluntary manslaughter in the death.

Other police deaths, Newsday said, were:

Nelson A. Sasscer, shot June 4, 1969 in Santa Barbara. A Panther has been accused of the killing but not yet tried.

Rudy Limas, killed in the Los Angeles shootout in which Bartholomew, Lewis and Lawrence also died.

Francis Rapaport and John J. Gilhooley Jr., killed in the Chicago gunbattle in which Winters also died.

One Arraigned, Four Sought In Almonte Burglary

Robert Ward of Marin City was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglarizing an Almonte house Dec. 1, and warrants of arrest were issued for four other Marin City youths charged with the same burglary when they failed to appear in court.

Being sought are Bernard David Thompson, Terry Lee Grinner, Harold Cook and Ralph Wayne Howard.

Ward's case was continued until Jan. 2 for entry of plea.

In addition to the burglary charge, all five are accused of conspiracy in connection with the same crime.

They were arrested after deputies staked out the house which had been burglarized earlier in the day, and nabbed the five when they returned, apparently intending to pick up hidden loot. They were released from jail, however, while the case was investigated further.

Failure To Appear Results In Warrant

A bench warrant with bail set at $750 was issued yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court for Stephen Lee McDonnell, 20, of Richmond, when he failed to appear for sentencing on a charge of possessing a device for smoking hashish.

McDonnell, originally charged with a felony count of possessing marijuana, was arrested Oct. 15 for trespassing in a Stinson Beach cabin.

Concession To Shut

The food and souvenir concession at Muir Woods National Monument will be closed from Thursday until about March 1 for remodeling, Supt. Leonard Frank announced.

Poverty War Christmas Drive 'Huge Success'

More than 1,000 residents of Marin received Christmas dinners from the Economic Opportunity Council's Project Help, EOC executive director Robert Lomax reported yesterday. He call the project a "huge success."

He said 5,000 toys also were distributed Tuesday and Wednesday from EOC centers in Novato, San Rafael and Marin City.

As a result of the project, which provided turkey or ham dinners to 300 to 350 families, Lomax said the EOC may face a deficit of as much as $1,500 because money and food donations did not match the cost of the operation. He said about $2,000 was spent on food but final figures on donations have not yet been tallied.

Lomax said about 50 cases of food not distributed will be used in the project's continuing program for needy Marin families.

New Heart, Lungs Put In Emphysema Victim

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York Hospital officials said yesterday a 43-year-old Newton, N.J., man was making "satisfactory progress" after receiving a new heart and lungs in a three-hour and 13-minute transplant operation.

A hospital spokesman said Edward Falk underwent the operation Thursday.

Falk, whose name had been previously withheld at the request of relatives, had been dying of emphysema, a lung disease, prior to the operation.

He received the organs of a 50-year-old woman who had died of a brain hemorrhage. The donor's identity has not been revealed.

An earlier hospital bulletin said Falk "is making satisfactory progress. He is awake and displays no signs of rejection."

A team of 14 surgeons performed the opeation under the direction of Dr. C. Walton Lillehei.

Such an operation had been attempted only once before, in Houston in 1968, when a two-month-old girl was given the heart and lungs of another infant. The girl died the following day.

Lillehei told a news conference at the hospital yesterday that Falk had passed the first hurdle by surviving the operation but that other obstacles remain.

Among these obstacles, he said, were rejection of the new organs, infection and the need for "auxiliary pathways" for breathing.

The 51-year-old surgeon disclosed that the donor's corneas and kidneys also had been removed for transplantation and that one kidney had already been transplanted into a patient at Mount Sinai Hospital in Manhattan. The patient was not identified.

Lillehei said in the near future he expected that an East Coast or national computerized data bank would be set up to facilitate improved tissue matching in organ transplants,

With Lillehei at the news conference were 11 of the 13 other physicians who participated in Thursday's transplants.

Lillehei led the surgical teams that performed the nine other heart transplants at New York Hospital. None of the nine patients is still alive.

Kidnap Count Arraignment In San Rafael

A Mill Valley man, who allegedly lived a life of expensive leisure on credit cards stolen from a Homestead Valley man, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on charges of kidnapping, armed robbery and car theft.

The suspect, Stuart Harry Amey, was scheduled to enter a plea Monday.

Amey and two companions were booked in connection with the Thanksgiving night kidnapping and robbery of Calvin C. Gaare, 39, of 136 Harvard Avenue who was left in Hayward. San Rafael police said Amey was arrested Dec. 5 in Denver, Colo., on suspicion of using a stolen credit card.

Previoussly arrested in connection with the crime was Larry David White of 1222 Fourth Street, San Rafael. A third suspect, Clark Anderson, also known as Steven Room, is still at large.

Motel Patron Lists Theft Of Clothing

Robert M. Borden of Philadelphia, Pa., reported to sheriff's deputies Wednesday that clothing and personal possessions, valued at $393, were taken from his room at Rancho Rafael Motel, Ignacio.

Deputies said the room door was pried open sometime between Dec. 10 and Sunday.

Lagunitas Crash Injures Driver

Danny Alford Ward, 23, of 184 Resaca Street, Forest Knolls, suffered facial and scalp cuts early Christmas day when his car swerved into a culvert beside Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near Lagunitas School.

HIGH SPEED CHASE

Escaper Captured One Month Later

A vacationing California Highway Patrolman and an alert Mill Valley policeman combined yesterday to capture a man who escaped from Marin County Sheriff's Department custody more than a month ago.

Back in jail today and being held without bail was Paul Kenneth McSweeney, 22, of Mill Valley.

McSweeney, who has along history of arrests, escaped Nov. 25 from a bailiff at the old Marin County Courthouse in San Rafael, where he had appeared for revocation of probation of a previous burglary conviction.

Mill Valley Police officer Rodney J. Sheran said he saw McSweeney yesterday about 3:30 p.m. while directing traffic at East Blithedale and North Ashford avenues.

Sheran recruited Duane Friesen, a former Mill Valley reserve officer now with the CHP in Santa Ana, who was standing nearby. They pursued McSweeney for more than a mile with red lights and siren going.

The chase, in heavy traffic, hit speeds of 65 miles an hour before the two officers forced McSweeney's small foreign car into the guard rail on Tiburon Boulevard near Strawberry, Sheran said.

McSweeney was also booked on suspicion of possession of dangerous drugs and marijuana. Sheran said the marijuana and a substance which McSweeney said was cocaine were found in the car.

Also charged with possession of dangerous drugs and marijuana was a passenger with McSweeney, Richard Kenneth Johnson, 18, no known address. He was held in lieu of $1,795 bail.

Welfare Fraud Cases Ruled Misdemeanors

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The state Supreme Court has ruled that a person who obtained welfare payments by making a false statement as to eligibility may be prosecuted for a misdemeanor, but not for a felony.

The ruling Tuesday was in the case of the people vs. Sherry Lee Gilbert in Los Angeles County, where the defendant failed to notify welfare authorities that a man was living with her in her home.

She accepted welfare payments which were based upon a statement that did not disclose his presence, according to the administrative office of the courts.

She was charged with a felony, grand theft, and convicted. However, the state has a special statute making welfare fraud a misdemeanor, which was not applied by the prosecution.

The court concluded that in view of the penal section dealing with welfare fraud, the defendant could not be convicted for the more general crime of grand theft.

Japan Vote: Status Quo

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's voters sent the pro-American ruling Liberal Democratic party (LDP) back to power for four more years today and gave Prime Minister Eisaku Sato a strong mandate to carry out his policy of "Pacific partnership" with the United States.

Early returns from a nationwide election to fill the 486-seat lower house of the Diet, or Parliament, showed the LDP held an unbeatable lead after the lightest turnout of Japanese voters since World War II.

With races for 307 of the 486 seats decided seven hours after the polls closed, Sato's Liberal Democrats had won 213. They needed 244 seats for a majority.

The Japan Socialist party, a longtime critic of American policy in Asia, had captured 60 seats and faced a severe loss of its strength in the Diet.

The Buddhist-oriented Komeito (Clean Government) party won 15 seats and appeared well on the way to its declared goal of becoming the No. 3 party in the Diet. The moderate Democratic Socialist party held seven seats and the Communists had three while independent candidates, many of whom will vote with the LDP, cornered 10 seats.

Holiday Thief Hits Planned Parenthood

The Christmas day theft of $125 in cash and $200 in endorsed checks from the Planned Parenthood Association, 710 C Street, was reported to San Rafael police yesterday.

Association secretary Jeanne T. Sherman told officers the money and checks were taken from a metal cash box kept in her desk drawer. There was no sign of forced entry, officers reported.

Law Teachers Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Nearly 3,000 law educators will attend the annual convention of the Association of American Law Schools which begins today.

The convention, which ends Tuesday, will be highlighted by special awards presented to former U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren and California Supreme Court Chief Justice Roger J. Traynor.

'WITHOUT MERCY'

Survivor Recalls Ambush Horror

SAIGON (AP) — "I raised my hands to surrender and they shot me down without mercy," Army Capt. John W. Marshall said today of a nightmare ambush he survived by playing dead on a narrow side road 28 miles north of Saigon.

The 27-year-old officer lived to tell the story, but the three men riding with him in a jeep to a Christmas celebration Tuesday were killed by the ambushers, who wore South Vietnamese army uniforms.

A handsome career soldier from Lawton, Okla., and formerly of Livonia, Mich., Marshall suffered a broken leg from one of the bullets. He was found the next morning by a road mine sweeping team.

He was interviewed today at Tan Son Nhut airbase as he waited for a medical evacuation flight that will fly him to a military hospital in Japan.

Marshall and the others had left Lai Khe, base camp of the 1st Infantry Division, for the artillery firebase where they were stationed, a few miles away.

Three miles east of Lai Khe, 15 to 20 Vietnamese suddenly opened fire from the four-foot elephant grass bordering the road, Marshall related.

They wore South Vietnamese army uniforms and a few carried American-made M16 rifles which South Vietnamese troops carry. But most, Marshall said were armed with the standard enemy AK-47 assault rifle.

"After the initial volley, I was the only one alive," Marshall recalled. The Jeep careened off the road into the elephant grass, he said. "They were all around me so the only thing to do was surrender. Obviously, they didn't accept that.

"After they shot me they were very excited because they thought they got a dai yu (Vietnamese word for captain). Thinking I was dead, they unbuttoned my flak jacket, took my dog tags, personal effects and watch. All I could do was breathe shallow and hope they didn't discover I was still alive," he recalled.

"They dumped the other three bodies over mine and then poured gasoline over the jeep and the bodies. As they started to leave they threw a match, setting the gas on fire.

"Luckily, they moved away without looking back. I had to move as the fire spread and by the time I was 15 feet away, I could smell the burning flesh," he said. "For the next few hours I crawled away from the fire and tried to avoid the enemy who were all around with flashlights."

When dawn came, Marshall crawled back to the road and waited for help.

Newspaper Claims 10 Black Panthers Killed By Police

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (UPI) —A newspaper investigation into the series of clashes between Black Panthers and police produced indisputable evidence that 10 Panthers were killed by police, it was reported Saturday.

Newsday, a Long Island newspaper, said it also had determined that five policemen were killed by Panthers, although one of the deaths was described as "disputed and even mysterious."

The newspaper said it had been investigating the Panthers in a number of cities throughout the country for the past three weeks in conjunction with a charge by Panther attorney Charles Garry that police have killed 28 members of the revolutionary organization in the past two years.

Newsday listed the 10 Panthers "indisputably were killed by the police" as:

Bobby Hutton, 17, killed April 6, 1968 in a shootout at Oakland.

Steven Bartholomew, Thomas Lewis and Robert Lawrence, killed Aug. 5, 1968 in a shootout in Los Angeles.

Welston Armstead, 17, killed Oct. 15, 1968, in Seattle, Wash., when carrying a rifle, he allegedly resisted police efforts to question him about a robbery.

Larry Robertson, killed Sept. 4 in a shootout in Chicago.

Walter "Toure" Pope, 20, killed Oct. 18 in a shootout in Los Angeles.

Spurgeon Jake Winters, killed Nov. 13, in a gunbattle in Chicago.

Fred A. Hampton, 21, leader of the Black Panthers in Illinois, and Mark Clark, 23, leader in downstate Peoria, killed earlier this month when Chicago police looking for an alleged arms cache raided a Panther apartment.

Newsday said the "disputed and mysterious" police death was that of Oakland Policeman John Frey on Oct. 28, 1967. Huey Newton, cofounder of the Panthers, is serving a two to 15-year sentence for voluntary manslaughter in the death.

Other police deaths, Newsday said, were:

Nelson A. Sasscer, shot June 4, 1969 in Santa Barbara. A Panther has been accused of the killing but not yet tried.

Rudy Limas, killed in the Los Angeles shootout in which Bartholomew, Lewis and Lawrence also died.

Francis Rapaport and John J. Gilhooley Jr., killed in the Chicago gunbattle in which Winters also died.

One Arraigned, Four Sought In Almonte Burglary

Robert Ward of Marin City was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglarizing an Almonte house Dec. 1, and warrants of arrest were issued for four other Marin City youths charged with the same burglary when they failed to appear in court.

Being sought are Bernard David Thompson, Terry Lee Grinner, Harold Cook and Ralph Wayne Howard.

Ward's case was continued until Jan. 2 for entry of plea.

In addition to the burglary charge, all five are accused of conspiracy in connection with the same crime.

They were arrested after deputies staked out the house which had been burglarized earlier in the day, and nabbed the five when they returned, apparently intending to pick up hidden loot. They were released from jail, however, while the case was investigated further.

Failure To Appear Results In Warrant

A bench warrant with bail set at $750 was issued yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court for Stephen Lee McDonnell, 20, of Richmond, when he failed to appear for sentencing on a charge of possessing a device for smoking hashish.

McDonnell, originally charged with a felony count of possessing marijuana, was arrested Oct. 15 for trespassing in a Stinson Beach cabin.

Poverty War Christmas Drive 'Huge Success'

More than 1,000 residents of Marin received Christmas dinners from the Economic Opportunity Council's Project Help, EOC executive director Robert Lomax reported yesterday. He call the project a "huge success."

He said 5,000 toys also were distributed Tuesday and Wednesday from EOC centers in Novato, San Rafael and Marin City.

As a result of the project, which provided turkey or ham dinners to 300 to 350 families, Lomax said the EOC may face a deficit of as much as $1,500 because money and food donations did not match the cost of the operation. He said about $2,000 was spent on food but final figures on donations have not yet been tallied.

Lomax said about 50 cases of food not distributed will be used in the project's continuing program for needy Marin families.

New Heart, Lungs Put In Emphysema Victim

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York Hospital officials said yesterday a 43-year-old Newton, N.J., man was making "satisfactory progress" after receiving a new heart and lungs in a three-hour and 13-minute transplant operation.

A hospital spokesman said Edward Falk underwent the operation Thursday.

Falk, whose name had been previously withheld at the request of relatives, had been dying of emphysema, a lung disease, prior to the operation.

He received the organs of a 50-year-old woman who had died of a brain hemorrhage. The donor's identity has not been revealed.

An earlier hospital bulletin said Falk "is making satisfactory progress. He is awake and displays no signs of rejection."

A team of 14 surgeons performed the opeation under the direction of Dr. C. Walton Lillehei.

Such an operation had been attempted only once before, in Houston in 1968, when a two-month-old girl was given the heart and lungs of another infant. The girl died the following day.

Lillehei told a news conference at the hospital yesterday that Falk had passed the first hurdle by surviving the operation but that other obstacles remain.

Among these obstacles, he said, were rejection of the new organs, infection and the need for "auxiliary pathways" for breathing.

The 51-year-old surgeon disclosed that the donor's corneas and kidneys also had been removed for transplantation and that one kidney had already been transplanted into a patient at Mount Sinai Hospital in Manhattan. The patient was not identified.

Lillehei said in the near future he expected that an East Coast or national computerized data bank would be set up to facilitate improved tissue matching in organ transplants,

With Lillehei at the news conference were 11 of the 13 other physicians who participated in Thursday's transplants.

Lillehei led the surgical teams that performed the nine other heart transplants at New York Hospital. None of the nine patients is still alive.

Kidnap Count Arraignment In San Rafael

A Mill Valley man, who allegedly lived a life of expensive leisure on credit cards stolen from a Homestead Valley man, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on charges of kidnapping, armed robbery and car theft.

The suspect, Stuart Harry Amey, was scheduled to enter a plea Monday.

Amey and two companions were booked in connection with the Thanksgiving night kidnapping and robbery of Calvin C. Gaare, 39, of 136 Harvard Avenue who was left in Hayward. San Rafael police said Amey was arrested Dec. 5 in Denver, Colo., on suspicion of using a stolen credit card.

Previoussly arrested in connection with the crime was Larry David White of 1222 Fourth Street, San Rafael. A third suspect, Clark Anderson, also known as Steven Room, is still at large.

Motel Patron Lists Theft Of Clothing

Robert M. Borden of Philadelphia, Pa., reported to sheriff's deputies Wednesday that clothing and personal possessions, valued at $393, were taken from his room at Rancho Rafael Motel, Ignacio.

Deputies said the room door was pried open sometime between Dec. 10 and Sunday.

Lagunitas Crash Injures Driver

Danny Alford Ward, 23, of 184 Resaca Street, Forest Knolls, suffered facial and scalp cuts early Christmas day when his car swerved into a culvert beside Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near Lagunitas School.

California Highway Patrol officers reported Ward's westbound car crossed the eastbound lane and went down an embankment into the culvert at 4:20 a.m. Ward's head went through the windshield. He was treated at Marin General Hospital.

HIGH SPEED CHASE

Escaper Captured One Month Later

A vacationing California Highway Patrolman and an alert Mill Valley policeman combined yesterday to capture a man who escaped from Marin County Sheriff's Department custody more than a month ago.

Back in jail today and being held without bail was Paul Kenneth McSweeney, 22, of Mill Valley.

McSweeney, who has along history of arrests, escaped Nov. 25 from a bailiff at the old Marin County Courthouse in San Rafael, where he had appeared for revocation of probation of a previous burglary conviction.

Mill Valley Police officer Rodney J. Sheran said he saw McSweeney yesterday about 3:30 p.m. while directing traffic at East Blithedale and North Ashford avenues.

Sheran recruited Duane Friesen, a former Mill Valley reserve officer now with the CHP in Santa Ana, who was standing nearby. They pursued McSweeney for more than a mile with red lights and siren going.

The chase, in heavy traffic, hit speeds of 65 miles an hour before the two officers forced McSweeney's small foreign car into the guard rail on Tiburon Boulevard near Strawberry, Sheran said.

McSweeney was also booked on suspicion of possession of dangerous drugs and marijuana. Sheran said the marijuana and a substance which McSweeney said was cocaine were found in the car.

Also charged with possession of dangerous drugs and marijuana was a passenger with McSweeney, Richard Kenneth Johnson, 18, no known address. He was held in lieu of $1,795 bail.

Welfare Fraud Cases Ruled Misdemeanors

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The state Supreme Court has ruled that a person who obtained welfare payments by making a false statement as to eligibility may be prosecuted for a misdemeanor, but not for a felony.

The ruling Tuesday was in the case of the people vs. Sherry Lee Gilbert in Los Angeles County, where the defendant failed to notify welfare authorities that a man was living with her in her home.

She accepted welfare payments which were based upon a statement that did not disclose his presence, according to the administrative office of the courts.

She was charged with a felony, grand theft, and convicted. However, the state has a special statute making welfare fraud a misdemeanor, which was not applied by the prosecution.

The court concluded that in view of the penal section dealing with welfare fraud, the defendant could not be convicted for the more general crime of grand theft.

Japan Vote: Status Quo

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's voters sent the pro-American ruling Liberal Democratic party (LDP) back to power for four more years today and gave Prime Minister Eisaku Sato a strong mandate to carry out his policy of "Pacific partnership" with the United States.

Early returns from a nationwide election to fill the 486-seat lower house of the Diet, or Parliament, showed the LDP held an unbeatable lead after the lightest turnout of Japanese voters since World War II.

With races for 307 of the 486 seats decided seven hours after the polls closed, Sato's Liberal Democrats had won 213. They needed 244 seats for a majority.

The Japan Socialist party, a longtime critic of American policy in Asia, had captured 60 seats and faced a severe loss of its strength in the Diet.

The Buddhist-oriented Komeito (Clean Government) party won 15 seats and appeared well on the way to its declared goal of becoming the No. 3 party in the Diet. The moderate Democratic Socialist party held seven seats and the Communists had three while independent candidates, many of whom will vote with the LDP, cornered 10 seats.

Holiday Thief Hits Planned Parenthood

The Christmas day theft of $125 in cash and $200 in endorsed checks from the Planned Parenthood Association, 710 C Street, was reported to San Rafael police yesterday.

Association secretary Jeanne T. Sherman told officers the money and checks were taken from a metal cash box kept in her desk drawer. There was no sign of forced entry, officers reported.

Law Teachers Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Nearly 3,000 law educators will attend the annual convention of the Association of American Law Schools which begins today.

The convention, which ends Tuesday, will be highlighted by special awards presented to former U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren and California Supreme Court Chief Justice Roger J. Traynor.

'WITHOUT MERCY'

Survivor Recalls Ambush Horror

SAIGON (AP) — "I raised my hands to surrender and they shot me down without mercy," Army Capt. John W. Marshall said today of a nightmare ambush he survived by playing dead on a narrow side road 28 miles north of Saigon.

The 27-year-old officer lived to tell the story, but the three men riding with him in a jeep to a Christmas celebration Tuesday were killed by the ambushers, who wore South Vietnamese army uniforms.

A handsome career soldier from Lawton, Okla., and formerly of Livonia, Mich., Marshall suffered a broken leg from one of the bullets. He was found the next morning by a road mine sweeping team.

He was interviewed today at Tan Son Nhut airbase as he waited for a medical evacuation flight that will fly him to a military hospital in Japan.

Marshall and the others had left Lai Khe, base camp of the 1st Infantry Division, for the artillery firebase where they were stationed, a few miles away.

Three miles east of Lai Khe, 15 to 20 Vietnamese suddenly opened fire from the four-foot elephant grass bordering the road, Marshall related.

They wore South Vietnamese army uniforms and a few carried American-made M16 rifles which South Vietnamese troops carry. But most, Marshall said were armed with the standard enemy AK-47 assault rifle.

"After the initial volley, I was the only one alive," Marshall recalled. The Jeep careened off the road into the elephant grass, he said. "They were all around me so the only thing to do was surrender. Obviously, they didn't accept that.

"After they shot me they were very excited because they thought they got a dai yu (Vietnamese word for captain). Thinking I was dead, they unbuttoned my flak jacket, took my dog tags, personal effects and watch. All I could do was breathe shallow and hope they didn't discover I was still alive," he recalled.

"They dumped the other three bodies over mine and then poured gasoline over the jeep and the bodies. As they started to leave they threw a match, setting the gas on fire.

"Luckily, they moved away without looking back. I had to move as the fire spread and by the time I was 15 feet away, I could smell the burning flesh," he said. "For the next few hours I crawled away from the fire and tried to avoid the enemy who were all around with flashlights."

When dawn came, Marshall crawled back to the road and waited for help.

Newspaper Claims 10 Black Panthers Killed By Police

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (UPI) —A newspaper investigation into the series of clashes between Black Panthers and police produced indisputable evidence that 10 Panthers were killed by police, it was reported Saturday.

Newsday, a Long Island newspaper, said it also had determined that five policemen were killed by Panthers, although one of the deaths was described as "disputed and even mysterious."

The newspaper said it had been investigating the Panthers in a number of cities throughout the country for the past three weeks in conjunction with a charge by Panther attorney Charles Garry that police have killed 28 members of the revolutionary organization in the past two years.

Newsday listed the 10 Panthers "indisputably were killed by the police" as:

Bobby Hutton, 17, killed April 6, 1968 in a shootout at Oakland.

Steven Bartholomew, Thomas Lewis and Robert Lawrence, killed Aug. 5, 1968 in a shootout in Los Angeles.

Welston Armstead, 17, killed Oct. 15, 1968, in Seattle, Wash., when carrying a rifle, he allegedly resisted police efforts to question him about a robbery.

Larry Robertson, killed Sept. 4 in a shootout in Chicago.

Walter "Toure" Pope, 20, killed Oct. 18 in a shootout in Los Angeles.

Spurgeon Jake Winters, killed Nov. 13, in a gunbattle in Chicago.

Fred A. Hampton, 21, leader of the Black Panthers in Illinois, and Mark Clark, 23, leader in downstate Peoria, killed earlier this month when Chicago police looking for an alleged arms cache raided a Panther apartment.

Newsday said the "disputed and mysterious" police death was that of Oakland Policeman John Frey on Oct. 28, 1967. Huey Newton, cofounder of the Panthers, is serving a two to 15-year sentence for voluntary manslaughter in the death.

Other police deaths, Newsday said, were:

Nelson A. Sasscer, shot June 4, 1969 in Santa Barbara. A Panther has been accused of the killing but not yet tried.

Rudy Limas, killed in the Los Angeles shootout in which Bartholomew, Lewis and Lawrence also died.

Francis Rapaport and John J. Gilhooley Jr., killed in the Chicago gunbattle in which Winters also died.

One Arraigned, Four Sought In Almonte Burglary

Robert Ward of Marin City was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglarizing an Almonte house Dec. 1, and warrants of arrest were issued for four other Marin City youths charged with the same burglary when they failed to appear in court.

Being sought are Bernard David Thompson, Terry Lee Grinner, Harold Cook and Ralph Wayne Howard.

Ward's case was continued until Jan. 2 for entry of plea.

In addition to the burglary charge, all five are accused of conspiracy in connection with the same crime.

They were arrested after deputies staked out the house which had been burglarized earlier in the day, and nabbed the five when they returned, apparently intending to pick up hidden loot. They were released from jail, however, while the case was investigated further.

Failure To Appear Results In Warrant

A bench warrant with bail set at $750 was issued yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court for Stephen Lee McDonnell, 20, of Richmond, when he failed to appear for sentencing on a charge of possessing a device for smoking hashish.

McDonnell, originally charged with a felony count of possessing marijuana, was arrested Oct. 15 for trespassing in a Stinson Beach cabin.

Concession To Shut

The food and souvenir concession at Muir Woods National Monument will be closed from Thursday until about March 1 for remodeling, Supt. Leonard Frank announced.

FIRE CALLS

YESTERDAY:
12:23 p.m., Marinwood — Hot ashes in garbage can ignited paper and trash in garage of Jack C. Potter, 300 Mount Shasta Drive, causing an estimated $300 smoke damage.

Poverty War Christmas Drive 'Huge Success'

More than 1,000 residents of Marin received Christmas dinners from the Economic Opportunity Council's Project Help, EOC executive director Robert Lomax reported yesterday. He call the project a "huge success."

He said 5,000 toys also were distributed Tuesday and Wednesday from EOC centers in Novato, San Rafael and Marin City.

As a result of the project, which provided turkey or ham dinners to 300 to 350 families, Lomax said the EOC may face a deficit of as much as $1,500 because money and food donations did not match the cost of the operation. He said about $2,000 was spent on food but final figures on donations have not yet been tallied.

Lomax said about 50 cases of food not distributed will be used in the project's continuing program for needy Marin families.

School Burglary

Someone broke into Blessed Sacrament School, 160 North San Pedro Road, Santa Venetia, and took $5 in change from the office sometime between 6 p.m. Tuesday at 7 a.m. Wednesday, sheriff's deputies have reported.

"His daddy won't let him play 'em at his house. Can he play 'em over here?"

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Dec. 27, the 361st day of 1969 with four more to follow.

The moon is full. The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1903, the song that was to become a standby of standbys, "Sweet Adeline," was sung for the first time in New York City. The composer was Henry Armstrong; lyrics by Richard Gerard.

In 1932, the largest indoor theater of the time, Radio City Music Hall, was opened in New York.

In 1941, Japan bombed the neutral city of Manila.

In 1945, the United States, Russia and Britain announced they would govern Korea as joint trustees for five years and then grant independence.

In 1963, the U.S. Commerce Department authorized the sale of surplus wheat to Russia.

In 1968, Apollo 8 astronauts returned to earth after orbiting the moon 10 times.

A thought for the day: British professor John Tyndall said, "It is as fatal as it is cowardly to blind facts because they are not to our taste."

Kentucky's Sons Packing Court?

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky is the only state to have had three native sons serving together not once but twice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In the 1930s, Justices Stanley Reed, James McReynolds and Louis Brandeis were on the court together.

In the late 1940s and early '50s, it was Chief Justice Fred Vinson and Justices Reed and Wiley Rutledge.

HOW TO PLAY BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Try Early If You Are Lucky For No-trump Victory

There comes a time (usually during the cocktail hour) when all bridge hands look alike. If today's hand looks unusually familiar, don't complain about the eggnog; the North-South cards are identical with those shown here yesterday. The other cards are different, and so is the recommended line of play.

Opening lead — ♠ 6

REFUSE SPADES

You refuse the first two spade tricks and then take your ace of spades, noting that you have eight tricks in top cards. You must develop one additional trick in hearts or diamonds.

Your best chance is in diamonds since the odds are better than 2 to 1 that the five missing diamonds will divide 3-2. In hearts the odds are almost 2 to 1 against a favorable break.

Still, there is no harm in playing for both suits if you get the chance. The object is to develop a trick without allowing West to gain the lead.

GET TO DUMMY

You lead a heart toward dummy, intending to return a diamond through East. But when West plays the three of hearts you should change your plan. Play low from dummy, since East is sure to win the trick. You will later have to trust your judgment in choosing between hearts and diamonds, but this is no problem. (I've never met a bridge player who didn't have great faith in his own judgment.)

DIMMOND RETURN

East wins with the nine of hearts and returns the six of diamonds. Take the ace of diamonds, lead a heart to the ace and return a diamond.

When East plays the five of diamonds you correctly judge that he started with just the six and five. Since the diamonds are now hopeless, take the king of diamonds and lead a heart to dummy's king. The suit breaks favorably, and you cash dummy's last heart as your ninth trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1 no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ K J 9 6 3
♥ 10 8 3
♦ Q J 10
♣ 7 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two spades.

You are not worried about letting your partner play the hand at notrump. You are really hopint that partner will be able to raise to three spades. He will do so with a good spade fit and 17 or 18 points. You will be happy to accept the invitation to game, but you cannot afford to make a strong response at your first turn.

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — A number of students at Colorado State University staged a demonstration in 1968 demanding that 3.2 per cent beer be sold at the Student Center. University officials finally agreed. After 53 days of operations, an official of the center said beer sales show a loss of $402.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Dec. 27, the 361st day of 1969 with four more to follow.

The moon is full. The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1903, the song that was to become a standby of standbys, "Sweet Adeline," was sung for the first time in New York City. The composer was Henry Armstrong; lyrics by Richard Gerard.

In 1932, the largest indoor theater of the time, Radio City Music Hall, was opened in New York.

In 1941, Japan bombed the neutral city of Manila.

In 1945, the United States, Russia and Britain announced they would govern Korea as joint trustees for five years and then grant independence.

In 1963, the U.S. Commerce Department authorized the sale of surplus wheat to Russia.

In 1968, Apollo 8 astronauts returned to earth after orbiting the moon 10 times.

A thought for the day: British professor John Tyndall said, "It is as fatal as it is cowardly to blind facts because they are not to our taste."

Kentucky's Sons Packing Court?

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky is the only state to have had three native sons serving together not once but twice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In the 1930s, Justices Stanley Reed, James McReynolds and Louis Brandeis were on the court together.

In the late 1940s and early '50s, it was Chief Justice Fred Vinson and Justices Reed and Wiley Rutledge.

HOW TO PLAY BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Try Early If You Are Lucky For No-trump Victory

There comes a time (usually during the cocktail hour) when all bridge hands look alike. If today's hand looks unusually familiar, don't complain about the eggnog; the North-South cards are identical with those shown here yesterday. The other cards are different, and so is the recommended line of play.

Message To Remember: 'One Solitary Life'

BEFORE THE AFTERGLOW of Christmas has worn off and the Christmas spirit has been put into mothballs for another year, it is still timely to reflect on the great event which Christmas commemorates.

This year's crop of greeting cards produced several with the heading, "One Solitary Life."

In this materialistic age when we are afflicted by a rash of "drop-outs from society," we can all profit by the message of "One Solitary Life":

"HE WAS BORN IN an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman.

"He grew up in still another village, where He worked in a carpenter shop until he was 30.

"Then for three years He was an itinerant preacher.

"He never wrote a book.

"He never held an office.

"He never had a family or owned a house.

"He didn't go to college.

"He never visited a big city. He never traveled 200 miles from the place where he was born.

"He did none of the things one usually associates with greatness. He had no credentials but himself.

"He was only 33 when the tide of public opinion turned against him. His friends ran away.

"He was turned over to his enemies. He was nailed to a cross between two thieves. While he was dying, his executioners gambled for his clothing, the only property He had on earth.

"When He was dead, He was laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

"Nineteen centuries have come and gone, and today He is the central figure of the human race and the leader of mankind's progress.

"All the armies that ever marched, all the navies that ever sailed, all the parliaments that ever sat, all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man on earth as much as that one solitary life."

ONLY THREE SUCH CARDS turned up amongst this year's crop of nearly 1,000 Christmas greetings received in the mail.

One was postmarked Lompoc, one was from Santa Rosa, and one was mailed in San Rafael.

Curiously, each was signed in the name of a family instead of a list of the individuals who make up the family.

If the children of those families do not appreciate today how blessed they are to have been born into those families, they most assuredly will realize and appreciate their special blessing when they have grown older and more mature.

—Jack Craemer

How Old Is Your Pet?

Figuring a dog's or cat's age in terms of human years is a tricky business. The common notion that one year of a dog's age is equal to seven human years has always seemed wrong to us. The oldest dog on record lived 34 years, which works out at 238 years or twice the recorded age of any human.

In the December issue of Natural History, David P. Willoughby presents some formulas which he has worked out. Here they are for the dog, the cat and the horse:

A dog's age equals .333 of a man's age minus 5.5 years. A cat's age is .385 of a man's age minus 7.0 years. A horse's age is .406 of a man's age minus 3.5 years.

The Decade Of Obfuscation

The 1960s, which certainly must go down as the Turbulent Sixties, might also be called the Decade of Obfuscation.

At no time has there been so much talk about "communication" as in the decade which now is rapidly moving to its close. And probably at no time has communication been more obscured by the very ones who talked about it.

This has not been for lack of means. The printed media have produced more words than ever before. Radio and television have multiplied their output.

The trouble is that too many of the words have been without meaning, or with twisted meaning. Most of the books and articles deploring a "communications gap" have been written in language which sadly failed to communicate.

This may in part be a result of the decline in the teaching of grammar and composition. We rather think it is largely just a case of running off at the mouth (and the typewriter). We certainly don't need more communication. What we need is clearer communication.

Bouquets—And Nary A Brickbat

On this day after Christmas, we issue only bouquets — no brickbat.

BOUQUETS to all the unpaid public officials — members of city, county and district commissions, school boards, etc. — who put in many hours and much earnest effort throughout the year and receive in recompense mostly complaints and criticisms (sometimes from this newspaper, too).

BOUQUETS to the Marin County Real Estate Board and the many others who sprang to the assistance of the Billy R. Huskey family when its plight became known.

BOUQUETS to the countless others who assisted the less fortunate at Christmas time, often without notice and with no thought to receiving credit for their deeds.

BOUQUETS to the great majority of Marin adolescents, in school and out, who are building their lives toward useful citizenship while most of the notice goes to the raucus minority of trouble makers.

BOUQUETS to those who serve us around the clock, even on Christmas — the police, firemen, nurses, and standby storm crews of county, cities, and utility companies.

And, last but not least, BOUQUETS to our I-J letter writers. Never afraid to speak out, they subject each issue to public debate and keep the "town meeting" alive in the columns of their newspaper.

Ethnic Studies Not Expensive

I would like to attempt an answer to Mrs. (Kay D.) Russo's letter of Dec. 19 in which she raised questions about the Fairfax School District. Mrs. Russo expressed concern that a district admittedly short of funds is able to initiate a program in ethnic studies.

Mrs. Russo is entirely correct in her statements about this district's need for money. As a member of the School Finance Study Committee I was able to see firsthand this fall many evidences of the most stringent economy in the Fairfax schools. This district has been able to pay for only its most urgent needs in salary raises, maintenance of buildings, classroom materials and curriculum planning. . .

How, then, asks Mrs. Russo, can a poor district initiate a program in ethnic studies? One reason is that such a program happens to cost almost nothing. It was a matter of collecting articles and books already in our library and preparing a bibliography. Furthermore, many teachers who have taken courses in ethnic studies are prepared to teach the course.

It is precisely this kind of creative planning that our committee found commendable. . . I am proud that the Fairfax School District has again demonstrated its ability to use its limited funds wisely.

Whose Side Is State Department On?

Some "nonstrategic" items that are cleared for export to Soviet Europe include: virgin mercury, aircraft parts, explosives, digital computers, copper cable, petroleum, airborne communications equipment, cartridge stock, and much, much more.

The Communists say 80 per cent of the war material going into North Vietnam is from Soviet Europe. If any of that is part of or made possible by our "nonstrategic " trade to Soviet Europe than that trade is treason.

Now the State Department has announced an easing of "nonstrategic" trade restrictions with Communist China (I-J, Dec. 19). As Communist China has a border with North Vietnam, this easing of restrictions would greatly decrease the logistic problems of the Communist enemy in Vietnam.

Just whose side is the State Department on?

Be Yourself! Don't Be A Second-Hand Man

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

The object lesson of life and experience is: Don't run! Get hold of yourself before it's too late. Become the Columbus of your own soul to find in yourself, in the words of Sir J. Stevens, "a continent of undiscovered character."

True, it takes more courage than we can imagine to become the architect of our character and soul. For the multitudes of mass-man in a mass-society are scarcely more than strangers to themselves. They find it more convenient to run after the outermost fashion of exterior conformity rather than the innermost passion of inward individuality. Like fleeing Jonahs they run, and running becomes a habit, a way of life, a destiny, until they are afraid to be themselves and uncomfortable in being unlike others. They look at themselves instead of into themselves and seek to please other tastes because they have lost taste in themselves and have a second-hand life, with little individual uniqueness and originality.

THERE ARE MANY second-hand men walking the streets because they fail to define themselves, to affirm themselves, to tunein on themselves. They run like the proverbial man in the ad, who is a bundle of energy without direction, because a spring is hooked on to his back and he's all wound up in exploding velocity. We recognize such men in Oscar Wilde's description when he says: "Most people are other people. Their thoughts are someone else's opinions, their lives a mimicry, their passions, a quotation."

The timorous soul, shrinking from fear of getting to know and confront himself, is devoid of courage to relate and mingle with others and is captive of a house of bondage in which strangers reside — outer images, strange gods, imitation characters.

THERE IS a legitimate and healthy struggle within us in our duality of being. Like stars, each of us must shine in his own light and not, like a moon, reflect the light of another star. And yet, all individual stars, if they are not to burn and wink out of existence, must be arrayed in a system of constellations and galaxies within a rhythmic pattern and order.

The cosmic creature, man, can take his lesson from the stars themselves, in which the shining worlds are the actors, the universe is their stage, and their adventure is nothing short of eternity.

And while we must shine brightly in our own individual stars, with all the light and warmth of our fire, we cannot dislodge our star from our human constellation and escape our system, or we shall end up in ashes like a falling star.

ONLY BY the cultivation of our character and our personal experience will we be able to telescope our sights toward such vision, in this, the greatest drama of man: to partake of the universe and see our role in it as we extend ourselves with our fellowmen in a march toward the stars.

In character it is not so important what a man is doing for himself as what he is trying to do with himself: not so much to know where he may go but for what he must stand; not when he may arrive but what he may take along with him; not with what he lives, but what lives in him. And in this adventure the stars are not the limit.

New Year To Bring Showdowns For Nixon's Administration

WASHINGTON — The coming new year will bring the first really critical tests, the first shoot-out showdowns, to the Nixon administration, and poignantly so on Vietnam. Contrary to a great deal of solemn pro-and-con analyzing of the record to date, the fact is that 1969 has been more nearly a prolonged probationary period for the President than a time of crises met and mastered.

The administration's principal achievement in the old year has been simply to mark out the path of its purposes and to set its tone. It has been only the overture to the opera, only the prologue to a book that is yet to be written.

To be sure, some of Mr. Nixon's more generalized campaign pledges have in fact already been fulfilled. That lowering of the national voice which he promised is now a reality. The objective of "bringing us together" has, to a considerably lesser degree, been vindicated — although in this case the process has been confined only to a concurrent majority of the conservative middle with the consequence of further alienation of the liberal left.

THE NET OF IT is that the President has indeed created a large constituency, in purely political and in possibly transient terms, which has given him a breathing space and which in a temperate sort of way wishes him well.

Because of his own carefully modulated words and actions and because of the rarely exampled current disarray of a Democratic party led mainly by shouting doctrinaries who influence only each other, he is today in a very strong position as against the distant prospect of the 1972 presidential election. As of today, no rational observer would give the Democrats more than the thinnest of chances to overturn the president in 1972.

Still, the operative point is that the period of grace granted to the President is running out with the old year, and from now on he will be on his own in a way he has not yet known. Of the three transcendental problems before him, two — violence in its various forms and inflation — are nowhere near a solution. And the third — the Vietnam War — is far less close to a solution than the public seems to suppose.

FOR THE FAILURE to date really to engage crime, the Democratic congress is on balance the responsible agency. Ditto as to the reality of a still-unchecked inflation.

On Vietnam, however, the buck must stop at the desk of the President himself. That he has done to date as well as he has done, in a most complex and risky policy of slow disengagement intended simultaneously to avoid an American defeat and to placate antiwarism here at home, is in itself something of a miracle.

Thus far, he has managed to keep all but the most extreme of doves off his back by the simple circumstance that he is, after all, withdrawing some of our troops. Thus far he has managed to keep all but the extreme hawks off his back by the circumstance that he has not, after all, reduced to the point of true danger the totality of American military power in Vietnam.

And yet two sullen and fundamental truths still abide. The first of these is that the President's hopes for an honest negotiated settlement have patently come to nothing. The second is that the enemy in the field is showing no sign of a willingness to de-escalate his own military actions.

IN SHORT, nothing whatever has changed in the deep and substantive facts of life in this war, except in the sense that the President has been able to buy some time in which to try to deal with a stony dilemma that is no less hard than when he entered office. Clearly, with congressional elections in the offing, he will not wish in 1970 to abandon disengagement in favor of more American military commitment. It may be, however, that the unalterable realities will not yield to his wishes.

It may be, indeed, that before the new year has run its course he may have been compelled either to widen the war or in substance to concede a bankruptcy of the American commitment to South Vietnam. This is why it is that all that has thus far happened in his administration is only tentative and introductory; the high-noon decisions still lie ahead.

Grim Outlook For The 1970s: Computers Starving For Data

WASHINGTON — One of the major problems we face in the 1970s is that so many computers will be built in the next decade that there will be a shortage of data to feed them.

Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, director of the Computer Proliferation Center at Grogbottom, has voiced concern about the crisis and has urged a crash program to produce enough data to get our computers through the Seventies.

"We didn't realize," the professor told me, "that computers would absorb so much information in such a fast period of time. But if our figures are correct, every last bit of data in the world will have been fed into a machine by Jan. 12, 1976, and an information famine would follow, which could spread across the world."

"IT SOUNDS serious," I said.

"It is serious," he replied. "Man has created his own monster. He never realized when he invented the computer that there would not be enough statistics to feed it. Even now, there are some computers starving to death because there is no information to put into them. At the same time, the birth rate of computers is increasing by 30 per cent a year. Barring some sort of worldwide holocaust, we may soon have to find data for 30 million computers with new ones being born every day."

"You make it sound so frightening."

"It is frightening," Professor Applebaum said. "The new generation of computers is more sophisticated than the older generation, and the computers will refuse to remain idle just because there is nothing to compute, analyze or calculate. Left to their own devices, the Lord only knows what they will do."

"IS THERE ANY solution, professor?"

"New sources of data must be found. The government must expand, and involved studies must be thought up to make use of the computers' talents. The scientific community, instead of trying to solve problems with computers, must work on finding problems for the computers to solve."

"Even if the scientists really don't want the answers?"

"Naturally. The scientific community invented the computer. Now it must find ways of feeding it.

"IS THERE ANY hope that the government will wake up to the data famine in time?"

"We have a program ready to go as soon as the bureaucrats in Washington give us the word. We are recommending that no computer can be plugged more than three hours a day.

"We are also asking the government for $50 billion to set up data manufacturing plants all over the country. This data mixed with soy beans could feed hundreds of thousands of computer families for months.

"And finally we are advocating a birth control program for computers. By forcing a computer to swallow a bit of erroneous information, we could make it sterile forever, and it would be impossible for it to reproduce any more of its kind."

"WOULD YOU advocate abortions for computers?" I asked Applebaum.

"Only if the Vatican's computer gives us its blessing."

Message To Remember: 'One Solitary Life'

BEFORE THE AFTERGLOW of Christmas has worn off and the Christmas spirit has been put into mothballs for another year, it is still timely to reflect on the great event which Christmas commemorates.

This year's crop of greeting cards produced several with the heading, "One Solitary Life."

In this materialistic age when we are afflicted by a rash of "drop-outs from society," we can all profit by the message of "One Solitary Life":

"HE WAS BORN IN an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman.

"He grew up in still another village, where He worked in a carpenter shop until he was 30.

"Then for three years He was an itinerant preacher.

"He never wrote a book.

"He never held an office.

"He never had a family or owned a house.

"He didn't go to college.

"He never visited a big city. He never traveled 200 miles from the place where he was born.

"He did none of the things one usually associates with greatness. He had no credentials but himself.

"He was only 33 when the tide of public opinion turned against him. His friends ran away.

"He was turned over to his enemies. He was nailed to a cross between two thieves. While he was dying, his executioners gambled for his clothing, the only property He had on earth.

"When He was dead, He was laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

"Nineteen centuries have come and gone, and today He is the central figure of the human race and the leader of mankind's progress.

"All the armies that ever marched, all the navies that ever sailed, all the parliaments that ever sat, all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man on earth as much as that one solitary life."

ONLY THREE SUCH CARDS turned up amongst this year's crop of nearly 1,000 Christmas greetings received in the mail.

One was postmarked Lompoc, one was from Santa Rosa, and one was mailed in San Rafael.

Curiously, each was signed in the name of a family instead of a list of the individuals who make up the family.

If the children of those families do not appreciate today how blessed they are to have been born into those families, they most assuredly will realize and appreciate their special blessing when they have grown older and more mature.

How Old Is Your Pet?

Figuring a dog's or cat's age in terms of human years is a tricky business. The common notion that one year of a dog's age is equal to seven human years has always seemed wrong to us. The oldest dog on record lived 34 years, which works out at 238 years or twice the recorded age of any human.

In the December issue of Natural History, David P. Willoughby presents some formulas which he has worked out. Here they are for the dog, the cat and the horse:

A dog's age equals .333 of a man's age minus 5.5 years. A cat's age is .385 of a man's age minus 7.0 years. A horse's age is .406 of a man's age minus 3.5 years.

The Decade Of Obfuscation

The 1960s, which certainly must go down as the Turbulent Sixties, might also be called the Decade of Obfuscation.

At no time has there been so much talk about "communication" as in the decade which now is rapidly moving to its close. And probably at no time has communication been more obscured by the very ones who talked about it.

This has not been for lack of means. The printed media have produced more words than ever before. Radio and television have multiplied their output.

The trouble is that too many of the words have been without meaning, or with twisted meaning. Most of the books and articles deploring a "communications gap" have been written in language which sadly failed to communicate.

This may in part be a result of the decline in the teaching of grammar and composition. We rather think it is largely just a case of running off at the mouth (and the typewriter). We certainly don't need more communication. What we need is clearer communication.

"We are also asking the government for $50 billion to set up data manufacturing plants all over the country. This data mixed with soy beans could feed hundreds of thousands of computer families for months.

"And finally we are advocating a birth control program for computers. By forcing a computer to swallow a bit of erroneous information, we could make it sterile forever, and it would be impossible for it to reproduce any more of its kind."

"WOULD YOU advocate abortions for computers?" I asked Applebaum.

"Only if the Vatican's computer gives us its blessing."

Message To Remember: 'One Solitary Life'

BEFORE THE AFTERGLOW of Christmas has worn off and the Christmas spirit has been put into mothballs for another year, it is still timely to reflect on the great event which Christmas commemorates.

This year's crop of greeting cards produced several with the heading, "One Solitary Life."

In this materialistic age when we are afflicted by a rash of "drop-outs from society," we can all profit by the message of "One Solitary Life":

"HE WAS BORN IN an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman.

"He grew up in still another village, where He worked in a carpenter shop until he was 30.

"Then for three years He was an itinerant preacher.

"He never wrote a book.

"He never held an office.

"He never had a family or owned a house.

"He didn't go to college.

"He never visited a big city. He never traveled 200 miles from the place where he was born.

"He did none of the things one usually associates with greatness. He had no credentials but himself.

"He was only 33 when the tide of public opinion turned against him. His friends ran away.

"He was turned over to his enemies. He was nailed to a cross between two thieves. While he was dying, his executioners gambled for his clothing, the only property He had on earth.

"When He was dead, He was laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

"Nineteen centuries have come and gone, and today He is the central figure of the human race and the leader of mankind's progress.

"All the armies that ever marched, all the navies that ever sailed, all the parliaments that ever sat, all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man on earth as much as that one solitary life."

ONLY THREE SUCH CARDS turned up amongst this year's crop of nearly 1,000 Christmas greetings received in the mail.

One was postmarked Lompoc, one was from Santa Rosa, and one was mailed in San Rafael.

Curiously, each was signed in the name of a family instead of a list of the individuals who make up the family.

If the children of those families do not appreciate today how blessed they are to have been born into those families, they most assuredly will realize and appreciate their special blessing when they have grown older and more mature.

How Old Is Your Pet?

Figuring a dog's or cat's age in terms of human years is a tricky business. The common notion that one year of a dog's age is equal to seven human years has always seemed wrong to us. The oldest dog on record lived 34 years, which works out at 238 years or twice the recorded age of any human.

In the December issue of Natural History, David P. Willoughby presents some formulas which he has worked out. Here they are for the dog, the cat and the horse:

A dog's age equals .333 of a man's age minus 5.5 years. A cat's age is .385 of a man's age minus 7.0 years. A horse's age is .406 of a man's age minus 3.5 years.

The Decade Of Obfuscation

The 1960s, which certainly must go down as the Turbulent Sixties, might also be called the Decade of Obfuscation.

At no time has there been so much talk about "communication" as in the decade which now is rapidly moving to its close. And probably at no time has communication been more obscured by the very ones who talked about it.

This has not been for lack of means. The printed media have produced more words than ever before. Radio and television have multiplied their output.

The trouble is that too many of the words have been without meaning, or with twisted meaning. Most of the books and articles deploring a "communications gap" have been written in language which sadly failed to communicate.

This may in part be a result of the decline in the teaching of grammar and composition. We rather think it is largely just a case of running off at the mouth (and the typewriter). We certainly don't need more communication. What we need is clearer communication.

Bouquets—And Nary A Brickbat

On this day after Christmas, we issue only bouquets — no brickbat.

BOUQUETS to all the unpaid public officials — members of city, county and district commissions, school boards, etc. — who put in many hours and much earnest effort throughout the year and receive in recompense mostly complaints and criticisms (sometimes from this newspaper, too).

BOUQUETS to the Marin County Real Estate Board and the many others who sprang to the assistance of the Billy R. Huskey family when its plight became known.

BOUQUETS to the countless others who assisted the less fortunate at Christmas time, often without notice and with no thought to receiving credit for their deeds.

BOUQUETS to the great majority of Marin adolescents, in school and out, who are building their lives toward useful citizenship while most of the notice goes to the raucous minority of trouble makers.

BOUQUETS to those who serve us around the clock, even on Christmas — the police, firemen, nurses, and standby storm crews of county, cities, and utility companies.

And, last but not least, BOUQUETS to our I-J letter writers. Never afraid to speak out, they subject each issue to public debate and keep the "town meeting" alive in the columns of their newspaper.

Ethnic Studies Not Expensive

I would like to attempt an answer to Mrs. (Kay D.) Russo's letter of Dec. 19 in which she raised questions about the Fairfax School District. Mrs. Russo expressed concern that a district admittedly short of funds is able to initiate a program in ethnic studies.

Mrs. Russo is entirely correct in her statements about this district's need for money. As a member of the School Finance Study Committee I was able to see firsthand this fall many evidences of the most stringent economy in the Fairfax schools. This district has been able to pay for only its most urgent needs in salary raises, maintenance of buildings, classroom materials and curriculum planning. . .

How, then, asks Mrs. Russo, can a poor district initiate a program in ethnic studies? One reason is that such a program happens to cost almost nothing. It was a matter of collecting articles and books already in our library and preparing a bibliography. Furthermore, many teachers who have taken courses in ethnic studies are prepared to teach the course.

It is precisely this kind of creative planning that our committee found commendable. . . I am proud that the Fairfax School District has again demonstrated its ability to use its limited funds wisely.

LINES ON LIVING

Be Yourself! Don't Be A Second-Hand Man

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

The object lesson of life and experience is: Don't run! Get hold of yourself before it's too late. Become the Columbus of your own soul to find in yourself, in the words of Sir J. Stevens, "a continent of undiscovered character."

True, it takes more courage than we can imagine to become the architect of our character and soul. For the multitudes of mass-man in a mass-society are scarcely more than strangers to themselves. They find it more convenient to run after the outermost fashion of exterior conformity rather than the innermost passion of inward individuality. Like fleeing Jonahs they run, and running becomes a habit, a way of life, a destiny, until they are afraid to be themselves and uncomfortable in being unlike others. They look at themselves instead of into themselves and seek to please other tastes because they have lost taste in themselves and have a second-hand life, with little individual uniqueness and originality.

THERE ARE MANY second-hand men walking the streets because they fail to define themselves, to affirm themselves, to tunein on themselves. They run like the proverbial man in the ad, who is a bundle of energy without direction, because a spring is hooked on to his back and he's all wound up in exploding velocity. We recognize such men in Oscar Wilde's description when he says: "Most people are other people. Their thoughts are someone else's opinions, their lives a mimicry, their passions, a quotation."

The timorous soul, shrinking from fear of getting to know and confront himself, is devoid of courage to relate and mingle with others and is captive of a house of bondage in which strangers reside — outer images, strange gods, imitation characters.

THERE IS a legitimate and healthy struggle within us in our duality of being. Like stars, each of us must shine in his own light and not, like a moon, reflect the light of another star. And yet, all individual stars, if they are not to burn and wink out of existence, must be arrayed in a system of constellations and galaxies within a rhythmic pattern and order.

The cosmic creature, man, can take his lesson from the stars themselves, in which the shining worlds are the actors, the universe is their stage, and their adventure is nothing short of eternity.

And while we must shine brightly in our own individual stars, with all the light and warmth of our fire, we cannot dislodge our star from our human constellation and escape our system, or we shall end up in ashes like a falling star.

ONLY BY the cultivation of our character and our personal experience will we be able to telescope our sights toward such vision, in this, the greatest drama of man: to partake of the universe and see our role in it as we extend ourselves with our fellowmen in a march toward the stars.

In character it is not so important what a man is doing for himself as what he is trying to do with himself: not so much to know where he may go but for what he must stand; not when he may arrive but what he may take along with him; not with what he lives, but what lives in him. And in this adventure the stars are not the limit.

Whose Side Is State Department On?

Some "nonstrategic" items that are cleared for export to Soviet Europe include: virgin mercury, aircraft parts, explosives, digital computers, copper cable, petroleum, airborne communications equipment, cartridge stock, and much, much more.

The Communists say 80 per cent of the war material going into North Vietnam is from Soviet Europe. If any of that is part of or made possible by our "nonstrategic" trade to Soviet Europe than that trade is treason.

Now the State Department has announced an easing of "nonstrategic" trade restrictions with Communist China (I-J, Dec. 19). As Communist China has a border with North Vietnam, this easing of restrictions would greatly decrease the logistic problems of the Communist enemy in Vietnam.

Just whose side is the State Department on?

New Year To Bring Showdowns For Nixon's Administration

WASHINGTON — The coming new year will bring the first really critical tests, the first shoot-out showdowns, to the Nixon administration, and poignantly so on Vietnam. Contrary to a great deal of solemn pro-and-con analyzing of the record to date, the fact is that 1969 has been more nearly a prolonged probationary period for the President than a time of crises met and mastered.

The administration's principal achievement in the old year has been simply to mark out the path of its purposes and to set its tone. It has been only the overture to the opera, only the prologue to a book that is yet to be written.

To be sure, some of Mr. Nixon's more generalized campaign pledges have in fact already been fulfilled. That lowering of the national voice which he promised is now a reality. The objective of "bringing us together" has, to a considerably lesser degree, been vindicated — although in this case the process has been confined only to a concurrent majority of the conservative middle with the consequence of further alienation of the liberal left.

THE NET OF IT is that the President has indeed created a large constituency, in purely political and in possibly transient terms, which has given him a breathing space and which in a temperate sort of way wishes him well.

Because of his own carefully modulated words and actions and because of the rarely exampled current disarray of a Democratic party led mainly by shouting doctrinaries who influence only each other, he is today in a very strong position as against the distant prospect of the 1972 presidential election. As of today, no rational observer would give the Democrats more than the thinnest of chances to overturn the president in 1972.

Still, the operative point is that the period of grace granted to the President is running out with the old year, and from now on he will be on his own in a way he has not yet known. Of the three transcendental problems before him, two — violence in its various forms and inflation — are nowhere near a solution. And the third — the Vietnam War — is far less close to a solution than the public seems to suppose.

FOR THE FAILURE to date really to engage crime, the Democratic congress is on balance the responsible agency. Ditto as to the reality of a still-unchecked inflation.

On Vietnam, however, the buck must stop at the desk of the President himself. That he has done to date as well as he has done, in a most complex and risky policy of slow disengagement intended simultaneously to avoid an American defeat and to placate antiwarism here at home, is in itself something of a miracle.

Thus far, he has managed to keep all but the most extreme of doves off his back by the simple circumstance that he is, after all, withdrawing some of our troops. Thus far he has managed to keep all but the extreme hawks off his back by the circumstance that he has not, after all, reduced to the point of true danger the totality of American military power in Vietnam.

And yet two sullen and fundamental truths still abide. The first of these is that the President's hopes for an honest negotiated settlement have patently come to nothing. The second is that the enemy in the field is showing no sign of a willingness to de-escalate his own military actions.

IN SHORT, nothing whatever has changed in the deep and substantive facts of life in this war, except in the sense that the President has been able to buy some time in which to try to deal with a stony dilemma that is no less hard than when he entered office. Clearly, with congressional elections in the offing, he will not wish in 1970 to abandon disengagement in favor of more American military commitment. It may be, however, that the unalterable realities will not yield to his wishes.

It may be, indeed, that before the new year has run its course he may have been compelled either to widen the war or in substance to concede a bankruptcy of the American commitment to South Vietnam. This is why it is that all that has thus far happened in his administration is only tentative and introductory; the high-noon decisions still lie ahead.

Grim Outlook For The 1970s: Computers Starving For Data

WASHINGTON — One of the major problems we face in the 1970s is that so many computers will be built in the next decade that there will be a shortage of data to feed them.

Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, director of the Computer Proliferation Center at Grogbottom, has voiced concern about the crisis and has urged a crash program to produce enough data to get our computers through the Seventies.

"We didn't realize," the professor told me, "that computers would absorb so much information in such a fast period of time. But if our figures are correct, every last bit of data in the world will have been fed into a machine by Jan. 12, 1976, and an information famine would follow, which could spread across the world."

"IT SOUNDS serious," I said.

"It is serious," he replied. "Man has created his own monster. He never realized when he invented the computer that there would not be enough statistics to feed it. Even now, there are some computers starving to death because there is no information to put into them. At the same time, the birth rate of computers is increasing by 30 per cent a year. Barring some sort of worldwide holocaust, we may soon have to find data for 30 million computers with new ones being born every day."

"You make it sound so frightening."

"It is frightening," Professor Applebaum said. "The new generation of computers is more sophisticated than the older generation, and the computers will refuse to remain idle just because there is nothing to compute, analyze or calculate. Left to their own devices, the Lord only knows what they will do."

"IS THERE ANY solution, professor?"

"New sources of data must be found. The government must expand, and involved studies must be thought up to make use of the computers' talents. The scientific community, instead of trying to solve problems with computers, must work on finding problems for the computers to solve."

"Even if the scientists really don't want the answers?"

"Naturally. The scientific community invented the computer. Now it must find ways of feeding it.

"IS THERE ANY hope that the government will wake up to the data famine in time?"

"We have a program ready to go as soon as the bureaucrats in Washington give us the word. We are recommending that no computer can be plugged more than three hours a day.

"We are also asking the government for $50 billion to set up data manufacturing plants all over the country. This data mixed with soy beans could feed hundreds of thousands of computer families for months.

"And finally we are advocating a birth control program for computers. By forcing a computer to swallow a bit of erroneous information, we could make it sterile forever, and it would be impossible for it to reproduce any more of its kind."

"WOULD YOU advocate abortions for computers?" I asked Applebaum.

"Only if the Vatican's computer gives us its blessing."

Alaska Oil: Billion-Dollar Gamble

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — No one — not even the oil companies who bet close to a billion dollars on it recently — is certain of the magnitude of the oil lying beneath Alaska's north slope area.

But the companies are sure enough that they have come close to matching what they paid for oil field lease rights with a $900-million pool to build a pipeline to help get the black gold out of Alaska. With an estimated $10 billion-$100 billion in oil profits at stake, they figure it's worth every penny.

By far, the largest problem facing oil prospectors is not how to get the oil, but how to bring it back. Last summer, Standard Oil outfitted a huge supertanker with a special ice-breaking bow and sent it to ram through the ice-choked Northwest Passage across northern Canada.

The project proved it was feasible for ice-braking tankers to get to northern Alaska and back — at least in the summer — but the problem of getting the oil from the northern fields to southern warm water ports still has not been solved, except on paper.

On paper, here's how it would work:

An 800-mile pipeline, four feet in diameter, would carry the liquid black gold from the wells to a southern warm water port, such as Valdez, on the shore of the Alaska Gulf.

When the oil comes out of the ground in the Prudhoe Bay area, it will already be hot, so it will be unnecessary to heat it to allow it to flow through the pipe.

Plans for the trans-Alaska line call for 17 pumping stations along its length. Each pumping station would bleed oil from the line itself to use as fuel for pumping power.

About 42 miles of the line, over frozen tundra, would have to be elevated and wrapped in insulation in order to prevent it from melting through the tundra's permafrost and sinking into a muddy morass.

In nonelevated sections, the pipe would be laid in an eight-foot ditch and surrounded by gravel for further insulation.

Although the contract for the massive pipe has already been let to a Japanese steel mill, and it is due to be shipped over the next year-and-a-half, it is not yet certain the line from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez will be approved.

Permission must be granted by both the U. S. government and the Alaska state government. So far, clearance has been held up by congressional hearings, arguments about the effect of the line on Eskimos and caribou and discussion on whether the pipe will disfigure the Alaska landscape.

There are at least two other possibilities for transporting the oil from the frozen north.

A CAanadian group is talking about the possibility of building a billion-dollar, 1,640-mile line to Edmonton. A line south from Edmonton already connects Canada with major U. S. consumption centers.

Still another possibility is a trans-U. S. pipeline, eliminating the need for ice-breaking tankers. The oil would be piped from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez. From the warm-water port of Valdez, it would be shipped by tanker to Washington's Puget Sound, and from there via another pipe to Chicago and the eastern part of the United States.

Whatever the manner of carrying the oil, and whatever the expense involved, oilmen are going full steam ahead on the assumption that the riches under the cold Alaskan soil are worth as much as it takes.

WORKS FOR MINORITIES

San Jose Police Chief Stresses Both Social, Lawman's Role

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—San Jose Police Chief J. R. Blackmore has 40 years experience in which he has fought lynch mobs as well as gangsters. He believes police should take the side of social change.

Blackmore, 62, wields his commanding influence to get benefits for racial minority groups. He sees his men, more than anything else, as "social service workers."

"We are now coming to realize that the police should not remain passive bystanders. We can no longer remain mute in view of the social problems that surround us daily," he said in an interview.

These are views of a man who joined the force in 1929 before the department had radios. Blackmore, a semi-pro baseball player, was recruited by the department so he could play on its team.

LYNCH TROUBLES

In 1934 Blackmore and one other officer fired tear gas for hours in an unsuccessful attempt to keep a mob from battering down jail doors and lynching two suspected kidnappers. Other police occupied themselves directing traffic nearby.

Blackmore, who in his early years volunteered his own time to drive voters to the polls in a patrol car, has devoted much time in his 23 years as chief to raising money for charities and urging passage of municipal bond issues.

"I can raise $50,000 in an evening for a good cause," Blackmore said.

As an active member of just about every civic organization in town and an elder of the Presbyterian Church, it's not surprising that he is the local 1969 man of the year of the City of Hope project.

CHIEF'S STYLE

Blackmore's style is illustrated by his handling of a demonstration by Mexican-American youths last year at City Hall.

"I marched them right into the council chambers, and we had a long talk," he said.

"The result was a system by which we take these kids on a regular basis for rides in patrol cars. They have a ball."

When troubled by a group of youthful gangs: "We corraled them down to my office and the result was new training and athletic programs. Later, in a murder case, they told us if the killer was one of theirs, they'd turn him in. He turned out to be an Anglo."

In San Jose, one of the nation's fastest growing cities, with a population of 450,000, the main trouble spot is the east side, home of impoverished Negroes who are 2 per cent of the population, and Mexican-Americans, 15 per cent.

Now the Police Athletic League is building its own athletic center on 16 acres of donated east side land with $1.4 million from private, municipal and federal sources.

The police themselves, on and off duty, will operate the center, and Blackmore expects it to be an example for the nation.

STAR ATHLETES

"Our department has a wealth of champion athletes," Blackmore said. "Kids worship champions. That's the value of the thing."

The department is in the process of setting up an east side substation for the sole purpose of permitting booking, processing and releasing persons in their own neighborhood, rather than downtown.

San Jose police have 63 programs considered community relations by various departments in the country. The number of officers doing this work, narrowly construed, is four times the percentage in San Francisco.

Blackmore's officers arrange with citizens to chat with their neighbors in their homes, conduct weekly radio broadcasts in two languages, make numerous speeches in schools about narcotics, take teen-agers to visit prisons and keep weekly office hours at a troubled high school.

When minority students complained bitterly about the apprentice program at City College, Blackmore intervened and obtained a solution satisfactory to the students.

"I took a stand, and I think I had a right to take a stand," Blackmore said. "If a dispute is going to cause a riot, it's going to effect me directly.

"The sooner we speak out in law enforcement, better off we will be. The answer isn't in giving us more guns and gas."

However, Blackmore thinks police should get involved in social issues only "when we are going to be part of the result."

COLLEGE LINKS

At San Jose State College, which has 24,000 students and its quota of demonstrations, Blackmore says he insisted his personnel have regular meetings with faculty and students.

"We want to know who is right," Blackmore said. "I'm damned if I want to go over there and push people around if they are right.

"The whole concept of law enforcement is changing. People think our purpose is to arrest people, but you don't arrest them for going 27 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone.

Suez's Woes Prove South Africa Gains

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Closing of the Suez Canal following the six day Israeli-Arab war in 1967 has been a boon to South Africa's harbors.

Since 1967 ships have sailed around the Cape of Good Hope into South African ports at a rate that has reached about 1,000 a month, with resulting far-reaching economic and strategic implications for this country.

The number of ships rounding the Cape and calling at one of the country's major harbors — Durban, Cape Town, Port Elizabeth and East London—has nearly doubled since June, 1967.

SUEZ DONE FOR?

And while some ship-owners may still be looking toward the Suez Canal and wondering about the possibility of it reopening, shipping authorities in South Africa are confident the Suez Canal will never again become one of the world's major waterways.

Many shipping people agree that Suez has seen its best days. For as ships grow in size, they say, the canal will become too small. It also is a fact that although the canal has been closed for more than two years, there has been remarkably little disruption of world trade.

NO TROUBLE

Figures for immediately before and after the closing of the Suez Canal show a phenomenal jump in the number of ships rounding the Cape and the amount of tonnage handled. In the year June, 1966, to June, 1967 7,370 ships rounded the Cape and the gross tonnage handled at Cape Town harbor was 46,487,000. Then from June 1967, to June, 1968, the number of ships rose to 12,268 and cargo handled at Cape Town harbor was 95,337,000 tons.

The latest figures available for the year 1968-69 indicate there will be no slack in the activity that has gripped South African ports—especially Durben and Cape Town, the two biggest. At the end of April this year 13,890 ships already had used the Cape sea route.

According to one shipping source, the revenue to South Africa from ships entering its harbors can be calculated on an average of between $560 to $700 per ship. Since June, 1967, 3,000 diverted ships called at Cape Town and 4,000 at Durban harbor. This gives an estimated extra revenue of $4.5 million in berthing fees alone to which must be added income from food and provisions and other trade.

According to a spokesman for Cape Town's office of the port captain, several thousand other ships stopped outside harbor limits for stores and mail to be taken to them by launch and helicopter, thus escaping harbor charges.

CAPE DECISION

The decision taken in March 1968, by the major oil companies never again to rely heavily on the Suez Canal for transporting oil has had a major impact on South Africa. Since they were forced to use the Cape route, oil companies have found that oil can be transported via the Cape in super tankers at a saving of up to 20 cents a barrel.

Shipyards already have orders for about 200 new tankers of which more than half are more than 200,000 tons and the rest more than 100,000 tons. None of these tankers will be able to get through the Suez Canal.

Apart from these considerations the closing of Suez also has resulted in a South African tourist boom. It is estimated that about 170,000 tourists have passed through either Durban or Cape Town from rerouted liners on their way to the Far East or Australia. It is further estimated that they have spent in the vicinity of $1 million on sightseeing and shopping excursions.

Lord Chalfont, Britain's minister of state, reported that the number of British registered ships passing around the Cape of Good Hope had more than tripled since the closing of the Suez Canal. Soviet Russia's use of the route also has risen dramatically. According to the Cape Town port captain more than one-third of the 13,980 vessels that passed during the year ending April 1969, were from Communist countries. And of the 5,500 Communist ships, nearly 3,900 were Russian.

For South Africa, the composite picture is a period of economic, industrial and strategic growth substantially helped by the Suez closure.

Britain's Royal Family Plans Much Travel In Coming Year

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's royal family will make 1970 a year of world travel, including a possible trip to the United States.

In March, Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and Princess Anne will set out on a marathon official tour which will take them right around the world. The first stop is Australia, where they will join in the centenary celebrations of Captain Cook's discovery of the continent. Then, on to New Zealand, Fiji, Tonga and the Pacific Islands.

In July, the Queen, Prince Philip, Princess Anne and Prince Charles plan a journey to Western Canada and the rugged lands of the Northwest Territory for an official tour which may take them to the United States on the way back.

AMERICAN TOUR

If plans for an American tour go through, it will be the first visit to the United States for both Princess Anne and Prince Charles. The last time the Queen visited America was in 1957.

The royal trips next year will be Princess Anne's first major overseas tours and she already is picking out a spectacular wardrobe.

Palace observers agree her lively personality will bring her success abroad. At 19, the royal debutante has frequented London's most fashionable night spots, danced along with a gyrating audience at the tribal rock musical "Hair," and kept in the mainstream of fashion with a wardrobe of minidresses and trouser suits.

Prince Charles, who came into the public spotlight with his investiture this summer as Prince of Wales, will join the royal family in their Australia-New Zealand tour during his Easter vacation from Cambridge University.

BACK TO SCHOOL

The prince, whose romantic life has been under constant scrutiny by newspapers since he became 21 in November, must be back at Cambridge by mid-April to study for final examination in June. Charles is hard at work for a Bachelor of Arts honors degree and determined finally to squelch critics who complained he was not up to college standards when Cambridge accepted him three years ago.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip enjoyed almost as much publicity in 1969 as their children. Prince Philip's claim in the fall that the royal family was going in the red sparked debate which dominated newspaper headlines for weeks and reached all the way into parliament. Members of Parliament and newspaper editors still are talking about whether to give the queen a raise.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Arab dissension and an unusually heavy air attack by Israel gave a new tilt this week to the precarious balance of the "hostile peace" in the Middle East.

The latest U.S. proposal for a solution, suggesting the return of territory occupied by Israel in 1967 in exchange for Arab guarantees of peace, was dismissed by Moscow as unlikely to be "constructive."

The plan had previously been assailed by Israel and the Arabs.

An Arab strategy conference in Rabat, Morocco, collapsed when Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser walked out because oil-rich Saudi Arabia and Kuwait would not contribute as much as he thought they should for the mobilization of Arab armies. A ceremonial closing session was boycotted by Syria, Iraq and Southern Yemen.

Arab political sources in Beirut, Lebanon, said leaders of Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Iraq will meet in Cairo next month to consider further action.

The Beirut sources said Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Libya, which have subsidized Egypt and Jordan to the tune of some $325 million since Israel overwhelmed them in 1967, had agreed to finance $84 million in undetailed "new arms contracts." It was uncertain how much Nasser had asked.

They said also that the conferees had decided to allocate $62 million for the Palestinian commandos who have been harassing Israel from neighboring Arab states.

On Christmas Day, Israeli warplanes pounded Egyptian positions along the Suez Canal for eight and one-half hours in the longest continuous air strike Israel had ever launched against an Arab country.

An Israeli army spokesman said targets receiving special attention included antiaircraft missile sites being rebuilt by the Egyptians. The sites had been blasted by Israeli planes more than a month ago.

Alaska Oil: Billion-Dollar Gamble

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — No one — not even the oil companies who bet close to a billion dollars on it recently — is certain of the magnitude of the oil lying beneath Alaska's north slope area.

But the companies are sure enough that they have come close to matching what they paid for oil field lease rights with a $900-million pool to build a pipeline to help get the black gold out of Alaska. With an estimated $10 billion-$100 billion in oil profits at stake, they figure it's worth every penny.

By far, the largest problem facing oil prospectors is not how to get the oil, but how to bring it back. Last summer, Standard Oil outfitted a huge supertanker with a special ice-breaking bow and sent it to ram through the ice-choked Northwest Passage across northern Canada.

The project proved it was feasible for ice-braking tankers to get to northern Alaska and back — at least in the summer — but the problem of getting the oil from the northern fields to southern warm water ports still has not been solved, except on paper.

On paper, here's how it would work:

An 800-mile pipeline, four feet in diameter, would carry the liquid black gold from the wells to a southern warm water port, such as Valdez, on the shore of the Alaska Gulf.

When the oil comes out of the ground in the Prudhoe Bay area, it will already be hot, so it will be unnecessary to heat it to allow it to flow through the pipe.

Plans for the trans-Alaska line call for 17 pumping stations along its length. Each pumping station would bleed oil from the line itself to use as fuel for pumping power.

About 42 miles of the line, over frozen tundra, would have to be elevated and wrapped in insulation in order to prevent it from melting through the tundra's permafrost and sinking into a muddy morass.

In nonelevated sections, the pipe would be laid in an eight-foot ditch and surrounded by gravel for further insulation.

Although the contract for the massive pipe has already been let to a Japanese steel mill, and it is due to be shipped over the next year-and-a-half, it is not yet certain the line from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez will be approved.

Permission must be granted by both the U. S. government and the Alaska state government. So far, clearance has been held up by congressional hearings, arguments about the effect of the line on Eskimos and caribou and discussion on whether the pipe will disfigure the Alaska landscape.

There are at least two other possibilities for transporting the oil from the frozen north.

A CAanadian group is talking about the possibility of building a billion-dollar, 1,640-mile line to Edmonton. A line south from Edmonton already connects Canada with major U. S. consumption centers.

Still another possibility is a trans-U. S. pipeline, eliminating the need for ice-breaking tankers. The oil would be piped from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez. From the warm-water port of Valdez, it would be shipped by tanker to Washington's Puget Sound, and from there via another pipe to Chicago and the eastern part of the United States.

Whatever the manner of carrying the oil, and whatever the expense involved, oilmen are going full steam ahead on the assumption that the riches under the cold Alaskan soil are worth as much as it takes.

WORKS FOR MINORITIES

San Jose Police Chief Stresses Both Social, Lawman's Role

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—San Jose Police Chief J. R. Blackmore has 40 years experience in which he has fought lynch mobs as well as gangsters. He believes police should take the side of social change.

Blackmore, 62, wields his commanding influence to get benefits for racial minority groups. He sees his men, more than anything else, as "social service workers."

"We are now coming to realize that the police should not remain passive bystanders. We can no longer remain mute in view of the social problems that surround us daily," he said in an interview.

These are views of a man who joined the force in 1929 before the department had radios. Blackmore, a semi-pro baseball player, was recruited by the department so he could play on its team.

LYNCH TROUBLES

In 1934 Blackmore and one other officer fired tear gas for hours in an unsuccessful attempt to keep a mob from battering down jail doors and lynching two suspected kidnappers. Other police occupied themselves directing traffic nearby.

Blackmore, who in his early years volunteered his own time to drive voters to the polls in a patrol car, has devoted much time in his 23 years as chief to raising money for charities and urging passage of municipal bond issues.

"I can raise $50,000 in an evening for a good cause," Blackmore said.

As an active member of just about every civic organization in town and an elder of the Presbyterian Church, it's not surprising that he is the local 1969 man of the year of the City of Hope project.

CHIEF'S STYLE

Blackmore's style is illustrated by his handling of a demonstration by Mexican-American youths last year at City Hall.

"I marched them right into the council chambers, and we had a long talk," he said.

"The result was a system by which we take these kids on a regular basis for rides in patrol cars. They have a ball."

When troubled by a group of youthful gangs: "We corraled them down to my office and the result was new training and athletic programs. Later, in a murder case, they told us if the killer was one of theirs, they'd turn him in. He turned out to be an Anglo."

In San Jose, one of the nation's fastest growing cities, with a population of 450,000, the main trouble spot is the east side, home of impoverished Negroes who are 2 per cent of the population, and Mexican-Americans, 15 per cent.

Now the Police Athletic League is building its own athletic center on 16 acres of donated east side land with $1.4 million from private, municipal and federal sources.

The police themselves, on and off duty, will operate the center, and Blackmore expects it to be an example for the nation.

STAR ATHLETES

"Our department has a wealth of champion athletes," Blackmore said. "Kids worship champions. That's the value of the thing."

The department is in the process of setting up an east side substation for the sole purpose of permitting booking, processing and releasing persons in their own neighborhood, rather than downtown.

San Jose police have 63 programs considered community relations by various departments in the country. The number of officers doing this work, narrowly construed, is four times the percentage in San Francisco.

Blackmore's officers arrange with citizens to chat with their neighbors in their homes, conduct weekly radio broadcasts in two languages, make numerous speeches in schools about narcotics, take teen-agers to visit prisons and keep weekly office hours at a troubled high school.

When minority students complained bitterly about the apprentice program at City College, Blackmore intervened and obtained a solution satisfactory to the students.

"I took a stand, and I think I had a right to take a stand," Blackmore said. "If a dispute is going to cause a riot, it's going to effect me directly.

"The sooner we speak out in law enforcement, better off we will be. The answer isn't in giving us more guns and gas."

However, Blackmore thinks police should get involved in social issues only "when we are going to be part of the result."

COLLEGE LINKS

At San Jose State College, which has 24,000 students and its quota of demonstrations, Blackmore says he insisted his personnel have regular meetings with faculty and students.

"We want to know who is right," Blackmore said. "I'm damned if I want to go over there and push people around if they are right.

"The whole concept of law enforcement is changing. People think our purpose is to arrest people, but you don't arrest them for going 27 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone.

Suez's Woes Prove South Africa Gains

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Closing of the Suez Canal following the six day Israeli-Arab war in 1967 has been a boon to South Africa's harbors.

Since 1967 ships have sailed around the Cape of Good Hope into South African ports at a rate that has reached about 1,000 a month, with resulting far-reaching economic and strategic implications for this country.

The number of ships rounding the Cape and calling at one of the country's major harbors — Durban, Cape Town, Port Elizabeth and East London— has nearly doubled since June, 1967.

SUEZ DONE FOR?

And while some ship-owners may still be looking toward the Suez Canal and wondering about the possibility of it reopening, shipping authorities in South Africa are confident the Suez Canal will never again become one of the world's major waterways.

Many shipping people agree that Suez has seen its best days. For as ships grow in size, they say, the canal will become too small. It also is a fact that although the canal has been closed for more than two years, there has been remarkably little disruption of world trade.

NO TROUBLE

Figures for immediately before and after the closing of the Suez Canal show a phenomenal jump in the number of ships rounding the Cape and the amount of tonnage handled. In the year June, 1966, to June, 1967 7,370 ships rounded the Cape and the gross tonnage handled at Cape Town harbor was 46,487,000. Then from June 1967, to June, 1968, the number of ships rose to 12,268 and cargo handled at Cape Town harbor was 95,337,000 tons.

The latest figures available for the year 1968-69 indicate there will be no slack in the activity that has gripped South African ports—especially Durben and Cape Town, the two biggest. At the end of April this year 13,890 ships already had used the Cape sea route.

According to one shipping source, the revenue to South Africa from ships entering its harbors can be calculated on an average of between $560 to $700 per ship. Since June, 1967, 3,000 diverted ships called at Cape Town and 4,000 at Durban harbor. This gives an estimated extra revenue of $4.5 million in berthing fees alone to which must be added income from food and provisions and other trade.

According to a spokesman for Cape Town's office of the port captain, several thousand other ships stopped outside harbor limits for stores and mail to be taken to them by launch and helicopter, thus escaping harbor charges.

CAPE DECISION

The decision taken in March 1968, by the major oil companies never again to rely heavily on the Suez Canal for transporting oil has had a major impact on South Africa. Since they were forced to use the Cape route, oil companies have found that oil can be transported via the Cape in super tankers at a saving of up to 20 cents a barrel.

Shipyards already have orders for about 200 new tankers of which more than half are more than 200,000 tons and the rest more than 100,000 tons. None of these tankers will be able to get through the Suez Canal.

Apart from these considerations the closing of Suez also has resulted in a South African tourist boom. It is estimated that about 170,000 tourists have passed through either Durban or Cape Town from rerouted liners on their way to the Far East or Australia. It is further estimated that they have spent in the vicinity of $1 million on sightseeing and shopping excursions.

Lord Chalfont, Britain's minister of state, reported that the number of British registered ships passing around the Cape of Good Hope had more than tripled since the closing of the Suez Canal. Soviet Russia's use of the route also has risen dramatically. According to the Cape Town port captain more than one-third of the 13,980 vessels that passed during the year ending April 1969, were from Communist countries. And of the 5,500 Communist ships, nearly 3,900 were Russian.

For South Africa, the composite picture is a period of economic, industrial and strategic growth substantially helped by the Suez closure.

Britain's Royal Family Plans Much Travel In Coming Year

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's royal family will make 1970 a year of world travel, including a possible trip to the United States.

In March, Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and Princess Anne will set out on a marathon official tour which will take them right around the world. The first stop is Australia, where they will join in the centenary celebrations of Captain Cook's discovery of the continent. Then, on to New Zealand, Fiji, Tonga and the Pacific Islands.

In July, the Queen, Prince Philip, Princess Anne and Prince Charles plan a journey to Western Canada and the rugged lands of the Northwest Territory for an official tour which may take them to the United States on the way back.

AMERICAN TOUR

If plans for an American tour go through, it will be the first visit to the United States for both Princess Anne and Prince Charles. The last time the Queen visited America was in 1957.

The royal trips next year will be Princess Anne's first major overseas tours and she already is picking out a spectacular wardrobe.

Palace observers agree her lively personality will bring her success abroad. At 19, the royal debutante has frequented London's most fashionable night spots, danced along with a gyrating audience at the tribal rock musical "Hair," and kept in the mainstream of fashion with a wardrobe of minidresses and trouser suits.

Prince Charles, who came into the public spotlight with his investiture this summer as Prince of Wales, will join the royal family in their Australia-New Zealand tour during his Easter vacation from Cambridge University.

BACK TO SCHOOL

The prince, whose romantic life has been under constant scrutiny by newspapers since he became 21 in November, must be back at Cambridge by mid-April to study for final examination in June. Charles is hard at work for a Bachelor of Arts honors degree and determined finally to squelch critics who complained he was not up to college standards when Cambridge accepted him three years ago.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip enjoyed almost as much publicity in 1969 as their children. Prince Philip's claim in the fall that the royal family was going in the red sparked debate which dominated newspaper headlines for weeks and reached all the way into parliament. Members of Parliament and newspaper editors still are talking about whether to give the queen a raise.

An Arab strategy conference in Rabat, Morocco, collapsed when Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser walked out because oil-rich Saudi Arabia and Kuwait would not contribute as much as he thought they should for the mobilization of Arab armies. A ceremonial closing session was boycotted by Syria, Iraq and Southern Yemen.

Arab political sources in Beirut, Lebanon, said leaders of Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Iraq will meet in Cairo next month to consider further action.

The Beirut sources said Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Libya, which have subsidized Egypt and Jordan to the tune of some $325 million since Israel overwhelmed them in 1967, had agreed to finance $84 million in undetailed "new arms contracts." It was uncertain how much Nasser had asked.

They said also that the conferees had decided to allocate $62 million for the Palestinian commandos who have been harassing Israel from neighboring Arab states.

On Christmas Day, Israeli warplanes pounded Egyptian positions along the Suez Canal for eight and one-half hours in the longest continuous air strike Israel had ever launched against an Arab country.

An Israeli army spokesman said targets receiving special attention included antiaircraft missile sites being rebuilt by the Egyptians. The sites had been blasted by Israeli planes more than a month ago.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

WASHINGTON — Vice President Spiro T. Anew took off on a 10-nation tour of Southeast Asia, carrying with him Presidential messages and moonrock samples for leaders of the nations on his itinerary.

BERLIN—Rudolh Hess, last of the major Nazis convicted of war crimes still remaining in confinement, saw his wife and son for the first time in 28 years. Hess is the only inmate of Spandau prison in West Berlin.

WASHINGTON — The 91st Congress adjourned its first session in an atmosphere of eased differences with the administration. Final acts of the session included passage of a bill President Richard M. Nixon is expected to use to expand trade with Communist nations.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Wholesale Price Rise Spiral Levelling Off?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The annual rate of wholesale price increases in the United States has been halved in December to 3.6 per cent compared with 7.2 per cent in November, government agencies report.

That could be one of the best bits of counter-inflationary news yet. The main reason for the slowdown prices is that there has been no big spurt in food prices during the month as there was last month.

Meanwhile, the government said overall consumer prices went up by an annual rate of 6 per cent in November compared with 4.8 per cent in October.

Christmas shopping closed with a rush in many cities after lagging so badly that many merchants said it was the poorest yule shopping season in memory. However, most experts felt that when actual figures are all in, total volume will be up from that of last year just about enough to cover the year's price rises.

The stock market was down the first two days of the short week, then rallied fairly vigorously on Christmas Eve.

The tax reform bill finally passed both houses of Congress and although President Richard M. Nixon has declared he considered the increases in personal exemptions inflationary, particularly in view of Congress' action in voting a 15 per cent rise in Social Security benefits, indications mounted that the President will sign both measures; he had threatened to veto them.

Some Wall Streeters and bankers professed to see some signs that the long rise in interest rates might have come to an end. At least, there were no significant rises during Christmas.

The ability of consumer resistance to halt inflation at least selectively was demonstrated during the yule season on the big Chicago egg market. Housewives simply refused to buy eggs when the price reached a 16-year high in mid-December. Sales slumped as much as 25 per cent and the traditional Christmas bowl of eggnog wa: consipicuously absent from many homes. Egg prices began to slip.

The new tax bill's provision cutting the oil industry's deple-

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Wholesale Price Rise Spiral Levelling Off?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The annual rate of wholesale price increases in the United States has been halved in December to 3.6 per cent compared with 7.2 per cent in November, government agencies report.

That could be one of the best bits of counter-inflationary news yet. The main reason for the slowdown prices is that there has been no big spurt in food prices during the month as there was last month.

Meanwhile, the government said overall consumer prices went up by an annual rate of 6 per cent in November compared with 4.8 per cent in October.

Christmas shopping closed with a rush in many cities after lagging so badly that many merchants said it was the poorest yule shopping season in memory. However, most experts felt that when actual figures are all in, total volume will be up from that of last year just about enough to cover the year's price rises.

The stock market was down the first two days of the short week, then rallied fairly vigorously on Christmas Eve.

The tax reform bill finally passed both houses of Congress and although President Richard M. Nixon has declared he considered the increases in personal exemptions inflationary, particularly in view of Congress' action in voting a 15 per cent rise in Social Security benefits, indications mounted that the President will sign both measures; he had threatened to veto them.

Some Wall Streeters and bankers professed to see some signs that the long rise in interest rates might have come to an end. At least, there were no significant rises during Christmas.

The ability of consumer resistance to halt inflation at least selectively was demonstrated during the yule season on the big Chicago egg market. Housewives simply refused to buy eggs when the price reached a 16-year high in mid-December. Sales slumped as much as 25 per cent and the traditional Christmas bowl of eggnog was consipicuously absent from many homes. Egg prices began to slip.

The new tax bill's provision cutting the oil industry's deple-

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Wholesale Price Rise Spiral Levelling Off?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The annual rate of wholesale price increases in the United States has been halved in December to 3.6 per cent compared with 7.2 per cent in November, government agencies report.

That could be one of the best bits of counter-inflationary news yet. The main reason for the slowdown prices is that there has been no big spurt in food prices during the month as there was last month.

Meanwhile, the government said overall consumer prices went up by an annual rate of 6 per cent in November compared with 4.8 per cent in October.

Christmas shopping closed with a rush in many cities after lagging so badly that many merchants said it was the poorest yule shopping season in memory. However, most experts felt that when actual figures are all in, total volume will be up from that of last year just about enough to cover the year's price rises.

The stock market was down the first two days of the short week, then rallied fairly vigorously on Christmas Eve.

The tax reform bill finally passed both houses of Congress and although President Richard M. Nixon has declared he considered the increases in personal exemptions inflationary, particularly in view of Congress' action in voting a 15 per cent rise in Social Security benefits, indications mounted that the President will sign both measures; he had threatened to veto them.

Some Wall Streeters and bankers professed to see some signs that the long rise in interest rates might have come to an end. At least, there were no significant rises during Christmas.

The ability of consumer resistance to halt inflation at least selectively was demonstrated during the yule season on the big Chicago egg market. Housewives simply refused to buy eggs when the price reached a 16-year high in mid-December. Sales slumped as much as 25 per cent and the traditional Christmas bowl of eggnog was consipicuously absent from many homes. Egg prices began to slip.

The new tax bill's provision cutting the oil industry's deple-

Wholesale Price Rise Spiral Levelling Off?

tion allowance from 27.5 per cent to 22 per cent is expected to cause an almost certain rise in domestic heating oil prices but gasoline prices probably won't be affected until spring.

Retail sales of new automobiles for the middle third of December lagged 14 per cent behind the pace of a year ago. General Motors and Chrysler took the whole drop. Ford and American Motors had tiny increases.

A federal reserve board report said the profit lag in industry is causing substantial cutbacks in capital spending plans for 1970 but various government agencies said they still expect outlays for new plants and machinery to rise 9.7 per cent next year compared with an increase for this year now estimated at 11.2 per cent.

Factory orders for durable goods were disclosed to have dropped 3.6 per cent in November.

The large stocks and low prices of wheat caused predictions that this year's domestic plantings of winter wheat will be slashed by 4.5 million acres to 43 million — the smallest since the 1890s.

McDonnell Douglas Corp. won out over Fairchild Hiller and North American Rockwell in the competition for the prime contract for the new twin-engine F15 supersonic fighter plane.

Wholesale Price Rise Spiral Levelling Off?

tion allowance from 27.5 per cent to 22 per cent is expected to cause an almost certain rise in domestic heating oil prices but gasoline prices probably won't be affected until spring.

Retail sales of new automobiles for the middle third of December lagged 14 per cent behind the pace of a year ago. General Motors and Chrysler took the whole drop. Ford and American Motors had tiny increases.

A federal reserve board report said the profit lag in industry is causing substantial cutbacks in capital spending plans for 1970 but various government agencies said they still expect outlays for new plants and machinery to rise 9.7 per cent next year compared with an increase for this year now estimated at 11.2 per cent.

Factory orders for durable goods were disclosed to have dropped 3.6 per cent in November.

The large stocks and low prices of wheat caused predictions that this year's domestic plantings of winter wheat will be slashed by 4.5 million acres to 43 million — the smallest since the 1890s.

McDonnell Douglas Corp. won out over Fairchild Hiller and North American Rockwell in the competition for the prime contract for the new twin-engine F15 supersonic fighter plane.

First Sandy, Then Don—And Vin May Be Next

The Los Angeles Dodgers in recent years have begun to feel like a drowning man who keeps getting a water hose turned on him as he comes up for air.

They lead the league in executive retirements. First, though, they traded away 500 lifetime stolen bases (Maury Wills) and 280 lifetime homers (Frank Howard). But that's not when it really hit the fans. When it really hit them (all two million of them) was when the Dodgers lost 369 lifetime wins, 5,600 innings pitched, 98 shutouts, four no-hit games and nearly 4,900 lifetime strikeouts. When Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale sent in their resignations, the Dodgers lost more than a duet, they lost a dynasty.

So, would you believe Walter O'Malley is afraid to answer his phone or pick up his mail these days for fear he will lose a red-haired, left-handed, ex-collegiate infielder who understands the infield fly rule but probably couldn't catch one, who knows when to bunt but probably not how, and who can spot a slider from three decks up but probably couldn't hit one with a snowshoe?

Vin Scully has never hit a fair ball for the Dodgers on the field, but he has never uttered a foul one off it. He has seen and described almost every ball thrown or caught by three generations of Dodgers from bullpen warmup to steals of home.

Catalyst In Mix-Marriage

He was the catalyst in the thorny mixed-marriage of Brooklyn and Los Angeles in the difficult year of adjustment (1958) when the Dodgers, psyched out by a ball park that looked like the world's biggest bathtub and a lot of fans who pronounced their "r's" and didn't shout "Youse bums" at every error, finished seventh. Scully was almost the only thing certifiably major league about the Dodgers that year. No matter where the team finishes, Scully leads HIS league.

He is without peer at making 9-0 games something you want to hang around and see how they come out. His post and pregame interviews indicate a craftsman who has done his homework because he never starts out with, "Gee, Lefty, you were great tonight, how come you were so great tonight, Lefty?" but is more apt to start out, "Lefty, in the seventh inning you threw a key pitch to Aaron, and it seems as if maybe it was a bad pitch but you got away with it? Was it, or did you make the kind of pitch you wanted when he hit that 390-foot out?"

A "homer" is a guy who salutes a foul tip on the part of the home team with fireworks, but implies a 600-foot grand slam homer on the part of the other team was made on a pitch the batter was trying to get away from. Scully is never a "homer" on the mike. The trouble is, he's one off it. But it's not the home team, it's home, period.

"It is no secret I am sick of the road," Scully will tell you privately—or publicly. With a growing family of three that he sees only a homestand at a time from March till October, Scully recently turned to a back-breaking homestand of his own when he took on the highly popular (30-rated) daytime television game show, "It Takes Two."

Either On Mike Or Airplane

For Scully, it almost did take two. He did 190 baseball games and 165 full network TV shows last year. He was either on a mike or an airplane, calling a game or emceeing one. Fortunately, the Fordham Thrush has a .400 larynx. He doesn't even take cough drops. Popular with show biz types, he has had such drop-in stars as Rowan and Martin, Johnny Carson, Buddy Hackett. This week, Henny Youngman and Dick Smothers are regulars. Koufax came on once and Annette Funicello was asked to guess what was the most consecutive batters he retired in any of his no-hitters (rather like asking which of a guy's castles had the biggest moat) and Annette showed she was either bad at arithmetic or at baseball when she guessed "88."

"I'm trying to show I can say something besides 'ball two, strike one'," explained Scully. "I love baseball but hate hotel lobbies." The Dodgers haven't felt this gloomy since the days they caught Koufax and Drysdale pricing carpet slippers. Without Vin, it may be cheaper to phone the game to the listeners.

San Rafael Continues Hot Streak

The far-flung high school basketball tournament trail got rocky for most Marin County Athletic League teams that ventured out on it yesterday.

For everybody but the San Rafael Bulldogs, that is.

The incredible Bulldogs ran their winning streak to 10 games yesterday, winning a pair at the Ukiah Tournament with obvious ease to push into the finals against Palo Alto tonight at 9 o'clock.

The Bulldogs knocked off St. Bernard's of Eureka, 54-32, in an afternoon game, with Don Duryee getting 12 points and 25 rebounds. San Rafael won it by outscoring St. Bernard's 36-13 in the second half after trailing in a tepid first half, 19-18.

The Bulldogs came back last night to whip a reasonably good Napa team, 74-56, with 11 Bulldogs getting into the scoring act, topped by Duryee's 17 points.

Redwood, the league's defending champion, wasn't so fortunate at the Pacific Tournament in San Leandro, bowing to St. Elizabeth's of Oakland, 79-69, despite a 28-point splurge by star forward Jerry Piro, who sank 14 out of 19 free throws.

Roger Smith, who finished the game with 19 points, led a third-quarter charge that put Redwood ahead by four, but the Giants couldn't hold on.

They'll play Pacific for third place at 7:30 tonight.

Novato will be going for fifth place against San Leandro at 6 o'clock in the same tournament. The Hornets dumped Encinal last night, 67-61, after trailing by 39-28 at the half. Junior Joe DeMeastri led the charge with a 29-point splurge.

Tamalpais lost a heart-breaking semi-final clash in the John F. Kennedy Tournament in Fremont, bowing to Buchser of Santa Clara, 72-71.

The Indians, after trailing by as much as 15 points with only six minutes left, climaxed a 30-point fourth quarter by going ahead, 71-70, then losing it all in the last eight seconds.

Jim McCammon came through with a 21-point performance for the Indians, who meet Mission San Jose for third place at 7 o'clock tonight.

San Marin ran into St. Patrick's of Vallejo at the Pinole Valley Tournament and was wiped out, 64-43 in short order, trailing, 37-15 at the half. Gary Howard got 15 points for the Mustangs, who play DeLasalle of Concord at 2 p.m. this afternoon in a consolation game.

In non-tournament games, Marin Catholic was ripped by Hillsdale, 67-45, losing its ninth game of the year in the first and third quarters, where the Wildcats scored only 11 points. Marin with 16 points.

Drake topped its alumni, Mike Parnow was tops for 72-70 with Jeff Meeker pouring in 18 points while John Campell led the alumns with 16 points.

Marin Tars Run Into J. C. Hurricane

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

SANTA MONICA — "Well, now we know what it's like to play the number one team," John Panagakis sighed this morning.

He didn't sound too anxious to find out again after his College of Marin saw its seven-game win streak snapped, not to speak of ripped and cut to little pieces by Compton Junior College of Los Angeles, the top-ranked junior college team in the state, 70-38, in the first round of the Santa Monica Invitational Tournament.

"They just blew us out of the gym in the second half," Panagakis said. "They're really amazing, a great team. They just pressured our offense for the whole game. Our defense wasn't bad and we did a good job rebounding, but we just couldn't score. They blocked 12 shots on us, and by that time, we'd be taking six-foot shots from five feet out."

The Tars trailed by only 12 points at the half, but it was all over in the first two minutes of the second half when Compton reeled off eight straight points.

"Somebody told me after the game that that was the lowest number of points they'd scored," Panagakis said. "I said that that wasn't the most points we'd scored, either."

The Tars were to play Los Angeles Harbor at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the double-elimination tournament.

Pat Schafer topped the Tars in scoring with 17 points, high for both teams. The Tars got off only 44 shots and made only 11 while Compton was bombing away for 81 shots, with 31 of them finding their mark.

Tattered Warriors Absorb More Lumps

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Resembling a tattered band of freedom fighters more than a pro basketball team, the San Francisco Warriors move into Baltimore tonight to take on the Bullets.

The Warriors, nearly recovered from a couple of old injuries, absorbed another new one last night in their 141-121 loss to Philadelphia. The defeat dropped the Warrior record to 17-18.

Guard Fritz Williams sat out the second half of the 76ers game after getting rapped on the elbow in the first half. The elbow puffed up quickly, but the Warriors are hoping the injury doesn't keep Williams out of the lineup.

Forward Jerry Lucas, out since Nov. 22 with a broken bone in his hand, returned briefly last night, scoring two points despite having little use of his heavily taped right hand. The broken bone in Lucas' hand is almost fully healed.

Guard Al Attles, no sooner back from a similar broken bone mishap, watched from the bench last night. He has a big knot over his knee, the result of a heavy bruise.

Center Nate Thurmond still is out of action with a sprained ankle, while forward Joe Ellis remains in San Francisco nursing a bad foot and an injured finger.

The injuries have forced San Francisco into a helter-skelter offense, often with three guards or with a forward temporarily playing center. Still, several players have turned in fine individual performances.

SMITH HIGH

Guard Odie Smith, playing his first game as a Warrior since coming from Cincinnati in a trade, was high scorer last night with 23 points. The nine-year veteran was acquired Thursday for a second round 1970 draft choice.

Rookie forward Bob Portman scored 20 points, veteran frontliner Dave Gambee also had 20 and the consistent Jeff Mullins poured in 21.

For the 76ers, guard Hal

No Relief In Sight At Tracks

ARCADIA, (AP) — The question of if or when Santa Anita's lucrative thoroughbred horse race winter season will begin went unanswered today after a strike blocked yesterday's scheduled opening.

Besides the forced shutdown of the Southern California track, the strike forced cancellation of yesterday's scheduled start of the Bay Meadows harness race meeting in San Mateo.

The two tracks feature the only horse racing activity available in the winter in California. Much the richer operation is Santa Anita, whose opener was to feature the $25,000-added Palos Verdes Handicap and defending champion Rising Market.

NEGOTIATIONS OFF

But the market wasn't rising on Santa Anita's stock. Contract negotiations between the AFL-CIO Service Employes International Union ahd the California Federation of Racing Associations, which broke down Wednesday, were not resumed.

Management and union spokesmen both indicated yesterday that a settlement was not near.

Stanford's Plunkett Holds Off Pro Suitors

STANFORD (AP) — No matter what happens to his West team in the annual East-West Shrine game today, Stanford Coach John Ralston has something to be happy about.

Jim Plunkett, Stanford's star quarterback, put Ralston and Indian fans out of their misery yesterday by announcing formally he would return to school in the fall and make one final attempt at getting the team into the Rose Bowl.

Plunkett sat out his sophomore year and thus has another year of football eligibility even though his class will graduate in June. His graduation will be delayed until the following January.

But because he is such an outstanding professional prospect and because his mother is blind and a widow, there was much speculation that Plunkett might elect to forego his final college season and turn pro next year.

And Plunkett, in a formal statement made through the Stanford athletic department, admitted it was a tempting possibility.

"To say that I didn't consider asking (pro football commissioner Pete) Rozelle to place my name in the draft pool, would not be entirely true," Plunkett said. "There is a great deal of money involved and my family is not exactly what you would call wealthy."

But, he added, there were other considerations, among them loyalty to Ralston and his teammates and the Stanford Buck Club which gave him his

WORLD WIDE TELEVISION

Ellis-Frazier Bout 'Set'

NEW YORK (AP) — It looks like Madison Square Garden, which had been trying to arrange a heavyweight title bout between Joe Frazier and Jimmy Ellis for almost a year, has finally arranged it. The Garden is expected to announce details of the 15-rounder scheduled for Feb. 16 at a Monday morning news conference.

The news conference was announced yesterday. Earlier this week, Harry Markson, director of boxing for the Garden, said he was confident the match would be finalized providing the settlement of "a few hitches" in the television setup.

Both fighters reportedly have been guaranteed $150,000 apiece against 30 per cent of the gate plus closed circuit television revenue. Frazier, a Philadelphian, is recognized as champion in seven states, including New York. Ellis, of Louisville, Ky., is the World Boxing Association titleholder.

The percentage take is expected to exceed the $150,000 figure, and a plan for deferred payments to the fighters apparently has locked up agreement by all parties. The fight will be televised throughout North America and, via satellite, to many parts of the world.

Cassius Clay, or Muhammad Ali, as he prefers to be called, still is recognized as the champion in some parts of the world.

Clay was stripped of his world title two years ago for refusing to obey the military draft.

Several promoters were eager for a Clay-Frazier confrontation, but they failed to obtain permission to stage it in several Florida cities or in Houston. Madison Square Garden resumed negotiations for the Frazier-Ellis meeting when the Clay-Frazier match fell through.

This time the Garden found Ellis more eager for the fight. Ellis has been idle 15 months and his title defense against Argentina's Gregorio Peralta, scheduled in Buenos Aires for last Saturday night, was canceled because of lack of interest and financial problems. In addition, the WBA began to put pressure on Ellis to defend his crown.

Redwood, the league's defending champion, wasn't so fortunate at the Pacific Tournament in San Leandro, bowing to St. Elizabeth's of Oakland, 79-69, despite a 28-point splurge by star forward Jerry Piro, who sank 14 out of 19 free throws.

Roger Smith, who finished the game with 19 points, led a third-quarter charge that put Redwood ahead by four, but the Giants couldn't hold on.

They'll play Pacific for third place at 7:30 tonight.

Novato will be going for fifth place against San Leandro at 6 o'clock in the same tournament. The Hornets dumped Encinal last night, 67-61, after trailing by 39-28 at the half. Junior Joe DeMeastri led the charge with a 29-point splurge.

Tamalpais lost a heart-breaking semi-final clash in the John F. Kennedy Tournament in Fremont, bowing to Buchser of Santa Clara, 72-71.

The Indians, after trailing by as much as 15 points with only six minutes left, climaxed a 30-point fourth quarter by going ahead, 71-70, then losing it all in the last eight seconds.

Jim McCammon came through with a 21-point performance for the Indians, who meet Mission San Jose for third place at 7 o'clock tonight.

San Marin ran into St. Patrick's of Vallejo at the Pinole Valley Tournament and was wiped out, 64-43 in short order, trailing, 37-15 at the half. Gary Howard got 15 points for the Mustangs, who play DeLasalle of Concord at 2 p.m. this afternoon in a consolation game.

In non-tournament games, Marin Catholic was ripped by Hillsdale, 67-45, losing its ninth game of the year in the first and third quarters, where the Wildcats scored only 11 points. Marin with 16 points.

Drake topped its alumni, Mike Parnow was tops for 72-70 with Jeff Meeker pouring in 18 points while John Campell led the alumns with 16 points.

Marin Tars Run Into J. C. Hurricane

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

SANTA MONICA — "Well, now we know what it's like to play the number one team." John Panagakis sighed this morning.

He didn't sound too anxious to find out again after his College of Marin saw its seven-game win streak snapped, not to speak of ripped and cut to little pieces by Compton Junior College of Los Angeles, the top-ranked junior college team in the state, 70-38, in the first round of the Santa Monica Invitational Tournament.

"They just blew us out of the gym in the second half," Panagakis said. "They're really amazing, a great team. They just pressured our offense for the whole game. Our defense wasn't bad and we did a good job rebounding, but we just couldn't score. They blocked 12 shots on us, and by that time, we'd be taking six-foot shots from five feet out."

The Tars trailed by only 12 points at the half, but it was all over in the first two minutes of the second half when Compton reeled off eight straight points.

"Somebody told me after the game that that was the lowest number of points they'd scored," Panagakis said. "I said that that wasn't the most points we'd scored, either."

The Tars were to play Los Angeles Harbor at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the double-elimination tournament.

Pat Schafer topped the Tars in scoring with 17 points, high for both teams. The Tars got off only 44 shots and made only 11 while Compton was bombing away for 81 shots, with 31 of them finding their mark.

Tattered Warriors Absorb More Lumps

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Resembling a tattered band of freedom fighters more than a pro basketball team, the San Francisco Warriors move into Baltimore tonight to take on the Bullets.

The Warriors, nearly recovered from a couple of old injuries, absorbed another new one last night in their 141-121 loss to Philadelphia. The defeat dropped the Warrior record to 17-18.

Guard Fritz Williams sat out the second half of the 76ers game after getting rapped on the elbow in the first half. The elbow puffed up quickly, but the Warriors are hoping the injury doesn't keep Williams out of the lineup.

Forward Jerry Lucas, out since Nov. 22 with a broken bone in his hand, returned briefly last night, scoring two points despite having little use of his heavily taped right hand. The broken bone in Lucas' hand is almost fully healed.

Guard Al Attles, no sooner back from a similar broken bone mishap, watched from the bench last night. He has a big knot over his knee, the result of a heavy bruise.

Center Nate Thurmond still is out of action with a sprained ankle, while forward Joe Ellis remains in San Francisco nursing a bad foot and an injured finger.

The injuries have forced San Francisco into a helter-skelter offense, often with three guards or with a forward temporarily playing center. Still, several players have turned in fine individual performances.

SMITH HIGH

Guard Odie Smith, playing his first game as a Warrior since coming from Cincinnati in a trade, was high scorer last night with 23 points. The nine-year veteran was acquired Thursday for a second round 1970 draft choice.

Rookie forward Bob Portman scored 20 points, veteran frontliner Dave Gambee also had 20 and the consistent Jeff Mullins poured in 21.

No Relief In Sight At Tracks

ARCADIA, (AP) — The question of if or when Santa Anita's lucrative thoroughbred horse race winter season will begin went unanswered today after a strike blocked yesterday's scheduled opening.

Besides the forced shutdown of the Southern California track, the strike forced cancellation of yesterday's scheduled start of the Bay Meadows harness race meeting in San Mateo.

The two tracks feature the only horse racing activity available in the winter in California. Much the richer operation is Santa Anita, whose opener was to feature the $25,000-added Palos Verdes Handicap and defending champion Rising Market.

NEGOTIATIONS OFF

But the market wasn't rising on Santa Anita's stock. Contract negotiations between the AFL-CIO Service Employes International Union ahd the California Federation of Racing Associations, which broke down Wednesday, were not resumed.

Management and union spokesmen both indicated yesterday that a settlement was not near.

Stanford's Plunkett Holds Off Pro Suitors

STANFORD (AP) — No matter what happens to his West team in the annual East-West Shrine game today, Stanford Coach John Ralston has something to be happy about.

Jim Plunkett, Stanford's star quarterback, put Ralston and Indian fans out of their misery yesterday by announcing formally he would return to school in the fall and make one final attempt at getting the team into the Rose Bowl.

Plunkett sat out his sophomore year and thus has another year of football eligibility even though his class will graduate in June. His graduation will be delayed until the following January.

But because he is such an outstanding professional prospect and because his mother is blind and a widow, there was much speculation that Plunkett might elect to forego his final college season and turn pro next year.

And Plunkett, in a formal statement made through the Stanford athletic department, admitted it was a tempting possibility.

"To say that I didn't consider asking (pro football commissioner Pete) Rozelle to place my name in the draft pool, would not be entirely true," Plunkett said. "There is a great deal of money involved and my family is not exactly what you would call wealthy."

But, he added, there were other considerations, among them loyalty to Ralston and his teammates and the Stanford Buck Club which gave him his

Ellis-Frazier Bout 'Set'

NEW YORK (AP) — It looks like Madison Square Garden, which had been trying to arrange a heavyweight title bout between Joe Frazier and Jimmy Ellis for almost a year, has finally arranged it. The Garden is expected to announce details of the 15-rounder scheduled for Feb. 16 at a Monday morning news conference.

The news conference was announced yesterday. Earlier this week, Harry Markson, director of boxing for the Garden, said he was confident the match would be finalized providing the settlement of "a few hitches" in the television setup.

Both fighters reportedly have been guaranteed $150,000 apiece against 30 per cent of the gate plus closed circuit television revenue. Frazier, a Philadelphian, is recognized as champion in seven states, including New York. Ellis, of Louisville, Ky., is the World Boxing Association titleholder.

The percentage take is expected to exceed the $150,000 figure, and a plan for deferred payments to the fighters apparently has locked up agreement by all parties. The fight will be televised throughout North America and, via satellite, to many parts of the world.

Cassius Clay, or Muhammad Ali, as he prefers to be called, still is recognized as the champion in some parts of the world.

Clay was stripped of his world title two years ago for refusing to obey the military draft.

Several promoters were eager for a Clay-Frazier confrontation, but they failed to obtain permission to stage it in several Florida cities or in Houston. Madison Square Garden resumed negotiations for the Frazier-Ellis meeting when the Clay-Frazier match fell through.

This time the Garden found Ellis more eager for the fight. Ellis has been idle 15 months and his title defense against Argentina's Gregorio Peralta, scheduled in Buenos Aires for last Saturday night, was canceled because of lack of interest and financial problems. In addition, the WBA began to put pressure on Ellis to defend his crown.

First Sandy, Then Don— And Vin May Be Next

The Los Angeles Dodgers in recent years have begun to feel like a drowning man who keeps getting a water hose turned on him as he comes up for air.

They lead the league in executive retirements. First, though, they traded away 500 lifetime stolen bases (Maury Wills) and 280 lifetime homers (Frank Howard). But that's not when it really hit the fans. When it really hit them (all two million of them) was when the Dodgers lost 369 lifetime wins, 5,600 innings pitched, 98 shutouts, four no-hit games and nearly 4,900 lifetime strikeouts. When Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale sent in their resignations, the Dodgers lost more than a duet, they lost a dynasty.

So, would you believe Walter O'Malley is afraid to answer his phone or pick up his mail these days for fear he will lose a red-haired, left-handed, ex-collegiate infielder who understands the infield fly rule but probably couldn't catch one, who knows when to bunt but probably not how, and who can spot a slider from three decks up but probably couldn't hit one with a snowshoe?

Vin Scully has never hit a fair ball for the Dodgers on the field, but he has never uttered a foul one off it. He has seen and described almost every ball thrown or caught by three generations of Dodgers from bullpen warmup to steals of home.

Catalyst In Mix-Marriage

He was the catalyst in the thorny mixed-marriage of Brooklyn and Los Angeles in the difficult year of adjustment (1958) when the Dodgers, psyched out by a ball park that looked like the world's biggest bathtub and a lot of fans who pronounced their "r's" and didn't shout "Youse bums" at every error, finished seventh. Scully was almost the only thing certifiably major league about the Dodgers that year. No matter where the team finishes, Scully leads HIS league.

He is without peer at making 9-0 games something you want to hang around and see how they come out. His post and pregame interviews indicate a craftsman who has done his homework because he never starts out with, "Gee, Lefty, you were great tonight, how come you were so great tonight, Lefty?" but is more apt to start out, "Lefty, in the seventh inning you threw a key pitch to Aaron, and it seems as if maybe it was a bad pitch but you got away with it? Was it, or did you make the kind of pitch you wanted when he hit that 390-foot out?"

A "homer" is a guy who salutes a foul tip on the part of the home team with fireworks, but implies a 600-foot grand slam homer on the part of the other team was made on a pitch the batter was trying to get away from. Scully is never a "homer" on the mike. The trouble is, he's one off it. But it's not the home team, it's home, period.

"It is no secret I am sick of the road," Scully will tell you privately—or publicly. With a growing family of three that he sees only a homestand at a time from March till October, Scully recently turned to a backbreaking homestand of his own when he took on the highly popular (30-rated) daytime television game show, "It Takes Two."

Either On Mike Or Airplane

For Scully, it almost did take two. He did 190 baseball games and 165 full network TV shows last year. He was either on a mike or an airplane, calling a game or emceeing one. Fortunately, the Fordham Thrush has a .400 larynx. He doesn't even take cough drops. Popular with show biz types, he has had such drop-in stars as Rowan and Martin, Johnny Carson, Buddy Hackett. This week, Henny Youngman and Dick Smothers are regulars. Koufax came on once and Annette Funicello was asked to guess what was the most consecutive batters he retired in any of his no-hitters (rather like asking which of a guy's castles had the biggest moat) and Annette showed she was either bad at arithmetic or at baseball when she guessed "88."

"I'm trying to show I can say something besides 'ball two, strike one'," explained Scully. "I love baseball but hate hotel lobbies." The Dodgers haven't felt this gloomy since the days they caught Koufax and Drysdale pricing carpet slippers. Without Vin, it may be cheaper to phone the game to the listeners.

San Rafael Continues Hot Streak

The far-flung high school basketball tournament trail got rocky for most Marin County Athletic League teams that ventured out on it yesterday.

For everybody but the San Rafael Bulldogs, that is.

The incredible Bulldogs ran their winning streak to 10 games yesterday, winning a pair at the Ukiah Tournament with obvious ease to push into the finals against Palo Alto tonight at 9 o'clock.

The Bulldogs knocked off St. Bernard's of Eureka, 54-32, in an afternoon game, with Don Duryee getting 12 points and 25 rebounds. San Rafael won it by outscoring St. Bernard's 36-13 in the second half after trailing in a tepid first half, 19-18.

The Bulldogs came back last night to whip a reasonably good Napa team, 74-56, with 11 Bulldogs getting into the scoring act, topped by Duryee's 17 points.

Redwood, the league's defending champion, wasn't so fortunate at the Pacific Tournament in San Leandro, bowing to St. Elizabeth's of Oakland, 79-69, despite a 28-point splurge by star forward Jerry Piro, who sank 14 out of 19 free throws.

Roger Smith, who finished the game with 19 points, led a third-quarter charge that put Redwood ahead by four, but the Giants couldn't hold on.

They'll play Pacific for third place at 7:30 tonight.

Novato will be going for fifth place against San Leandro at 6 o'clock in the same tournament. The Hornets dumped Encinal last night, 67-61, after trailing by 39-28 at the half. Junior Joe DeMeastri led the charge with a 29-point splurge.

Tamalpais lost a heart-breaking semi-final clash in the John F. Kennedy Tournament in Fremont, bowing to Buchser of Santa Clara, 72-71.

The Indians, after trailing by as much as 15 points with only six minutes left, climaxed a 30-point fourth quarter by going ahead, 71-70, then losing it all in the last eight seconds.

Jim McCammon came through with a 21-point performance for the Indians, who meet Mission San Jose for third place at 7 o'clock tonight.

San Marin ran into St. Patrick's of Vallejo at the Pinole Valley Tournament and was wiped out, 64-43 in short order, trailing, 37-15 at the half. Gary Howard got 15 points for the Mustangs, who play DeLasalle of Concord at 2 p.m. this afternoon in a consolation game.

In non-tournament games, Marin Catholic was ripped by Hillsdale, 67-45, losing its ninth game of the year in the first and third quarters, where the Wildcats scored only 11 points. Marin with 16 points.

Dallas Surprising Choice Tomorrow Over Cleveland In Eastern Playoff

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Cleveland Coach Blanton Collier believes the Dallas Cowboys won't make the same mistake tomorrow in the National Football League Eastern Conference championship they've made in the last two outings against the Browns.

"I feel Dallas didn't take us too seriously and were looking ahead last year," Collier says. "In the regular season game earlier this year, I feel it was a little bit the same.

"Right now Dallas couldn't be in a better emotional position."

Dallas lost 31-20 to Cleveland in the Eastern Conference playoff in 1968 and fell 42-10 earlier this year.

TV: 11:30 A.M.

But the oddsmakers have made Dallas a 6½ point favorite for the kickoff in the Cotton Bowl before a sellout crowd of 71,000 and a national television CBS audience, 11:30 a.m., PST.

"That's a little unusual to be favorites over a team we've lost to this year, but I guess somebody knows something," says Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "I do know we were very confident last year, but you've also got to be scared or you are going to get a bump on your head."

Cleveland is injury free while Dallas has only nagging hurts. Running back Calvin Hill still has a sore toe, offensive tackle Ralph Neely has a sore leg, and quarterback Craig Morton still has a sore shoulder. All will start.

Both coaches promised a few new "wrinkles" for the game although they basically will stick with what's been good to them in leading the Browns to the Century Division title and Dallas to the Capitol Division crown.

"You have to put in a few new wrinkles to keep 'em off balance," says Landry.

Collier says, "We've changed up our game play some each time we've played them."

NEIGHBORHOOD BULLY

The Cowboys are fast drawing the reputation of the neighborhood bully who does okay against the weaker guys but failed the gut check when another team of equal ability toes the line.

They've lost NFL championship games to Green Bay in the last minutes and were involved in the debacle at Cleveland last year.

Landry says, "Nobody will love us until we win the Super Bowl."

Collier says the hometown advantage will help the Cowboys, who have beaten Cleveland three consecutive times here.

"I kind of like having the people in the stands with me," Collier says.

Landry agrees, saying "When you have the people hollering for you it might make the difference in a playoff game."

Collier says his squad is "the youngest team in Cleveland history." For this reason, he believes turnovers will be a big factor in the game.

"You figure a team in an average game has the ball 12 times a game, three times a quarter," he says. "So you see you can't afford many mistakes."

Both teams scheduled brief workouts today and were to be dismissed in time to watch the Minnesota-Los Angeles game on television.

Michigan Says USC Best In U.S.

PASADENA (AP) — It may be pregame propaganda, but Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler looked dead earnest when he said: "There's no team in the United States of America that has better personnel than Southern Cal."

"I defy you to name one," he continued yesterday. "They're even better than Ohio State."

That's a lot of praise for a team oddsmakers have made four-point underdogs to Big 10 cochampion Michigan in the Rose Bowl game New Year's Day.

Schembechler, speaking at a news conference at U-M's hotel headquarters, labeled it "ridiculous" that the Wolverines are favored. "There's no other way to look at it."

Michigan finished the season with an 8-2 record and seventh in The Associated Press poll. USC rode a 9-0-1 mark to fifth place in the poll.

The Wolverines' final game was a 24-12 upset over OSU which forced the Buckeyes to share the conference title. Last season Ohio State came from a 10-0 deficit to beat Southern Cal 27-10 in the Rose Bowl.

FINE TEAM

"Everybody seems to want to tell us what kind of personnel we have" said USC Coach John McKay. "We think we have a fine team."

Bo was asked if he felt a field goal could decide the game.

"Well, I couldn't really say," he responded. "I think it'll be a low scoring affair. I don't look for anything astronomical."

During the season the Wolverines' offense piled up 349 points while the defense gave up 138. The Trojans scored 251 points, while giving up 125.

McKay, speaking at the same conference but via a special telephone hookup, also said he thought the Rose Bowl would be a close contest.

But he added wryly: "They scored more than 50 points a couple times this year, but we couldn't do that if the other team doesn't show up.

"We have a heck of a time getting out of the huddle."

Schembechler said the surgery on Glenn Doughty's knee was "a complete success and he'll be playing football again at Michigan."

"But he'll probably miss spring practice," he added.

Doughty, U-M's second-string tailback but also the team's second leading rusher, injured his right knee Wednesday and underwent surgery yesterday at the UCLA Medical Center.

CAST OFF

Another injury that Bo said could hurt Michigan even more is a bone fracture in Barry Pierson's right forearm. But the standout defensive back is to have a cast removed Monday.

Schembechler said Pierson wouldn't return punts against USC and "it's possible he won't play at all. We'll just have to wait and see."

He said Bruce Elliott would take Pierson's place on the punt return squad and that Billy Taylor would run back kickoffs in Doughty's place.

"If I were to leave now," Plunkett said. "I would always have the feeling that I let them down before our goals were reached."

Plunkett also mentioned his influence among youngsters in the Mexican-American community.

"We are always trying to tell these kids to set goals and work toward them. What would they think if I dropped out now in favor of professional football?"

He also said, "I am motivated by the opportunity to try again for the Pacific-8 football championship and the Rose Bowl. We're still pretty disappointed about not making it this year after coming so close."

Plunkett now holds many Pacific-8 passing and total offense records both for a season and his career. He is easily in reach of the few he did not set this season including Gary Beban's career total offense mark, Craig Morton's pass completion record and Bob Berry's touchdown pass record.

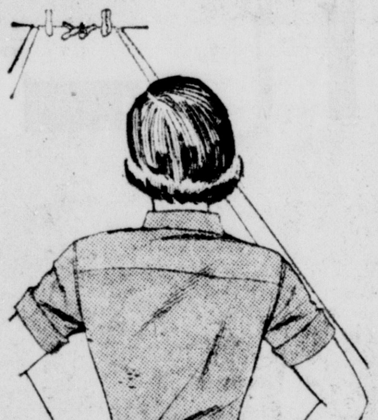
BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG



Your fellow bowlers will appreciate it if you move away from the foul line soon after you let the ball go. Don't stand there and berate yourself for a poor bowl. This bothers the bowler in the next alley, who can't start until she can determine what you are going to do.

Larry Jones Is King Pin In Bowling

Larry Jones, bowling in the 910 Classic at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael, put together a fat 731 series on games of 245, 274 and 212 to wind up at the top of the list for the men in a feather-light week at Marin County Lanes.

The holidays kept league bowling activities to a minimum.

Lou Piver, however, managed to keep busy, as he made the honor list at both Country Club and Greenbrae Lanes. He led bowlers at Greenbrae Lanes with a 661 series in the 910 Travel League on games of 213, 231 and 217 and was fourth-best at Country Club, hitting a 626 series in the 910 Classics.

LEADING LADY

Bea Nichols topped the ladies at both lanes with a beautiful 640 series, and nobody came near that. She got it on games of 169, 228 and 243 in the Coffee-cuppers.

Betty Cattle had her first 200 game, a fine 224 in the Coffee-cuppers as did juniors Mike Blumenfeld with a 201 and Mark Tweed with a 218 at Greenbrae Lanes.

Holy Toledo! Tangerine Bowl Spree

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Davidson didn't do badly for a team that was never in the game. The Wildcats rolled up 33 points, gained 406 yards and made 24 first downs.

But it was never really close.

Undefeated Toledo socked Davidson in a 56-33 point spree last night in the Tangerine Bowl. The 89-point outburst is nothing new to Orlando fans. They watched Richmond whip Ohio University 49-42 here a year ago.

Sophomore Chuck Ealey put the Rockets out of reach in the first half, but Davidson managed to save face on the brilliant right arm of Gordon Slade.

Ealey passed for three touchdowns and ran 52 yards for another as Toledo ran up a fat 42-7 lead by half time.

Slade bagged three touchdown passes in the final 30 minutes to keep the 45-degree night interesting. He was 22 for 38 the air for 305 yards for the Southern Conference Champions.

Dallas Surprising Choice Tomorrow Over Cleveland In Eastern Playoff

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Cleveland Coach Blanton Collier believes the Dallas Cowboys won't make the same mistake tomorrow in the National Football League Eastern Conference championship they've made in the last two outings against the Browns.

"I feel Dallas didn't take us too seriously and were looking ahead last year," Collier says. "In the regular season game earlier this year, I feel it was a little bit the same.

"Right now Dallas couldn't be in a better emotional position."

Dallas lost 31-20 to Cleveland in the Eastern Conference playoff in 1968 and fell 42-10 earlier this year.

TV: 11:30 A.M.

But the oddsmakers have made Dallas a 6½ point favorite for the kickoff in the Cotton Bowl before a sellout crowd of 71,000 and a national television CBS audience, 11:30 a.m., PST.

"That's a little unusual to be favorites over a team we've lost to this year, but I guess somebody knows something," says Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "I do know we were very confident last year, but you've also got to be scared or you are going to get a bump on your head."

Cleveland is injury free while Dallas has only nagging hurts. Running back Calvin Hill still has a sore toe, offensive tackle Ralph Neely has a sore leg, and quarterback Craig Morton still has a sore shoulder. All will start.

Both coaches promised a few new "wrinkles" for the game although they basically will stick with what's been good to them in leading the Browns to the Century Division title and Dallas to the Capitol Division crown.

"You have to put in a few new wrinkles to keep 'em off balance," says Landry.

Collier says, "We've changed up our game play some each time we've played them."

NEIGHBORHOOD BULLY

The Cowboys are fast drawing the reputation of the neighborhood bully who does okay against the weaker guys but failed the gut check when another team of equal ability toes the line.

They've lost NFL championship games to Green Bay in the last minutes and were involved in the debacle at Cleveland last year.

Landry says, "Nobody will love us until we win the Super Bowl."

Collier says the hometown advantage will help the Cowboys, who have beaten Cleveland three consecutive times here.

"I kind of like having the people in the stands with me," Collier says.

Landry agrees, saying "When you have the people hollering for you it might make the difference in a playoff game."

Collier says his squad is "the youngest team in Cleveland history." For this reason, he believes turnovers will be a big factor in the game.

"You figure a team in an average game has the ball 12 times a game, three times a quarter," he says. "So you see you can't afford many mistakes."

Both teams scheduled brief workouts today and were to be dismissed in time to watch the Minnesota-Los Angeles game on television.

Michigan Says USC Best In U.S.

PASADENA (AP) — It may be pregame propaganda, but Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler looked dead earnest when he said: "There's no team in the United States of America that has better personnel than Southern Cal."

"I defy you to name one," he continued yesterday. "They're even better than Ohio State."

That's a lot of praise for a team oddsmakers have made four-point underdogs to Big 10 cochampion Michigan in the Rose Bowl game New Year's Day.

Schembechler, speaking at a news conference at U-M's hotel headquarters, labeled it "ridiculous" that the Wolverines are favored. "There's no other way to look at it."

Michigan finished the season with an 8-2 record and seventh in The Associated Press poll. USC rode a 9-0-1 mark to fifth place in the poll.

The Wolverines' final game was a 24-12 upset over OSU which forced the Buckeyes to share the conference title. Last season Ohio State came from a 10-0 deficit to beat Southern Cal 27-10 in the Rose Bowl.

FINE TEAM

"Everybody seems to want to tell us what kind of personnel we have" said USC Coach John McKay. "We think we have a fine team."

Bo was asked if he felt a field goal could decide the game.

"Well, I couldn't really say," he responded. "I think it'll be a low scoring affair. I don't look for anything astronomical."

During the season the Wolverines' offense piled up 349 points while the defense gave up 138. The Trojans scored 251 points, while giving up 125.

McKay, speaking at the same conference but via a special telephone hookup, also said he thought the Rose Bowl would be a close contest.

But he added wryly: "They scored more than 50 points a couple times this year, but we couldn't do that if the other team doesn't show up.

"We have a heck of a time getting out of the huddle."

Schembechler said the surgery on Glenn Doughty's knee was "a complete success and he'll be playing football again at Michigan."

"But he'll probably miss spring practice," he added.

Doughty, U-M's second-string tailback but also the team's second leading rusher, injured his right knee Wednesday and underwent surgery yesterday at the UCLA Medical Center.

CAST OFF

Another injury that Bo said could hurt Michigan even more is a bone fracture in Barry Pierson's right forearm. But the standout defensive back is to have a cast removed Monday.

Schembechler said Pierson wouldn't return punts against USC and "it's possible he won't play at all. We'll just have to wait and see."

He said Bruce Elliott would take Pierson's place on the punt return squad and that Billy Taylor would run back kickoffs in Doughty's place.

DALLAS, Tex. — Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian hopes to hold workouts with his Fighting Irish today — that is if he can ever get them all together.

Parseghian arrived for the New Year's Day Cotton Bowl game with Texas yesterday but a number of players couldn't make it because of the big snow storm in the East.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Michigan's Glenn "Bo" Schembechler was named winner of the Walter Camp Foundation's T.A.D. Jones Award today as the nation's outstanding college football coach in the 1969 season. Steve Owens of Oklahoma was named winner of the Albie Booth Memorial Award, given each year to the outstanding college football player by the Camp Foundation in a vote by the same group.

scholarship.

"If I were to leave now," Plunkett said. "I would always have the feeling that I let them down before our goals were reached."

Plunkett also mentioned his influence among youngsters in the Mexican-American community.

"We are always trying to tell these kids to set goals and work toward them. What would they think if I dropped out now in favor of professional football?"

He also said, "I am motivated by the opportunity to try again for the Pacific-8 football championship and the Rose Bowl. We're still pretty disappointed about not making it this year after coming so close."

Plunkett now holds many Pacific-8 passing and total offense records both for a season and his career. He is easily in reach of the few he did not set this season including Gary Beban's career total offense mark, Craig Morton's pass completion record and Bob Berry's touchdown pass record.

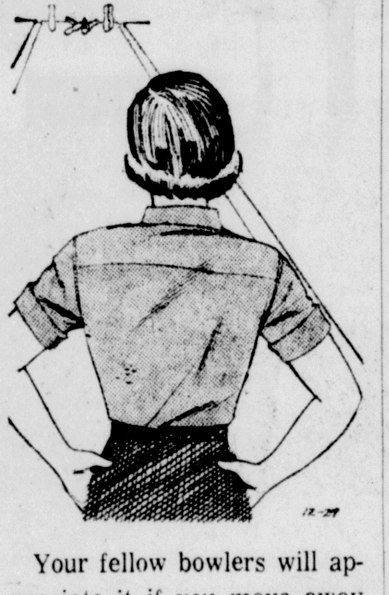
BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG



Your fellow bowlers will appreciate it if you move away from the foul line soon after you let the ball go. Don't stand there and berate yourself for a poor bowl. This bothers the bowler in the next alley, who can't start until she can determine what you are going to do.

Larry Jones Is King Pin In Bowling

Larry Jones, bowling in the 910 Classic at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael, put together a fat 731 series on games of 245, 274 and 212 to wind up at the top of the list for the men in a feather-light week at Marin County Lanes.

The holidays kept league bowling activities to a minimum.

Lou Piver, however, managed to keep busy, as he made the honor list at both Country Club and Greenbrae Lanes. He led bowlers at Greenbrae Lanes with a 661 series in the 910 Travel League on games of 213, 231 and 217 and was fourth-best at Country Club, hitting a 626 series in the 910 Classics.

LEADING LADY

Bea Nichols topped the ladies at both lanes with a beautiful 640 series, and nobody came near that. She got it on games of 169, 228 and 243 in the Coffee-cuppers.

Betty Cattle had her first 200 game, a fine 224 in the Coffee-cuppers as did juniors Mike Blumenfeld with a 201 and Mark Tweed with a 218 at Greenbrae Lanes.

Holy Toledo! Tangerine Bowl Spree

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Davidson didn't do badly for a team that was never in the game. The Wildcats rolled up 33 points, gained 406 yards and made 24 first downs.

But it was never really close.

Undefeated Toledo socked Davidson in a 56-33 point spree last night in the Tangerine Bowl. The 89-point outburst is nothing new to Orlando fans. They watched Richmond whip Ohio University 49-42 here a year ago.

Sophomore Chuck Ealey put the Rockets out of reach in the first half, but Davidson managed to save face on the brilliant right arm of Gordon Slade.

Ealey passed for three touchdowns and ran 52 yards for another as Toledo ran up a fat 42-7 lead by half time.

Slade bagged three touchdown passes in the final 30 minutes to keep the 45-degree night interesting. He was 22 for 38 the air for 305 yards for the Southern Conference Champions.

Dallas Surprising Choice Tomorrow Over Cleveland In Eastern Playoff

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Cleveland Coach Blanton Collier believes the Dallas Cowboys won't make the same mistake tomorrow in the National Football League Eastern Conference championship they've made in the last two outings against the Browns.

"I feel Dallas didn't take us too seriously and were looking ahead last year," Collier says. "In the regular season game earlier this year, I feel it was a little bit the same.

"Right now Dallas couldn't be in a better emotional position."

Dallas lost 31-20 to Cleveland in the Eastern Conference playoff in 1968 and fell 42-10 earlier this year.

TV: 11:30 A.M.

But the oddsmakers have made Dallas a 6½ point favorite for the kickoff in the Cotton Bowl before a sellout crowd of 71,000 and a national television CBS audience, 11:30 a.m., PST.

"That's a little unusual to be favorites over a team we've lost to this year, but I guess somebody knows something," says Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "I do know we were very confident last year, but you've also got to be scared or you are going to get a bump on your head."

Cleveland is injury free while Dallas has only nagging hurts. Running back Calvin Hill still has a sore toe, offensive tackle Ralph Neely has a sore leg, and quarterback Craig Morton still has a sore shoulder. All will start.

Both coaches promised a few new "wrinkles" for the game although they basically will stick with what's been good to them in leading the Browns to the Century Division title and Dallas to the Capitol Division crown.

"You have to put in a few new wrinkles to keep 'em off balance," says Landry.

Collier says, "We've changed up our game play some each time we've played them."

NEIGHBORHOOD BULLY

The Cowboys are fast drawing the reputation of the neighborhood bully who does okay against the weaker guys but failed the gut check when another team of equal ability toes the line.

They've lost NFL championship games to Green Bay in the last minutes and were involved in the debacle at Cleveland last year.

Landry says, "Nobody will love us until we win the Super Bowl."

Collier says the hometown advantage will help the Cowboys, who have beaten Cleveland three consecutive times here.

"I kind of like having the people in the stands with me," Collier says.

Landry agrees, saying "When you have the people hollering for you it might make the difference in a playoff game."

Collier says his squad is "the youngest team in Cleveland history." For this reason, he believes turnovers will be a big factor in the game.

"You figure a team in an average game has the ball 12 times a game, three times a quarter," he says. "So you see you can't afford many mistakes."

Both teams scheduled brief workouts today and were to be dismissed in time to watch the Minnesota-Los Angeles game on television.

Michigan Says USC Best In U.S.

PASADENA (AP) — It may be pregame propaganda, but Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler looked dead earnest when he said: "There's no team in the United States of America that has better personnel than Southern Cal."

"I defy you to name one," he continued yesterday. "They're even better than Ohio State."

That's a lot of praise for a team oddsmakers have made four-point underdogs to Big 10 cochampion Michigan in the Rose Bowl game New Year's Day.

Schembechler, speaking at a news conference at U-M's hotel headquarters, labeled it "ridiculous" that the Wolverines are favored. "There's no other way to look at it."

Michigan finished the season with an 8-2 record and seventh in The Associated Press poll. USC rode a 9-0-1 mark to fifth place in the poll.

The Wolverines' final game was a 24-12 upset over OSU which forced the Buckeyes to share the conference title. Last season Ohio State came from a 10-0 deficit to beat Southern Cal 27-10 in the Rose Bowl.

FINE TEAM

"Everybody seems to want to tell us what kind of personnel we have" said USC Coach John McKay. "We think we have a fine team."

Bo was asked if he felt a field goal could decide the game.

"Well, I couldn't really say," he responded. "I think it'll be a low scoring affair. I don't look for anything astronomical."

During the season the Wolverines' offense piled up 349 points while the defense gave up 138. The Trojans scored 251 points, while giving up 125.

McKay, speaking at the same conference but via a special telephone hookup, also said he thought the Rose Bowl would be a close contest.

But he added wryly: "They scored more than 50 points a couple times this year, but we couldn't do that if the other team doesn't show up.

"We have a heck of a time getting out of the huddle."

Schembechler said the surgery on Glenn Doughty's knee was "a complete success and he'll be playing football again at Michigan."

"But he'll probably miss spring practice," he added.

Doughty, U-M's second-string tailback but also the team's second leading rusher, injured his right knee Wednesday and underwent surgery yesterday at the UCLA Medical Center.

CAST OFF

Another injury that Bo said could hurt Michigan even more is a bone fracture in Barry Pierson's right forearm. But the standout defensive back is to have a cast removed Monday.

Schembechler said Pierson wouldn't return punts against USC and "it's possible he won't play at all. We'll just have to wait and see."

He said Bruce Elliott would take Pierson's place on the punt return squad and that Billy Taylor would run back kickoffs in Doughty's place.

scholarship.

"If I were to leave now," Plunkett said. "I would always have the feeling that I let them down before our goals were reached."

Plunkett also mentioned his influence among youngsters in the Mexican-American community.

"We are always trying to tell these kids to set goals and work toward them. What would they think if I dropped out now in favor of professional football?"

He also said, "I am motivated by the opportunity to try again for the Pacific-8 football championship and the Rose Bowl. We're still pretty disappointed about not making it this year after coming so close."

Plunkett now holds many Pacific-8 passing and total offense records both for a season and his career. He is easily in reach of the few he did not set this season including Gary Beban's career total offense mark, Craig Morton's pass completion record and Bob Berry's touchdown pass record.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG

Your fellow bowlers will appreciate it if you move away from the foul line soon after you let the ball go. Don't stand there and berate yourself for a poor bowl. This bothers the bowler in the next alley, who can't start until she can determine what you are going to do.

Larry Jones Is King Pin In Bowling

Larry Jones, bowling in the 910 Classic at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael, put together a fat 731 series on games of 245, 274 and 212 to wind up at the top of the list for the men in a feather-light week at Marin County Lanes.

The holidays kept league bowling activities to a minimum.

Lou Piver, however, managed to keep busy, as he made the honor list at both Country Club and Greenbrae Lanes. He led bowlers at Greenbrae Lanes with a 661 series in the 910 Travel League on games of 213, 231 and 217 and was fourth-best at Country Club, hitting a 626 series in the 910 Classics.

LEADING LADY

Bea Nichols topped the ladies at both lanes with a beautiful 640 series, and nobody came near that. She got it on games of 169, 228 and 243 in the Coffeecuppers.

Betty Cattle had her first 200 game, a fine 224 in the Coffeecuppers as did juniors Mike Blumenfeld with a 201 and Mark Tweed with a 218 at Greenbrae Lanes.

Holy Toledo! Tangerine Bowl Spree

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Davidson didn't do badly for a team that was never in the game. The Wildcats rolled up 33 points, gained 406 yards and made 24 first downs.

But it was never really close.

Undefeated Toledo socked Davidson in a 56-33 point spree last night in the Tangerine Bowl. The 89-point outburst is nothing new to Orlando fans. They watched Richmond whip Ohio University 49-42 here a year ago.

Sophomore Chuck Ealey put the Rockets out of reach in the first half, but Davidson managed to save face on the brilliant right arm of Gordon Slade.

Ealey passed for three touchdowns and ran 52 yards for another as Toledo ran up a fat 42-7 lead by half time.

Slade bagged three touchdown passes in the final 30 minutes to keep the 45-degree night interesting. He was 22 for 38 the air for 305 yards for the Southern Conference Champions.

What Was This Jesus Of Nazareth Really Like?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

What was he really like, this Jesus of Nazareth whose birth the world is celebrating during the 12 days of Christmastide?

Although his name is familiar to nearly everyone—so familiar it has become a casual expletive—the man himself remains, for many, a shadowy figure.

Even those who worship him as Lord and Savior are in perpetual danger of forgetting that Jesus—whatever else he may have been—was fully and authentically human.

From the earliest days of the Church until now, there has been a tendency among pious folk to feel that it is somehow a little blasphemous to speak of Jesus as a man who got tired and sweaty, hungry and discouraged, lonely and frightened, even as other men do.

But the slighting of Jesus' humanity is not piety: it is heresy, and has been so labeled by the church since the Council of Chalcedon in 451 A. D.

One thing we can say positively about the man Jesus is that he was a real person who lived and taught and died in Palestine about 2,000 years ago. Every now and then, someone comes up with the notion that Jesus was a purely mythical figure, like Hercules or Beowulf. But this won't wash. There are references to Jesus not only in Christian literature but also in Roman and Jewish histories. "No reputable historian today doubts the existence of Jesus," says Prof. John Knox.

The New Teastament gospels, which are our main source of information about Jesus, are not full-length biographies. They are more like magazine profiles. They give us a vivid picture of Jesus, largely through a succession of anecdotes, but they do not contain a great amount of connected narrative. And they omit many details which a modern biographer would include as a matter of course.

For example, none of the gospels gives a physical description of Jesus. The thousands of "portraits" of Jesus which have been painted through the centuries are based entirely on inference and artistic imagination.

It can be inferred, with confidence, that Jesus was a tall man—because gospel anecdotes reveal he was easily spotted in crowds. It also is virtually certain that he wore long hair and a beard, as nearly all male Jews did in his day.

We know much more about his personality than we do about his appearance. The gospels make clear that he was capable both of great toughness and great tenderness. He was courageous in his confrontations with the rich and the mighty, compassionate in his dealings with the poor and the weak. No matter how weary or harassed he was, he never retired into a shell of self-concern. He always cared.

Although his sensitivity to the needs of others made him share the misery of every suffering person he encountered, he was not essentially a sad person. On the contrary, he radiated a contagious happiness—a sense of the sheer joy of living.

Some people have gotten the notion—perhaps from our Puritan forebears—that Jesus was a dour ascetic who disdained such normal human pleasures as social activities. But the gospels report just the opposite. Jesus loved a good party--and was a much sought-after dinner guest. His appreciation of good food and good wine was so evident that the strait-laced Pharisees scornfully referred to him as "a glutton and winebibber."

But pleasure was never a major preoccupation of Jesus' life. He was too deeply concerned about the welfare of others to give much thought to his own comfort. In the phrase which the modern police blotter reserves for vagrants, he had "no fixed address" and no regular income. He accepted such hospitality as was offered him during his itinerant ministry, and was perfectly willing, when necessary, to go without supper and sleep in the open fields.

Perhaps the worst insult which people unintentionally direct at Jesus is to think of him as "meek and mild."

Actually, he was just the opposite. He was a bold and outspoken man who rebelled against convention and trampled heavily on the tenderest corns of the establishment.

If you define "radical" with Webster's dictionary as "one who favors fundamental or was the greatest radical of all time.

Other revolutionaries have sought only to shake up political and economic systems. Jesus turned upside down the whole value system by which the world lives.

He said it is better to give than to receive, better to love than to be loved, better to suffer wrongs than to seek revenge, better to be poor and humble than to be rich and proud, better to die trusting in the ultimate vindication of God's righteousness than to live with a craven compromise.

Jesus can be worshipped, loved, admired, rejected or hated. But he cannot easily be ignored. After 20 centuries, his radically unselfish life style remains a challenge to which each of us sooner or later must respond in some way.

Because it reminds us of that challenge, Christmas can never become entirely pagan, however hard our culture works to make it so.

IN PEACE SPIRIT

A Quiet Holiday Season For Many

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Some people aren't celebrating the Christmas season as usual this year, but they are concentrating on the basic theme of its origin—peace on earth.

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men . . ."

That was the hallowed message proclaimed at the birth of Jesus, but with war still blighting the world, particularly in Vietnam, many church leaders sought to focus the season on peace rather than heaps of presents.

Members were asked to avoid their customary "lavish expenditures" for gifts and to temper commercialism by "reducing our Christmas buying and giving our money to religious and peace causes" appropriate to the day.

The appeal, issued by representatives of 33 Protestant and Orthodox denominations of the National Council of Churches, suggested that instead of the usual shopping splurge, worship services be held across the country focused on the need for peace in Vietnam.

NO WAR TOYS

It also urged that no war toys be given as Christmas gifts to children.

Pope Paul VI, in recent exhortations for peace, also has condemned "scandalous spending . . . for luxuries," and for war, in a world of so much distress and poverty.

From Geneva, Switzerland, Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, said Christmas, from the start, has been "a celebration of peace in the midst of conflict."

He said the responsibility rests on Christians to declare "Jesus' story of reconciliation" between men and God, and with one another. "God is the first to reconcile, the first to forgive, the first to give new strength . . .

"With such a message entrusted to us, what can we do but rejoice and become reconcilers ourselves?"

HIS MINISTRY

As Jesus, in his ministry, often put it, "Peace be with you." And he said, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God." Once, when an apostle drew his sword, Jesus admonished him:

"Put your sword back into its place; for all who take the sword will perish by the sword."

Various church antiwar groups are holding special observances during the season, including a month of "fasting" each Thursday through Christmas, as urged by the interfaith Clergy and Laymen Concerned about Vietnam.

A Roman Catholic theologian, Rev. Joseph J. Fahey of Manhattan College, says the churches, which in the past elaborated various doctrines of war, now are working harder than ever for peace. He adds: "An emerging theology of peace is calling attention to the essential role of the Christian in a war-torn world: reconciliation of enemies."

STREET HAPPENINGS

An ecumenical community in Manhattan, called Eccanus House, planned a series of "street happenings" to celebrate "Christmas in a different way this year," stressing the urgency of peace and help for the poor.

The events, beginning with a trumpet-blowing "Jericho March" seven times around St. Patrick's Cathedral, also included a silent meditation there to a point up "the church's frequent silence in the face of the evil of war."

The group, led by Rev. David W. Kirk, a Catholic priest, also is pushing a drive against the "commercial exploitation of Christmas" to cut down extravagant buying so as to "share with your brothers" —the poor and oppressed.

At interreligious services in Boston, Detroit, Buffalo, N.Y., and Seattle, Wash., collections were taken for carrying across the Canadian border to aid war resisters there. The amount exceeded $5,000.

HARD TO REJOICE

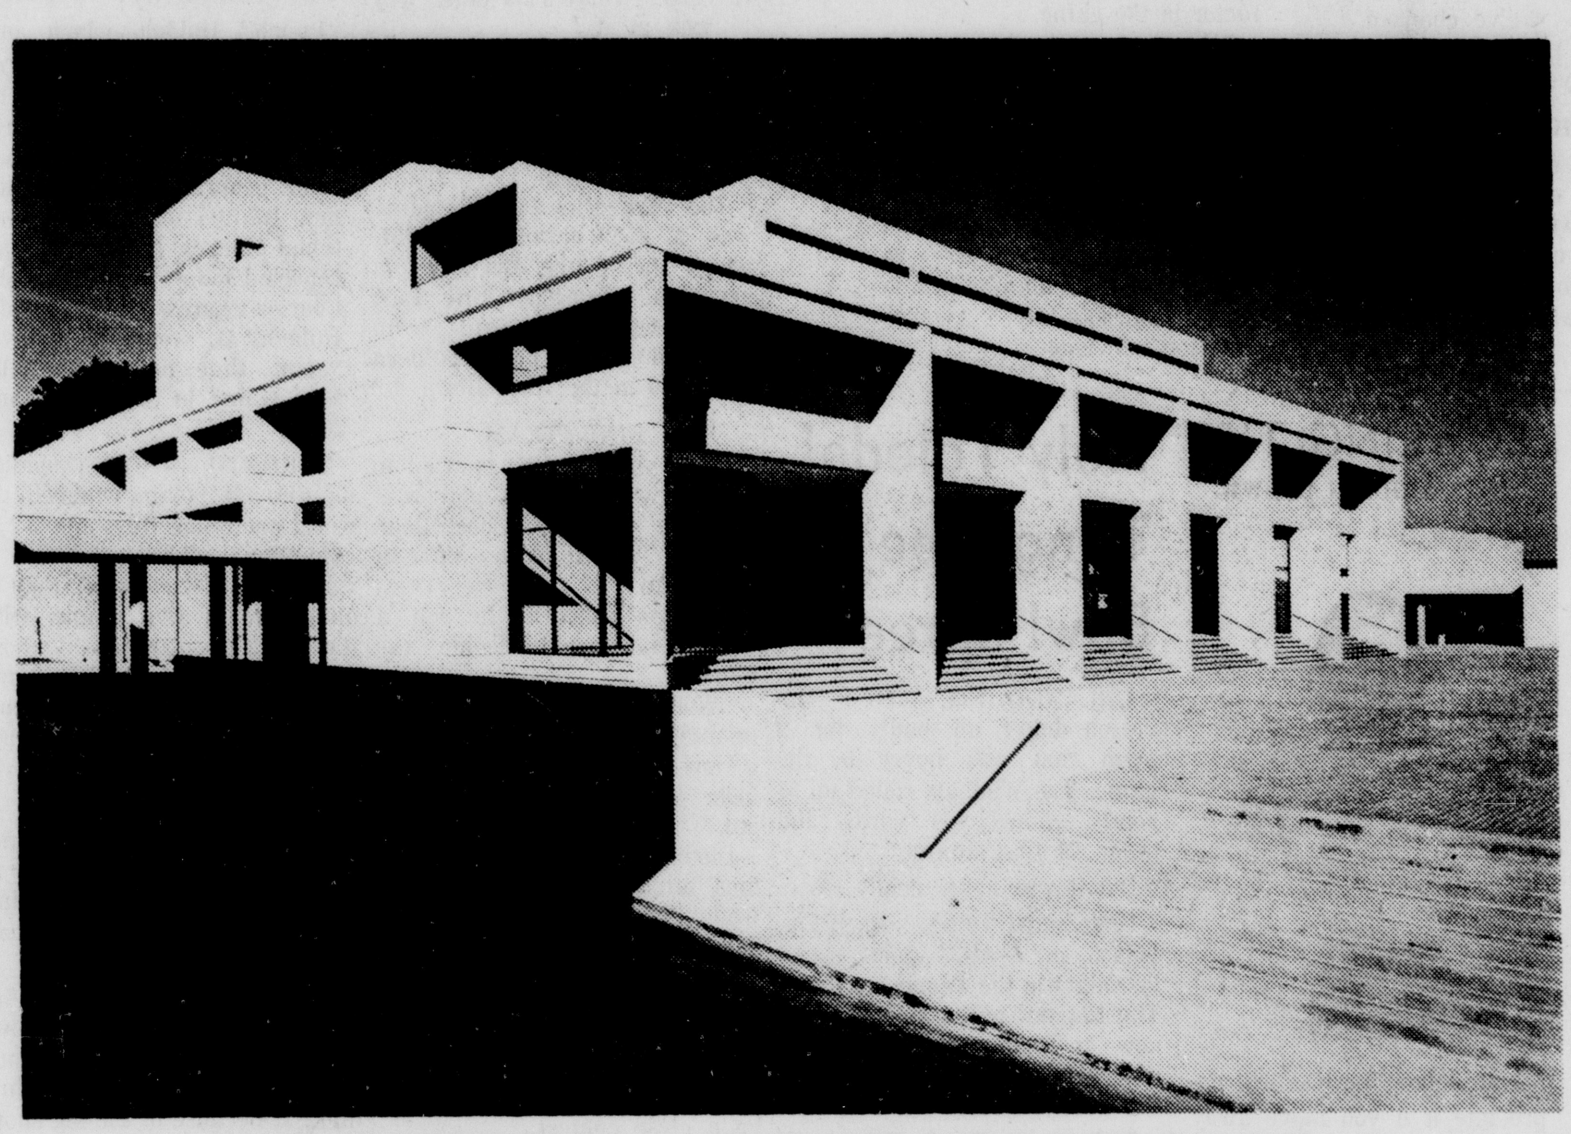
The sponsoring organization, Clergy and Laymen Concerned, said that although the season ordinarily is a festive one, millions of Americans this year find it hard to rejoice because the war still goes on, but that nevertheless there is cause for hope.

"Our hope is found in thousands of American boys who, because of conscience, or, more simply, moral outrage have said 'no' to the war and are in prison or self-imposed exiled," the statement said.

"We wish to celebrate the lives of these men . . . who gave us hope when we had no reason to hope, who spoke of peace when we saw no sign of it . . . "

From Paris, an eight-man Vietnamese Buddhist delegation sent a plea to Christians in this country, saying:

"We want to join you in honoring Christ on the day of His birth in the most significant way by celebrating together an unconditional ceasefire declared by your government on Christmas Eve."



CATHEDRAL AT THE CROSSROADS

This new $3 million structure, dedicated recently, is filling several roles — primary and secondary school, a serviceman's center and primarily as a cathedral for the 20th Century. Called Cathedral at the Crossroads, it gets its name from the "crossroad" site on Highway 50 and MacArthur Boulevard freeways at Castro Valley. It was the project of a non-profit church organization devoted to providing a simple form of worship.

120 FAMILIES PARTICIPATE

Church Sponsors A Welfare Game

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Wagner, a research physicist with a Ph.D. degree, looked down at the dinner table.

"Is this all there is?" he asked, peering at the meager portions of rice, gelatin and milk.

"I'm sorry," apologized his wife, Nancy. "But after they cut off the welfare check yesterday I was lucky to get the Salvation Army to provide a few meals. I'm saving the quarter so we can have a can of tuna tomorrow."

For Bob, Nancy and their four children, the experience of trying to live on 11-cent welfare meals was only a game — a game called "Welfare Monopoly," thought up by the Christian Conscience Committee at Berea Presbyterian Church.

The game, designed to help well-to-do families understand the difficulties of living on welfare, lasted one week. The 120 participating families were told to try to live on their allotments which provided 11 cents per meal per person. In addition, they were mailed "Chance" and "Community Chest" cards, some of which caused extra hardships and some of which gave advice.

Among those participating were 21 state legislators. Missouri ranks 44th in welfare allotments.

The "Chance" card Nancy Wagner got from the "Monopoly Welfare Office" told her she was being denied Aid to Dependent Children funds because case workers had seen a man enter her house, violating welfare rules.

The game started last Sunday with a church "banquet" of spoonfuls of rice, beans, and gelatin, cornbread and coffee. James H. Sporleder, director of the game, said players were to record as "stolen" any food consumed over the 11 cents per portion limit, "the base amount allowed under aid to dependent children rules."

Women actually on welfare advised the players they were embarking on an impossible task. These recipients served as telephone-answering case workers when the players fell into such traps as having their welfare checks cut off.

"From their own experience they know how to turn on the frustration," Sporleder said of the women. Some advice included: "Don't have so many babies," and "Try the Salvation Army," at times when the office was closed.

Game's end called for the players to get together for a final meal, exchange reactions and propose ways of changing the welfare system, which Sporleder called "capricious and debilitating."

"I haven't run into anyone who is happy living on welfare. They want a chance to get off it. They need a voice in the control of the system," Sporleder said. "Most middle class whites never experience the total inability to control their own lives." Mrs. Wagner expressed a similar opinion as she pointed to the letter telling her she was being denied ADC.

"We can do without the food better than we can put up with this type of letter. When I got it I really felt helpless," she said. For the past two weeks the real welfare office in St. Louis has been picketed, on and off, by real welfare recipients. Among their demands are an extra "Christmas check" and copies of the welfare rules.

Women Pastors Now Under Lutheran Study

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI)—Women as Lutheran pastors? A resolution recommending ordination of women probably will be presented to the biennial convention of the Lutheran Church in America, according to Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the 3.3 million-member denomination.

At present there are no women Lutheran pastors in the United States. The LCA's fourth biennial convention will be held here June 25-July 1, 1970.

Guest Speaker

Rev. David Lim, pastor of the Chinese Christian Center in San Francisco, will speak at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the Central Assembly of God Church in San Rafael. The church is located at 517 D Street.

A Study Of Lutheran Relationships Urged

VEDBAEK, Denmark (LWF) — Future conisderation of Lutheran relationships from the local to the universal level "in order to clarify our role on the world level" was called for here by Dr. Andre Appel, general secretary of the Lutheran World Federation.

Addressing the opening session of the LWF Executive Committee's annual meeting, Appel stressed that "the issue is much deeper than the problem whether the LWF is or is not a church or whether it should assume churchly functions" but centers on ways to establish communication between all levels to help all churches of the confession "to become truly universal and ecumenical."

BROAD MOVEMENT

Within the broad ecumenical movement, the federation executive said, new attention is being given to the role of confessional families. Considerations include proposals to change present functional and informal relationships into structural relationships.

Noting that at the present time there are 12 different bilateral theological dialogues underway, Appel said this is a factor "which needs to be integrated in the whole ecumenical context and may exert a determining influence in the coming years.

"But it is high time that some of these bilateral conversations be related to one another, especially in their necessary evaluation. The recent Conference of Secretaries of World Confessional Families proposed such a general study, also as a first attempt at concrete cooperation between the various world confessional families and the Faith and Order Department of the World Council of Churches."

Appel also cited increasing Lutheran-Roman Catholic contacts, as seen in the executive staff visit to the Vatican last May.

In this connection, he noted the visit of Pope Paul VI to the Ecumenical Center in Geneva which was "intended to underline the importance Rome attaches to the ecumenical dialogue."

"The fact that he brought up the question of primacy and his role as Christ's vicar," Appel continued, "avoided all utopian hopes and showed where the actual difficulties still lie. Strangely enough, and although the visit was of symbolic importance, up to now it has had no implications or consequences on the ecumenical dialogue."

Appel also discussed questions facing the LWF as it considers its Fifth Assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil, next July 14-24.

"THIRD WORLD"

After pointing out that the "third world" setting and the particular Brazilian situation poses difficult questions for a meeting of only ten days duration, he observed:

"The questions become even more pointed when it comes to the role of the LWF in public or social affairs. . . . Can Lutherans afford not to speak to the situation and if they do, how? Will Porto Alegre show a certain Lutheran consensus on social-ethical commitments or are we going towards similar tensions as were apparent in Helsinki (site of the 1963 Assembly) on the doctrinal level?"

In spite of the difficulties and the expense, and the realization that a short Assembly cannot say a final word on complex issues, Appel said he believes "it is still worth gathering . . . (in the) hope that we will come to a certain clarification concerning the burning points and see where the real questions lie for us."

What Was This Jesus Of Nazareth Really Like?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

What was he really like, this Jesus of Nazareth whose birth the world is celebrating during the 12 days of Christmastide?

Although his name is familiar to nearly everyone—so familiar it has become a casual expletive—the man himself remains, for many, a shadowy figure.

Even those who worship him as Lord and Savior are in perpetual danger of forgetting that Jesus—whatever else he may have been—was fully and authentically human.

From the earliest days of the Church until now, there has been a tendency among pious folk to feel that it is somehow a little blasphemous to speak of Jesus as a man who got tired and sweaty, hungry and discouraged, lonely and frightened, even as other men do.

But the slighting of Jesus' humanity is not piety: it is heresy, and has been so labeled by the church since the Council of Chalcedon in 451 A. D.

One thing we can say positively about the man Jesus is that he was a real person who lived and taught and died in Palestine about 2,000 years ago. Every now and then, someone comes up with the notion that Jesus was a purely mythical figure, like Hercules or Beowulf. But this won't wash. There are references to Jesus not only in Christian literature but also in Roman and Jewish histories. "No reputable historian today doubts the existence of Jesus," says Prof. John Knox.

The New Teastament gospels, which are our main source of information about Jesus, are not full-length biographies. They are more like magazine profiles. They give us a vivid picture of Jesus, largely through a succession of anecdotes, but they do not contain a great amount of connected narrative. And they omit many details which a modern biographer would include as a matter of course.

For example, none of the gospels gives a physical description of Jesus. The thousands of "portraits" of Jesus which have been painted through the centuries are based entirely on inference and artistic imagination.

It can be inferred, with confidence, that Jesus was a tall man—because gospel anecdotes reveal he was easily spotted in crowds. It also is virtually certain that he wore long hair and a beard, as nearly all male Jews did in his day.

We know much more about his personality than we do about his appearance. The gospels make clear that he was capable both of great toughness and great tenderness. He was courageous in his confrontations with the rich and the mighty, compassionate in his dealings with the poor and the weak. No matter how weary or harassed he was, he never retired into a shell of self-concern. He always cared.

Although his sensitivity to the needs of others made him share the misery of every suffering person he encountered, he was not essentially a sad person. On the contrary, he radiated a contagious happiness—a sense of the sheer joy of living.

Some people have gotten the notion—perhaps from our Puritan forebears—that Jesus was a dour ascetic who disdained such normal human pleasures as social activities. But the gospels report just the opposite. Jesus loved a good party--and was a much sought-after dinner guest. His appreciation of good food and good wine was so evident that the strait-laced Pharisees scornfully referred to him as "a glutton and winebibber."

But pleasure was never a major preoccupation of Jesus' life. He was too deeply concerned about the welfare of others to give much thought to his own comfort. In the phrase which the modern police blotter reserves for vagrants, he had "no fixed address" and no regular income. He accepted such hospitality as was offered him during his itinerant ministry, and was perfectly willing, when necessary, to go without supper and sleep in the open fields.

Perhaps the worst insult which people unintentionally direct at Jesus is to think of him as "meek and mild."

Actually, he was just the opposite. He was a bold and outspoken man who rebelled against convention and trampled heavily on the tenderest corns of the establishment.

If you define "radical" with Webster's dictionary as "one who favors fundamental or was the greatest radical of all time.

Other revolutionaries have sought only to shake up political and economic systems. Jesus turned upside down the whole value system by which the world lives.

He said it is better to give than to receive, better to love than to be loved, better to suffer wrongs than to seek revenge, better to be poor and humble than to be rich and proud, better to die trusting in the ultimate vindication of God's righteousness than to live with a craven compromise.

Jesus can be worshipped, loved, admired, rejected or hated. But he cannot easily be ignored. After 20 centuries, his radically unselfish life style remains a challenge to which each of us sooner or later must respond in some way.

Because it reminds us of that challenge, Christmas can never become entirely pagan, however hard our culture works to make it so.

IN PEACE SPIRIT

A Quiet Holiday Season For Many

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Some people aren't celebrating the Christmas season as usual this year, but they are concentrating on the basic theme of its origin—peace on earth.

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men . . ."

That was the hallowed message proclaimed at the birth of Jesus, but with war still blighting the world, particularly in Vietnam, many church leaders sought to focus the season on peace rather than heaps of presents.

Members were asked to avoid their customary "lavish expenditures" for gifts and to temper commercialism by "reducing our Christmas buying and giving our money to religious and peace causes" appropriate to the day.

The appeal, issued by representatives of 33 Protestant and Orthodox denominations of the National Council of Churches, suggested that instead of the usual shopping splurge, worship services be held across the country focused on the need for peace in Vietnam.

NO WAR TOYS

It also urged that no war toys be given as Christmas gifts to children.

Pope Paul VI, in recent exhortations for peace, also has condemned "scandalous spending . . . for luxuries," and for war, in a world of so much distress and poverty.

From Geneva, Switzerland, Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, said Christmas, from the start, has been "a celebration of peace in the midst of conflict."

He said the responsibility rests on Christians to declare "Jesus' story of reconciliation" between men and God, and with one another. "God is the first to reconcile, the first to forgive, the first to give new strength . . .

"With such a message entrusted to us, what can we do but rejoice and become reconcilers ourselves?"

HIS MINISTRY

As Jesus, in his ministry, often put it, "Peace be with you." And he said, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God." Once, when an apostle drew his sword, Jesus admonished him:

"Put your sword back into its place; for all who take the sword will perish by the sword."

Various church antiwar groups are holding special observances during the season, including a month of "fasting" each Thursday through Christmas, as urged by the interfaith Clergy and Laymen Concerned about Vietnam.

A Roman Catholic theologian, Rev. Joseph J. Fahey of Manhattan College, says the churches, which in the past elaborated various doctrines of war, now are working harder than ever for peace. He adds: "An emerging theology of peace is calling attention to the essential role of the Christian in a war-torn world: reconciliation of enemies."

STREET HAPPENINGS

An ecumenical community in Manhattan, called Eccanus House, planned a series of "street happenings" to celebrate "Christmas in a different way this year," stressing the urgency of peace and help for the poor.

The events, beginning with a trumpet-blowing "Jericho March" seven times around St. Patrick's Cathedral, also included a silent meditation there to a point up "the church's frequent silence in the face of the evil of war."

The group, led by Rev. David W. Kirk, a Catholic priest, also is pushing a drive against the "commercial exploitation of Christmas" to cut down extravagant buying so as to "share with your brothers" —the poor and oppressed.

At interreligious services in Boston, Detroit, Buffalo, N.Y., and Seattle, Wash., collections were taken for carrying across the Canadian border to aid war resisters there. The amount exceeded $5,000.

HARD TO REJOICE

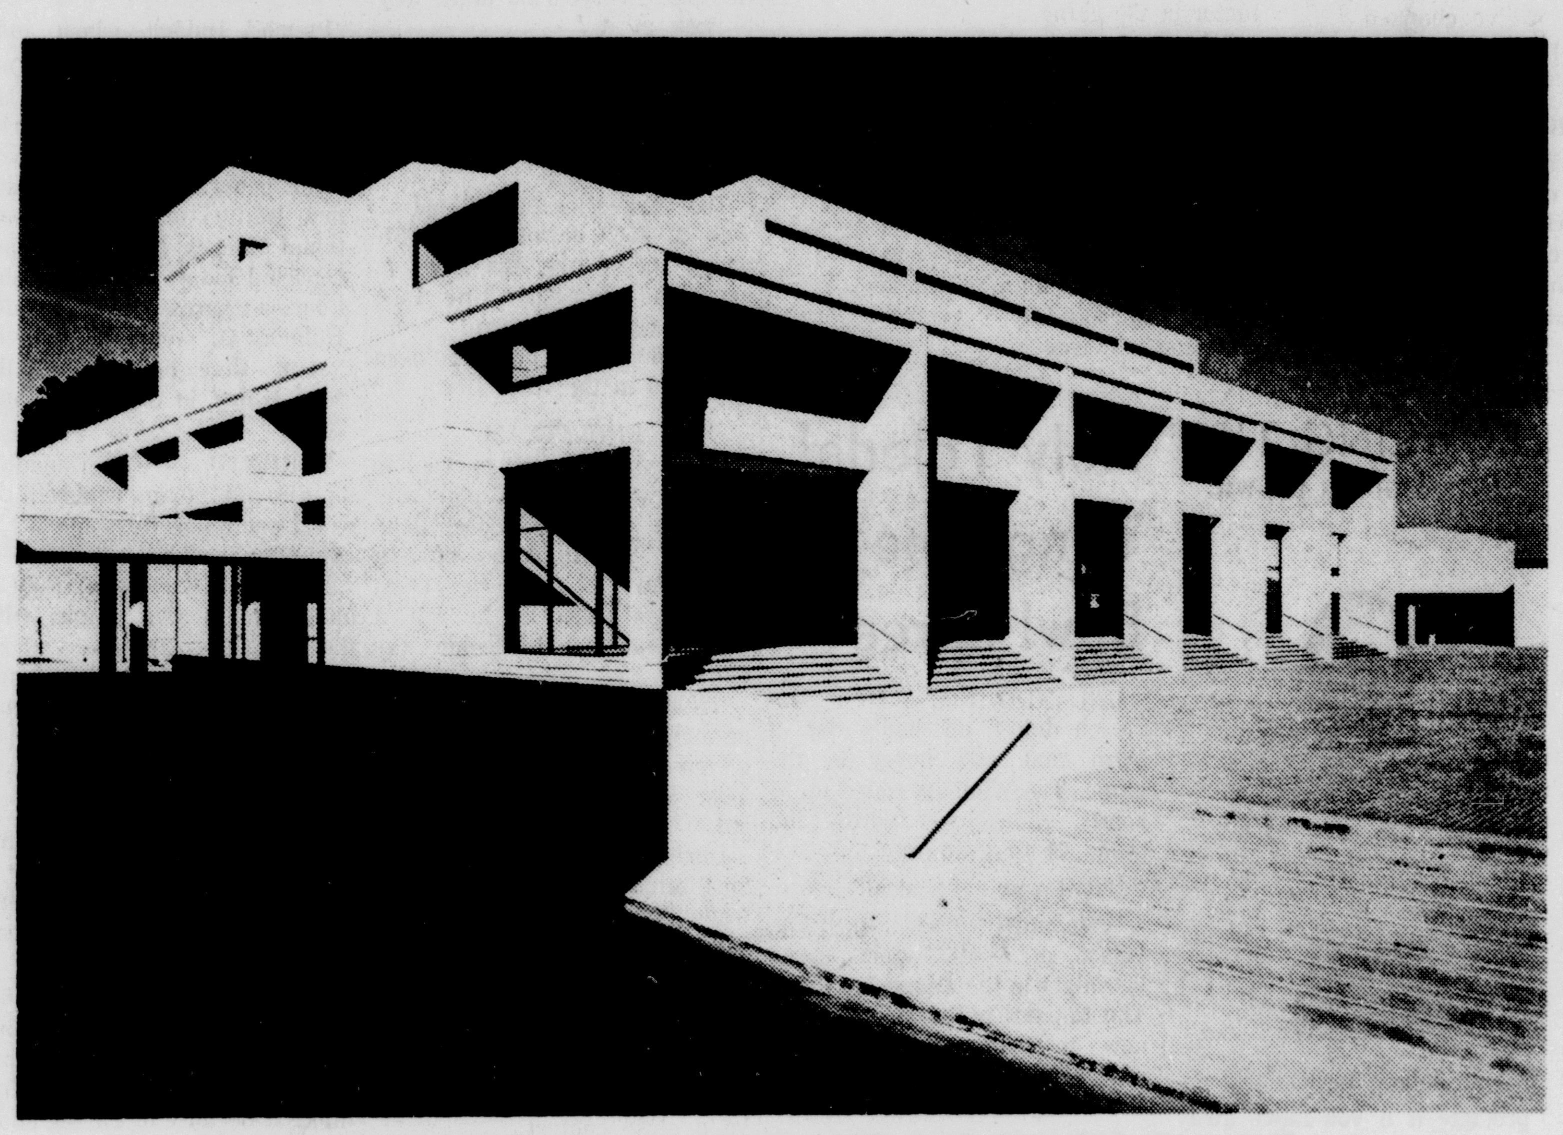
The sponsoring organization, Clergy and Laymen Concerned, said that although the season ordinarily is a festive one, millions of Americans this year find it hard to rejoice because the war still goes on, but that nevertheless there is cause for hope.

"Our hope is found in thousands of American boys who, because of conscience, or, more simply, moral outrage have said 'no' to the war and are in prison or self-imposed exiled," the statement said.

"We wish to celebrate the lives of these men . . . who gave us hope when we had no reason to hope, who spoke of peace when we saw no sign of it . . ."

From Paris, an eight-man Vietnamese Buddhist delegation sent a plea to Christians in this country, saying:

"We want to join you in honoring Christ on the day of His birth in the most significant way by celebrating together an unconditional ceasefire declared by your government on Christmas Eve."



CATHEDRAL AT THE CROSSROADS

This new $3 million structure, dedicated recently, is filling several roles — primary and secondary school, a serviceman's center and primarily as a cathedral for the 20th Century. Called Cathedral at the Crossroads, it gets its name from the "crossroad" site on Highway 50 and MacArthur Boulevard freeways at Castro Valley. It was the project of a non-profit church organization devoted to providing a simple form of worship.

120 FAMILIES PARTICIPATE

Church Sponsors A Welfare Game

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Wagner, a research physicist with a Ph.D. degree, looked down at the dinner table.

"Is this all there is?" he asked, peering at the meager portions of rice, gelatin and milk.

"I'm sorry," apologized his wife, Nancy. "But after they cut off the welfare check yesterday I was lucky to get the Salvation Army to provide a few meals. I'm saving the quarter so we can have a can of tuna tomorrow."

For Bob, Nancy and their four children, the experience of trying to live on 11-cent welfare meals was only a game — a game called "Welfare Monopoly," thought up by the Christian Conscience Committee at Berea Presbyterian Church.

The game, designed to help well-to-do families understand the difficulties of living on welfare, lasted one week. The 120 participating families were told to try to live on their allotments which provided 11 cents per meal per person. In addition, they were mailed "Chance" and "Community Chest" cards, some of which caused extra hardships and some of which gave advice.

What Was This Jesus Of Nazareth Really Like?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

What was he really like, this Jesus of Nazareth whose birth the world is celebrating during the 12 days of Christmastide?

Although his name is familiar to nearly everyone—so familiar it has become a casual expletive—the man himself remains, for many, a shadowy figure.

Even those who worship him as Lord and Savior are in perpetual danger of forgetting that Jesus—whatever else he may have been—was fully and authentically human.

From the earliest days of the Church until now, there has been a tendency among pious folk to feel that it is somehow a little blasphemous to speak of Jesus as a man who got tired and sweaty, hungry and discouraged, lonely and frightened, even as other men do.

But the slighting of Jesus' humanity is not piety: it is heresy, and has been so labeled by the church since the Council of Chalcedon in 451 A. D.

One thing we can say positively about the man Jesus is that he was a real person who lived and taught and died in Palestine about 2,000 years ago. Every now and then, someone comes up with the notion that Jesus was a purely mythical figure, like Hercules or Beowulf. But this won't wash. There are references to Jesus not only in Christian literature but also in Roman and Jewish histories. "No reputable historian today doubts the existence of Jesus," says Prof. John Knox.

The New Teastament gospels, which are our main source of information about Jesus, are not full-length biographies. They are more like magazine profiles. They give us a vivid picture of Jesus, largely through a succession of anecdotes, but they do not contain a great amount of connected narrative. And they omit many details which a modern biographer would include as a matter of course.

For example, none of the gospels gives a physical description of Jesus. The thousands of "portraits" of Jesus which have been painted through the centuries are based entirely on inference and artistic imagination.

It can be inferred, with confidence, that Jesus was a tall man—because gospel anecdotes reveal he was easily spotted in crowds. It also is virtually certain that he wore long hair and a beard, as nearly all male Jews did in his day.

We know much more about his personality than we do about his appearance. The gospels make clear that he was capable both of great toughness and great tenderness. He was courageous in his confrontations with the rich and the mighty, compassionate in his dealings with the poor and the weak. No matter how weary or harassed he was, he never retired into a shell of self-concern. He always cared.

Although his sensitivity to the needs of others made him share the misery of every suffering person he encountered, he was not essentially a sad person. On the contrary, he radiated a contagious happiness—a sense of the sheer joy of living.

Some people have gotten the notion—perhaps from our Puritan forebears—that Jesus was a dour ascetic who disdained such normal human pleasures as social activities. But the gospels report just the opposite. Jesus loved a good party--and was a much sought-after dinner guest. His appreciation of good food and good wine was so evident that the strait-laced Pharisees scornfully referred to him as "a glutton and winebibber."

But pleasure was never a major preoccupation of Jesus' life. He was too deeply concerned about the welfare of others to give much thought to his own comfort. In the phrase which the modern police blotter reserves for vagrants, he had "no fixed address" and no regular income. He accepted such hospitality as was offered him during his itinerant ministry, and was perfectly willing, when necessary, to go without supper and sleep in the open fields.

Perhaps the worst insult which people unintentionally direct at Jesus is to think of him as "meek and mild."

Actually, he was just the opposite. He was a bold and outspoken man who rebelled against convention and trampled heavily on the tenderest corns of the establishment.

If you define "radical" with Webster's dictionary as "one who favors fundamental or was the greatest radical of all time.

Other revolutionaries have sought only to shake up political and economic systems. Jesus turned upside down the whole value system by which the world lives.

He said it is better to give than to receive, better to love than to be loved, better to suffer wrongs than to seek revenge, better to be poor and humble than to be rich and proud, better to die trusting in the ultimate vindication of God's righteousness than to live with a craven compromise.

Jesus can be worshipped, loved, admired, rejected or hated. But he cannot easily be ignored. After 20 centuries, his radically unselfish life style remains a challenge to which each of us sooner or later must respond in some way.

Because it reminds us of that challenge, Christmas can never become entirely pagan, however hard our culture works to make it so.

IN PEACE SPIRIT

A Quiet Holiday Season For Many

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Some people aren't celebrating the Christmas season as usual this year, but they are concentrating on the basic theme of its origin—peace on earth.

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men . . ."

That was the hallowed message proclaimed at the birth of Jesus, but with war still blighting the world, particularly in Vietnam, many church leaders sought to focus the season on peace rather than heaps of presents.

Members were asked to avoid their customary "lavish expenditures" for gifts and to temper commercialism by "reducing our Christmas buying and giving our money to religious and peace causes" appropriate to the day.

The appeal, issued by representatives of 33 Protestant and Orthodox denominations of the National Council of Churches, suggested that instead of the usual shopping splurge, worship services be held across the country focused on the need for peace in Vietnam.

NO WAR TOYS

It also urged that no war toys be given as Christmas gifts to children.

Pope Paul VI, in recent exhortations for peace, also has condemned "scandalous spending . . . for luxuries," and for war, in a world of so much distress and poverty.

From Geneva, Switzerland, Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, said Christmas, from the start, has been "a celebration of peace in the midst of conflict."

He said the responsibility rests on Christians to declare "Jesus' story of reconciliation" between men and God, and with one another. "God is the first to reconcile, the first to forgive, the first to give new strength . . .

"With such a message entrusted to us, what can we do but rejoice and become reconcilers ourselves?"

HIS MINISTRY

As Jesus, in his ministry, often put it, "Peace be with you." And he said, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God." Once, when an apostle drew his sword, Jesus admonished him:

"Put your sword back into its place; for all who take the sword will perish by the sword."

Various church antiwar groups are holding special observances during the season, including a month of "fasting" each Thursday through Christmas, as urged by the interfaith Clergy and Laymen Concerned about Vietnam.

A Roman Catholic theologian, Rev. Joseph J. Fahey of Manhattan College, says the churches, which in the past elaborated various doctrines of war, now are working harder than ever for peace. He adds: "An emerging theology of peace is calling attention to the essential role of the Christian in a war-torn world: reconciliation of enemies."

STREET HAPPENINGS

An ecumenical community in Manhattan, called Eccanus House, planned a series of "street happenings" to celebrate "Christmas in a different way this year," stressing the urgency of peace and help for the poor.

The events, beginning with a trumpet-blowing "Jericho March" seven times around St. Patrick's Cathedral, also included a silent meditation there to a point up "the church's frequent silence in the face of the evil of war."

The group, led by Rev. David W. Kirk, a Catholic priest, also is pushing a drive against the "commercial exploitation of Christmas" to cut down extravagant buying so as to "share with your brothers"—the poor and oppressed.

At interreligious services in Boston, Detroit, Buffalo, N.Y., and Seattle, Wash., collections were taken for carrying across the Canadian border to aid war resisters there. The amount exceeded $5,000.

HARD TO REJOICE

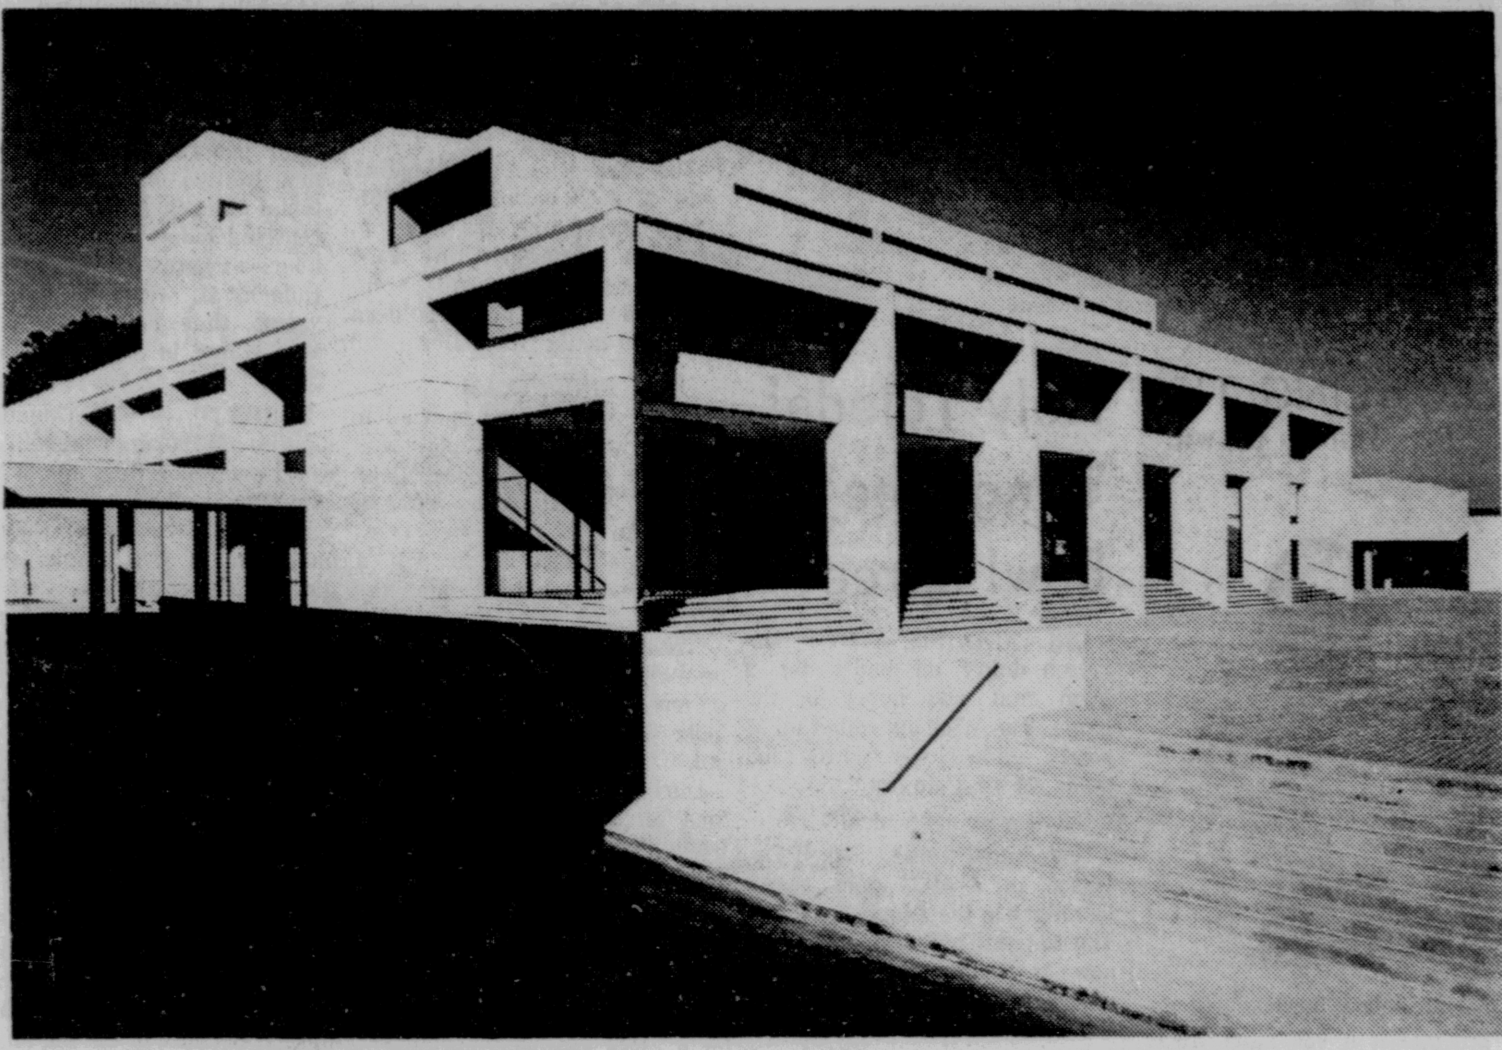
The sponsoring organization, Clergy and Laymen Concerned, said that although the season ordinarily is a festive one, millions of Americans this year find it hard to rejoice because the war still goes on, but that nevertheless there is cause for hope.

"Our hope is found in thousands of American boys who, because of conscience, or, more simply, moral outrage have said 'no' to the war and are in prison or self-imposed exiled," the statement said.

"We wish to celebrate the lives of these men . . . who gave us hope when we had no reason to hope, who spoke of peace when we saw no sign of it . . ."

From Paris, an eight-man Vietnamese Buddhist delegation sent a plea to Christians in this country, saying:

"We want to join you in honoring Christ on the day of His birth in the most significant way by celebrating together an unconditional ceasefire declared by your government on Christmas Eve."



CATHEDRAL AT THE CROSSROADS

This new $3 million structure, dedicated recently, is filling several roles — primary and secondary school, a serviceman's center and primarily as a cathedral for the 20th Century. Called Cathedral at the Crossroads, it gets its name from the "crossroad" site on Highway 50 and MacArthur Boulevard freeways at Castro Valley. It was the project of a non-profit church organization devoted to providing a simple form of worship.

120 FAMILIES PARTICIPATE

Church Sponsors A Welfare Game

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Wagner, a research physicist with a Ph.D. degree, looked down at the dinner table.

"Is this all there is?" he asked, peering at the meager portions of rice, gelatin and milk.

"I'm sorry," apologized his wife, Nancy. "But after they cut off the welfare check yesterday I was lucky to get the Salvation Army to provide a few meals. I'm saving the quarter so we can have a can of tuna tomorrow."

For Bob, Nancy and their four children, the experience of trying to live on 11-cent welfare meals was only a game — a game called "Welfare Monopoly," thought up by the Christian Conscience Committee at Berea Presbyterian Church.

The game, designed to help well-to-do families understand the difficulties of living on welfare, lasted one week. The 120 participating families were told to try to live on their allotments which provided 11 cents per meal per person. In addition, they were mailed "Chance" and "Community Chest" cards, some of which caused extra hardships and some of which gave advice.

Among those participating were 21 state legislators. Missouri ranks 44th in welfare allotments.

The "Chance" card Nancy Wagner got from the "Monopoly Welfare Office" told her she was being denied Aid to Dependent Children funds because case workers had seen a man enter her house, violating welfare rules.

The game started last Sunday with a church "banquet" of spoonfuls of rice, beans, and gelatin, cornbread and coffee. James H. Sporleder, director of the game, said players were to record as "stolen" any food consumed over the 11 cents per portion limit, "the base amount allowed under aid to dependent children rules."

Women actually on welfare advised the players they were embarking on an impossible task. These recipients served as telephone-answering case workers when the players fell into such traps as having their welfare checks cut off.

"From their own experience they know how to turn on the frustration," Sporleder said of the women. Some advice included: "Don't have so many babies," and "Try the Salvation Army," at times when the office was closed.

Game's end called for the players to get together for a final meal, exchange reactions and propose ways of changing the welfare system, which Sporleder called "capricious and debilitating."

"I haven't run into anyone who is happy living on welfare. They want a chance to get off it. They need a voice in the control of the system," Sporleder said. "Most middle class whites never experience the total inability to control their own lives." Mrs. Wagner expressed a similar opinion as she pointed to the letter telling her she was being denied ADC.

"We can do without the food better than we can put up with this type of letter. When I got it I really felt helpless," she said. For the past two weeks the real welfare office in St. Louis has been picketed, on and off, by real welfare recipients. Among their demands are an extra "Christmas check" and copies of the welfare rules.

Women Pastors Now Under Lutheran Study

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI)—Women as Lutheran pastors? A resolution recommending ordination of women probably will be presented to the biennial convention of the Lutheran Church in America, according to Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the 3.3 million-member denomination.

At present there are no women Lutheran pastors in the United States. The LCA's fourth biennial convention will be held here June 25-July 1, 1970.

Guest Speaker

Rev. David Lim, pastor of the Chinese Christian Center in San Francisco, will speak at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the Central Assembly of God Church in San Rafael. The church is located at 517 D Street.

A Study Of Lutheran Relationships Urged

VEDBAEK, Denmark (LWF) — Future conisderation of Lutheran relationships from the local to the universal level "in order to clarify our role on the world level" was called for here by Dr. Andre Appel, general secretary of the Lutheran World Federation.

Addressing the opening session of the LWF Executive Committee's annual meeting, Appel stressed that "the issue is much deeper than the problem whether the LWF is or is not a church or whether it should assume churchly functions" but centers on ways to establish communication between all levels to help all churches of the confession "to become truly universal and ecumenical."

BROAD MOVEMENT

Within the broad ecumenical movement, the federation executive said, new attention is being given to the role of confessional families. Considerations include proposals to change present functional and informal relationships into structural relationships.

Noting that at the present time there are 12 different bilateral theological dialogues underway, Appel said this is a factor "which needs to be integrated in the whole ecumenical context and may exert a determining influence in the coming years.

"But it is high time that some of these bilateral conversations be related to one another, especially in their necessary evaluation. The recent Conference of Secretaries of World Confessional Families proposed such a general study, also as a first attempt at concrete cooperation between the various world confessional families and the Faith and Order Department of the World Council of Churches."

Appel also cited increasing Lutheran-Roman Catholic contacts, as seen in the executive staff visit to the Vatican last May.

In this connection, he noted the visit of Pope Paul VI to the Ecumenical Center in Geneva which was "intended to underline the importance Rome attaches to the ecumenical dialogue."

"The fact that he brought up the question of primacy and his role as Christ's vicar," Appel continued, "avoided all utopian hopes and showed where the actual difficulties still lie. Strangely enough, and although the visit was of symbolic importance, up to now it has had no implications or consequences on the ecumenical dialogue."

Appel also discussed questions facing the LWF as it considers its Fifth Assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil, next July 14-24.

"THIRD WORLD"

After pointing out that the "third world" setting and the particular Brazilian situation poses difficult questions for a meeting of only ten days duration, he observed:

"The questions become even more pointed when it comes to the role of the LWF in public or social affairs. . . . Can Lutherans afford not to speak to the situation and if they do, how? Will Porto Alegre show a certain Lutheran consensus on social-ethical commitments or are we going towards similar tensions as were apparent in Helsinki (site of the 1963 Assembly) on the doctrinal level?"

In spite of the difficulties and the expense, and the realization that a short Assembly cannot say a final word on complex issues, Appel said he believes "it is still worth gathering . . . (in the) hope that we will come to a certain clarification concerning the burning points and see where the real questions lie for us."

Paperback Bible Is Now In Print

NEW YORK (UPI)—The American Bible Society has published its first complete paperback Bible, containing the Old and New Testaments in the King James Version, and selling for 60 cents.

Entitled "The Way of Life," the new Bible is designed especially for people in prisons, hospitals, youth camps and other institutions. It is suitable also for young people's groups, class use in schools and colleges, and for special distribution purposes.

A Time And Place To Propose

London Express Service

LONDON — Most marriage proposals are made in the back of a parked car. The next most popular place is the back row of a movie or theater, then the girl's house, on the beach, in a restaurant, while having a drink back at his place, while out walking, aboard public transportation, at various sports meetings or in church.

For this invaluable sociological information we are indebted to a Swedish survey team.

THERE IS, of course, always the chance of a proposal in an unlikely place, as when Nikolai Lehmann wanted to put the question to his girl friend, Magda Gerav. He chalked "Will you marry me?" on the ground at a busy Helsinki road junction. She was wed to him when he came out of the hospital, for he was knocked down and injured by a car as he chalked the proposal.

Highly bizarre was the culmination of the courtship of a young English airman as he stood on a stage before more than a thousand people at a holiday camp. He had been carrying the ring around in his pocket for some time but was too shy to propose.

A comedian in the show who knew him decided that boldness was best. He shoved the airman through a door — and the wooer found himself on stage. The comedian called the girl up from the audience and prodded the youth towards her, "Haven't you something to say?"

"Will you marry me?" asked the blushing youth. "Yes" she murmured. The couple kissed. Curtain. Stormy applause.

IN LIVING memory courtship was an elaborate business — the sly pressure of a hand. . . . "May I call you Mavis?" — a furtive kiss before or after the first movie visit . . . gradually moving towards that crucial appraisal of the young man by the girl's father and mother. There was even a formal interview when the young man was delicately sounded about his prospects.

There was an enormous lot of palaver even before the full tide of red roses and chocolates — and the further back in history the more the affianced ones as the etiquette books called them were hemmed in. Even when the chaperone was being forgotten, it was a forward girl who ventured out even with her fiance in his car. A restaurant meal together was thought unconventional, and a weekend together, let alone a holiday, for the pair was thought the height of immorality.

True heart be mine

Proposals are still important, but the declaration of love was once a much more elaborate and romantic occasion. Many suitors did indeed go down on their knees before the lady (never the woman) of their choice. Speeches were rehearsed, dramatics studied, even gestures practiced. With feminine intuition the loved one had seen it all working up for a long time.

The convention was for her to blush (how many ex-virgins blush now?) to exclaim, panting, that it was all so sudden. She might even faint with emotion — and so the thoughtful and canny lover would have the smelling salts ready. The real wolf, improving on the occasion — might daringly unbutton the top of her dress to give her more air.

BUT THE ANSWER was usually "yes." The girl was only too glad to have the promise of a lifetime's security and fell, perhaps for the first time, in his arms. There was a good deal of boo-hooing and many wives treasured all their lives the dainty square of fabric on which they wiped away their joyous tears marking the occasion which the old-time romantic novelists used to call "lighting a thousand candles in her heart."

Gifts of locks of hair and poetic love letters still mark courtship in many Latin countries, but in the permissive lands much of this has disappeared. Far fewer young men take to drink through unrequited love — or emigrate to wild, stern countries. Girls don't pine away any more: they scheme to get the next suitor. And in the permissive societies consolation comes a lot quicker for both sexes.

The accent is on the practical, the matter-of-fact. In a British survey of nearly 600 persons of all social classes aged 16 to 30 contemplating matrimony the down-to-earth attitude prevailed.

A girl librarian aged 29 said, "The first time I saw him I thought — that will do." A 21-year-old receptionist said, "I felt that he looked interesting: the beard and glasses intrigued me." A 22-year-old printer summed up his fiancee — "She kissed good, she had a fabulous pair of legs, and she gave me some chips."

A 21-YEAR-OLD display artist said of his beloved, "She has a nice nature — she compares favorably with her mother." The highest praise of a 23-year-old shorthand typist was, "He treats me as a woman, not as a sack of potatoes." And a 20-year-old student obviously found a mother-figure in his financee — "She is very comforting."

Half the girls living at home are likely to marry the first eligible man proposing to them — but only one-third of the girls living away from home do so. This is a situation generally in the Anglo-Saxon countries, with no parallel in the Latin lands, where comparatively few girls leave home, families are together and courtship amd marriage patterns are essentially matters of family arrangement. In northern Europe and in North America the conception of a courtship as an essential stage in the union of families would not be popular: All the tendency today is toward complete freedom of choice and behavior.

But life is made fairly easy for all western couples, in great contrast to China — where one couple were recently reported to have spent their honeymoon collecting manure for the state. Their effort was quite serious: they had no wedding party and no presents, as Chairman Mao is all for late and frugal weddings. With the minimum marriage age put at 28 for men and 25 for women, young men seen strolling in the street with their girl friends are often criticized. The highest praise is reserved for those who do not get married at all "for the sake of work and revolution."

Plan A Post-Holiday Project

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR READERS,

One of the joys of being a columnist is wishing your friends from coast to coast a beautiful Christmas season. What fun it would be to thank each and every one of you personally for making Sew Simple your bible of sewing.

I welcome your letters, so please, now that the holiday push is over, sit down and write to me. Tell me what you would like to find in the column, etc. My New Year's resolution is to make the world of happy sewing more exciting than ever.

As soon as the holidays are over, plan a nice big sewing project. Make it from a fabric or color that you've always wanted and before you know it, you'll forget that "let-down feeling" that most of us get after a holiday season.

MRS. ESTELLE HARCINSKI, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., is this week's winner of the Tailor Trix pressing board for her following suggestion:

"I just finished a holiday formal for my teen-age daughter but when it came to finishing the cummerbund, I couldn't find the fabric-covered boning that was needed. I cut two strips of plastic from a coffee-can lid, enclosed them in seam binding to match the fabric and found they served beautifully as boning. I only needed 4-½ inch strips, but if longer ones were needed, you could cut them from a detergent or bleach bottle."

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

Last year I made a beautiful holiday dress, put a fortune in trimming on it and now, just a year later, it's out of date. I did use the long slender sleeves, but the dress has no shape, it's a tent style. Since I don't have much occasion to wear this dressy dress, can you think of anything I can do with it to make it look a little newer? — MRS. D. H.

DEAR MRS. D. H.:

This very same thing happened to me and I can tell you how I solved this problem and everyone loves it more now than the way it looked originally.

Put your dress on and pin in a fold of fabric each side of the center front. The edge of the fold would be in line with your bust, and give the dress a "closer to the body" look. This will look like a large pleat and actually give a rolled pleat effect to the hem.

Place a decorative frog over the spot you've tacked the fold in place. You must do this when it is on you to know whether it is more flattering to place the frog in an "empire" location or at the natural waistline. Today you can purchase frogs in gold, silver, amd many colors.

Incidentally, this same little decorative touch could be used on any type dress, not just a brocade or holiday style.

DEAR MRS. FARMER,

I bought a vinyl fabric to

A Time And Place To Propose

London Express Service

LONDON — Most marriage proposals are made in the back of a parked car. The next most popular place is the back row of a movie or theater, then the girl's house, on the beach, in a restaurant, while having a drink back at his place, while out walking, aboard public transportation, at various sports meetings or in church.

For this invaluable sociological information we are indebted to a Swedish survey team.

THERE IS, of course, always the chance of a proposal in an unlikely place, as when Nikolai Lehmann wanted to put the question to his girl friend, Magda Gerav. He chalked "Will you marry me?" on the ground at a busy Helsinki road junction. She was wed to him when he came out of the hospital, for he was knocked down and injured by a car as he chalked the proposal.

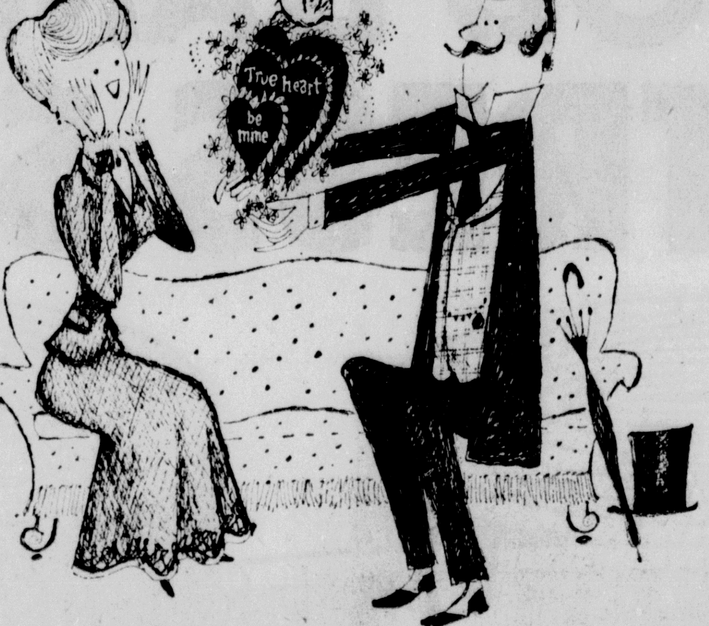
Highly bizarre was the culmination of the courtship of a young English airman as he stood on a stage before more than a thousand people at a holiday camp. He had been carrying the ring around in his pocket for some time but was too shy to propose.

A comedian in the show who knew him decided that boldness was best. He shoved the airman through a door — and the wooer found himself on stage. The comedian called the girl up from the audience and prodded the youth towards her, "Haven't you something to say?"

"Will you marry me?" asked the blushing youth. "Yes" she murmured. The couple kissed. Curtain. Stormy applause.

IN LIVING memory courtship was an elaborate business — the sly pressure of a hand. . . ."May I call you Mavis?" — a furtive kiss before or after the first movie visit . . . gradually moving towards that crucial appraisal of the young man by the girl's father and mother. There was even a formal interview when the young man was delicately sounded about his prospects.

There was an enormous lot of palaver even before the full tide of red roses and chocolates — and the further back in history the more the affianced ones as the etiquette books called them were hemmed in. Even when the chaperone was being forgotten, it was a forward girl who ventured out even with her fiance in his car. A restaurant meal together was thought unconventional, and a weekend together, let alone a holiday, for the pair was thought the height of immorality.



Proposals are still important, but the declaration of love was once a much more elaborate and romantic occasion. Many suitors did indeed go down on their knees before the lady (never the woman) of their choice. Speeches were rehearsed, dramatics studied, even gestures practiced. With feminine intuition the loved one had seen it all working up for a long time.

The convention was for her to blush (how many ex-virgins blush now?) to exclaim, panting, that it was all so sudden. She might even faint with emotion — and so the thoughtful and canny lover would have the smelling salts ready. The real wolf, improving on the occasion — might daringly unbutton the top of her dress to give her more air.

BUT THE ANSWER was usually "yes." The girl was only too glad to have the promise of a lifetime's security and fell, perhaps for the first time, in his arms. There was a good deal of boo-hooing and many wives treasured all their lives the dainty square of fabric on which they wiped away their joyous tears marking the occasion which the old-time romantic novelists used to call "lighting a thousand candles in her heart."

Gifts of locks of hair and poetic love letters still mark courtship in many Latin countries, but in the permissive lands much of this has disappeared. Far fewer young men take to drink through unrequited love — or emigrate to wild, stern countries. Girls don't pine away any more: they scheme to get the next suitor. And in the permissive societies consolation comes a lot quicker for both sexes.

The accent is on the practical, the matter-of-fact. In a British survey of nearly 600 persons of all social classes aged 16 to 30 contemplating matrimony the down-to-earth attitude prevailed.

A girl librarian aged 29 said, "The first time I saw him I thought — that will do." A 21-year-old receptionist said, "I felt that he looked interesting: the beard and glasses intrigued me." A 22-year-old printer summed up his fiancee — "She kissed good, she had a fabulous pair of legs, and she gave me some chips."

A 21-YEAR-OLD display artist said of his beloved, "She has a nice nature — she compares favorably with her mother." The highest praise of a 23-year-old shorthand typist was, "He treats me as a woman, not as a sack of potatoes." And a 20-year-old student obviously found a mother-figure in his financee — "She is very comforting."

Half the girls living at home are likely to marry the first eligible man proposing to them — but only one-third of the girls living away from home do so. This is a situation generally in the Anglo-Saxon countries, with no parallel in the Latin lands, where comparatively few girls leave home, families are together and courtship amd marriage patterns are essentially matters of family arrangement. "Will you marry me?" asked the blushing youth. "Yes" she murmured. The couple kissed. Curtain. Stormy applause.

IN LIVING memory courtship was an elaborate business — the sly pressure of a hand. . . . "May I call you Mavis?" — a furtive kiss before or after the first movie visit . . . gradually moving towards that crucial appraisal of the young man by the girl's father and mother. There was even a formal interview when the young man was delicately sounded about his prospects.

There was an enormous lot of palaver even before the full tide of red roses and chocolates — and the further back in history the more the affianced ones as the etiquette books called them were hemmed in. Even when the chaperone was being forgotten, it was a forward girl who ventured out even with her fiance in his car. A restaurant meal together was thought unconventional, and a weekend together, let alone a holiday, for the pair was thought the height of immorality.

True heart be mine

Proposals are still important, but the declaration of love was once a much more elaborate and romantic occasion. Many suitors did indeed go down on their knees before the lady (never the woman) of their choice. Speeches were rehearsed, dramatics studied, even gestures practiced. With feminine intuition the loved one had seen it all working up for a long time.

The convention was for her to blush (how many ex-virgins blush now?) to exclaim, panting, that it was all so sudden. She might even faint with emotion — and so the thoughtful and canny lover would have the smelling salts ready. The real wolf, improving on the occasion — might daringly unbutton the top of her dress to give her more air.

BUT THE ANSWER was usually "yes." The girl was only too glad to have the promise of a lifetime's security and fell, perhaps for the first time, in his arms. There was a good deal of boo-hooing and many wives treasured all their lives the dainty square of fabric on which they wiped away their joyous tears marking the occasion which the old-time romantic novelists used to call "lighting a thousand candles in her heart."

Gifts of locks of hair and poetic love letters still mark courtship in many Latin countries, but in the permissive lands much of this has disappeared. Far fewer young men take to drink through unrequited love — or emigrate to wild, stern countries. Girls don't pine away any more: they scheme to get the next suitor. And in the permissive societies consolation comes a lot quicker for both sexes.

The accent is on the practical, the matter-of-fact. In a British survey of nearly 600 persons of all social classes aged 16 to 30 contemplating matrimony the down-to-earth attitude prevailed.

A girl librarian aged 29 said, "The first time I saw him I thought — that will do." A 21-year-old receptionist said, "I felt that he looked interesting: the beard and glasses intrigued me." A 22-year-old printer summed up his fiancee — "She kissed good, she had a fabulous pair of legs, and she gave me some chips."

A 21-YEAR-OLD display artist said of his beloved, "She has a nice nature — she compares favorably with her mother." The highest praise of a 23-year-old shorthand typist was, "He treats me as a woman, not as a sack of potatoes." And a 20-year-old student obviously found a mother-figure in his financee — "She is very comforting."

Half the girls living at home are likely to marry the first eligible man proposing to them — but only one-third of the girls living away from home do so. This is a situation generally in the Anglo-Saxon countries, with no parallel in the Latin lands, where comparatively few girls leave home, families are together and courtship amd marriage patterns are essentially matters of family arrangement. In northern Europe and in North America the conception of a courtship as an essential stage in the union of families would not be popular: All the tendency today is toward complete freedom of choice and behavior.

But life is made fairly easy for all western couples, in great contrast to China — where one couple were recently reported to have spent their honeymoon collecting manure for the state. Their effort was quite serious: they had no wedding party and no presents, as Chairman Mao is all for late and frugal weddings. With the minimum marriage age put at 28 for men and 25 for women, young men seen strolling in the street with their girl friends are often criticized. The highest praise is reserved for those who do not get married at all "for the sake of work and revolution."

Plan A Post-Holiday Project

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR READERS,

One of the joys of being a columnist is wishing your friends from coast to coast a beautiful Christmas season. What fun it would be to thank each and every one of you personally for making Sew Simple your bible of sewing.

I welcome your letters, so please, now that the holiday push is over, sit down and write to me. Tell me what you would like to find in the column, etc. My New Year's resolution is to make the world of happy sewing more exciting than ever.

As soon as the holidays are over, plan a nice big sewing project. Make it from a fabric or color that you've always wanted and before you know it, you'll forget that "let-down feeling" that most of us get after a holiday season.

MRS. ESTELLE HARCINSKI, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., is this week's winner of the Tailor Trix pressing board for her following suggestion:

"I just finished a holiday formal for my teen-age daughter but when it came to finishing the cummerbund, I couldn't find the fabric-covered boning that was needed. I cut two strips of plastic from a coffee-can lid, enclosed them in seam binding to match the fabric and found they served beautifully as boning. I only needed 4-½ inch strips, but if longer ones were needed, you could cut them from a detergent or bleach bottle."

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

Last year I made a beautiful holiday dress, put a fortune in trimming on it and now, just a year later, it's out of date. I did use the long slender sleeves, but the dress has no shape, it's a tent style. Since I don't have much occasion to wear this dressy dress, can you think of anything I can do with it to make it look a little newer? — MRS. D. H.

DEAR MRS. D. H.:

This very same thing happened to me and I can tell you how I solved this problem and everyone loves it more now than the way it looked originally.

Put your dress on and pin in a fold of fabric each side of the center front. The edge of the fold would be in line with your bust, and give the dress a "closer to the body" look. This will look like a large pleat and actually give a rolled pleat effect to the hem.

Place a decorative frog over the spot you've tacked the fold in place. You must do this when it is on you to know whether it is more flattering to place the frog in an "empire" location or at the natural waistline. Today you can purchase frogs in gold, silver, amd many colors.

Incidentally, this same little decorative touch could be used on any type dress, not just a brocade or holiday style.

DEAR MRS. FARMER,

I bought a vinyl fabric to

Fighting For Justice Is Good But Choose Weapons Carefully

DEAR HELEN:

I disagree with your answer to "Sarah," who complained of a prejudiced teacher and his persecution. She is evidently a bright girl, for she says the class is one-of-a-kind, so advanced she can't transfer out of it.

I, too, was in a similar situation. The advice I received was like yours, "Take it as a challenge. Ace the course in spite of the teacher."

You and my advisors seem to think fighting for that "A" is a sign of strength. I think it's being a human bumper, putting a grade ahead of pride and principle.

Even if Sarah could change this bigot, she shouldn't sit there and absorb all the ill treatment. Isn't this why minority races haven't made it, until now?

I advise Sarah not to quietly allow herself and other Jewish classmates to be treated unfairly, even if it means a "D" or an "F." "Grin and bear it" brings more of the same. I'm for — GRIN AND FIGHT IT

DEAR G AND FI:

You're absolutely right. But put it this way: If you fell in a well and the only person with a rope was a mean, prejudiced bigot, would you refuse help on principle, or would you haul yourself out with his grudging assistance — then do your darndest to change his attitudes. . . . Or more important, the attitudes of others like him?

Fighting for justice is always good, but choose your time, place and weapons carefully — when you have a fighting chance to win — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I guess I'm what you would call an "every Saturday night girl." A lot of other girls are in the same boat.

Instead of taking you out, the guys say, "See you at the dance Saturday night," or arrange to meet you at the game, or the pizza parlor — where you buy your own.

I'm 16 and I've never had a real date, though I "go around with" boys. It's always, "Meet me there," never "How about me taking you?"

Girls give all the parties, buy all the goodies and act grateful when the boys come. Guys drop in at your house uninvited and expect to spend the evening watching TV and eating.

We know dates cost money, but after all, we have budget problems too, and feeding these guys isn't cheap. Most of them not only want some lovin' (after we meet them there and pay our way in) but they won't put out for anything.

Why can't the boys start asking and quit taking? — My mother says it wasn't like that in her dating days. — NO DATES CUZ I WAS BORN TOO LATE

DEAR NDCIWBTL:

It was getting like that in your mother's dating days, and it's getting more so each time women win another round in the female equality battle.

For every double standard you gals topple, you lose a little on the "protect and pamper" front. Pity. — H.

Personal to "Will It Last?"— Roger de Bussy-Rebutin said, "Absence is to love what wind is to fire: It puts out the little, it kindles the great." — H.

make a coat and would like to line it with fake fur. My problem is about the size of the pattern. Should I buy a larger pattern to allow for the thickness of the fake fur or what type of pattern should I use? —MRS. S. S.

DEAR MRS. S. S.

You won't need to buy a larger pattern. However, you will have to use great care in your pattern selection. Some patterns are cut very skimpy and close fitting and actually hardly fit over a dress with sleeves. You must look for a coat with less fitting seams and more casual lines.

Also, some fake furs have a very thick or stiff backing which wouldn't look well inside a coat. Try to choose a fur that has a smooth, soft texture.

Avoid the center back pleat which would cause extra bulk. Also, I might suggest you use a lightweight wool for lining the sleeves. The fur would probably make the sleeves too bulky.

DEAR READERS,

Lately, I've gone slightly mad over a can of water-repellent finish spray. It could easily be a gal's best friend and you'll find new uses for it every day.

It all began when a friend of mine was afraid she would ruin a beautiful ball gown because when she got nervous she perspired. We literally soaked the gown, right side and wrong side with this marvelous spray and water just rolled off it.

I became so excited about this that I sprayed the front of a dress of mine (the fronts always seem to end up with "spills" on them). Would you believe, not a sign of a spot after several wearings.

You can spray any type coat you wish to use for an all-weather coat and the water won't penetrate. It's great for children's clothes too. Some women have told me they spray the neck edge of suits and coats and their make-up doesn't soil the garment.

Please don't ever forget this: try this spray on a sample swatch first. Just because I've been so lucky doesn't mean that it will work 100 per cent on absolutely everything.

John T. Zuffinetti Weds In Maryland

John T. Zuffinetti claimed Mary Kelly of Scranton, Pa., as his bride last Saturday at the Paint Branch Unitarian Church in Beltsville, Md.

Mary is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Byrne of Scranton, and John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zuffinetti of Novato.

Edward Downes of Bethesda, Md., served as best man for the bridegroom, who is serving in the Navy as Russian linguist for the National Security Agency in Washington, D.C. He was graduated from Novato High School, College of Marin and the Defense Language Institute in Monterey. He is the brother of Lawrence C. Zuffinetti and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Warne of Mill Valley.

The bride was graduated from Central High School in Scranton and is employed with the Government Employees Insurance Company in Washington, D.C.

The couple will live in Bethesda.

Miss Conception May Not Be The Right Name

GENEVA, Switz. (WMS)—Evidently, the United Nations Population Commission is not superstitious.

Despite gloomy predictions that the future world population explosion will be even more horrendous than predicted, the Commission recently elected as its chairman the most inappropriately-named Miss Concepcion. Miss Mercedes B. Concepcion of the Philippines.

If only poetic justice reigned, surely someone on the staff would have a name like Miss Pildora—translation: birth control pill.

Miss Petersen To Be A Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Donald P. Petersen of San Rafael are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Patricia R., to Daniel J. Tognetti, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Tognetti, also of San Rafael.

Patricia is the sister of Steve, Clif, Ray, Dan, Jeff and Pam Petersen. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bradley of Glen Ellen and Mrs. Esther Hoag of Kelseyville. She was graduated from San Rafael High School and is employed by Pacific Telephone Co. in San Francisco.

Tom, Chris and Bob Tognetti are the future bridegroom's brothers, and he is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Condrotte of Fairfax, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Tognetti of San Francisco. A graduate of Terra Linda High School, he is employed by Bay Area Construction Co. in San Francisco.

The couple plan to be married Feb. 21 in Santa Venetia.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Fighting For Justice Is Good But Choose Weapons Carefully

DEAR HELEN:

I disagree with your answer to "Sarah," who complained of a prejudiced teacher and his persecution. She is evidently a bright girl, for she says the class is one-of-a-kind, so advanced she can't transfer out of it.

I, too, was in a similar situation. The advice I received was like yours, "Take it as a challenge. Ace the course in spite of the teacher."

You and my advisors seem to think fighting for that "A" is a sign of strength. I think it's being a human bumper, putting a grade ahead of pride and principle.

Even if Sarah could change this bigot, she shouldn't sit there and absorb all the ill treatment. Isn't this why minority races haven't made it, until now?

I advise Sarah not to quietly allow herself and other Jewish classmates to be treated unfairly, even if it means a "D" or an "F." "Grin and bear it" brings more of the same. I'm for — GRIN AND FIGHT IT

DEAR G AND FI:

You're absolutely right. But put it this way: If you fell in a well and the only person with a rope was a mean, prejudiced bigot, would you refuse help on principle, or would you haul yourself out with his grudging assistance — then do your darndest to change his attitudes. . . . Or more important, the attitudes of others like him?

Fighting for justice is always good, but choose your time, place and weapons carefully — when you have a fighting chance to win — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I guess I'm what you would call an "every Saturday night girl." A lot of other girls are in the same boat.

Instead of taking you out, the guys say, "See you at the dance Saturday night," or arrange to meet you at the game, or the pizza parlor — where you buy your own.

I'm 16 and I've never had a real date, though I "go around with" boys. It's always, "Meet me there," never "How about me taking you?"

Girls give all the parties, buy all the goodies and act grateful when the boys come. Guys drop in at your house uninvited and expect to spend the evening watching TV and eating.

We know dates cost money, but after all, we have budget problems too, and feeding these guys isn't cheap. Most of them not only want some lovin' (after we meet them there and pay our way in) but they won't put out for anything.

Why can't the boys start asking and quit taking? — My mother says it wasn't like that in her dating days. — NO DATES CUZ I WAS BORN TOO LATE

DEAR NDCIWBTL:

It was getting like that in your mother's dating days, and it's getting more so each time women win another round in the female equality battle.

For every double standard you gals topple, you lose a little on the "protect and pamper" front. Pity. — H.

make a coat and would like to line it with fake fur. My problem is about the size of the pattern. Should I buy a larger pattern to allow for the thickness of the fake fur or what type of pattern should I use? — MRS. S. S.

DEAR MRS. S. S.

You won't need to buy a larger pattern. However, you will have to use great care in your pattern selection. Some patterns are cut very skimpy and close fitting and actually hardly fit over a dress with sleeves. You must look for a coat with less fitting seams and more casual lines.

Also, some fake furs have a very thick or stiff backing which wouldn't look well inside a coat. Try to choose a fur that has a smooth, soft texture.

Avoid the center back pleat which would cause extra bulk. Also, I might suggest you use a lightweight wool for lining the sleeves. The fur would probably make the sleeves too bulky.

DEAR READERS,

Lately, I've gone slightly mad over a can of water-repellent finish spray. It could easily be a gal's best friend and you'll find new uses for it every day.

It all began when a friend of mine was afraid she would ruin a beautiful ball gown because when she got nervous she perspired. We literally soaked the gown, right side and wrong side with this marvelous spray and water just rolled off it.

I became so excited about this that I sprayed the front of a dress of mine (the fronts always seem to end up with "spills" on them). Would you believe, not a sign of a spot after several wearings.

You can spray any type coat you wish to use for an all-weather coat and the water won't penetrate. It's great for children's clothes too. Some women have told me they spray the neck edge of suits and coats and their make-up doesn't soil the garment.

Please don't ever forget this: try this spray on a sample swatch first. Just because I've been so lucky doesn't mean that it will work 100 per cent on absolutely everything.

KNOW YOUR BOARDS

Schools Under City Government

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON
(Second in a series)

The San Rafael Board of Education, unlike any other school board in Marin, is a part of city government.

This comes about because the city charter, adopted in 1912, sets up an educational department.

Article XI, Section 1, of the charter says:

"The school department of the City of San Rafael shall comprise all the schools within the City of San Rafael, the San Rafael School District, and all territory that is now or may hereafter be annexed thereto for school purposes. ... It shall consist of elementary and secondary schools as now established or that may hereafter be established, and may, at the discretion of the board of education, include technical, industrial, kindergarten and night schools; provided, that no school money shall be used for technical, industrial or night schools or kindergarten when such use would prevent the board of education from maintaining elementary and secondary schools as provided by law."

Thus San Rafael once had what is now known as a "unified school district" — elementary and high schools within one system.

This was turned into two districts, however, to permit inclusion within the high school district of what were then the Novato, San Jose, Dixie, and San Quentin elementary school districts, in accord with a 1951 state law that required every elementary district to be part of a high school district. Unification and mergers have since eliminated all except the Divie district.

Meanwhile, however, territory has been added to the San Rafael Elementary School District (designated simply San Rafael School District when the high school district was made separate). As a result, boundaries of both elementary and high school districts vary greatly from boundaries of the city itself.

Nevertheless, the San Rafael Board of Education, set up under the city charter, remains the governing board for both elementary and high school districts. It is the only elective board in San Rafael city government besides the city council itself.

The board of education has five members, serving four-year terms, who are elected in the same municipal elections with city councilmen. Residents of the school districts who live outside the city limits can vote for board of education members although they cannot vote for mayor, city councilmen, city attorney, clerk, treasurer, or police chief.

Except for being a branch of city government, the San Rafael Board of Education operates like any other California school board.

It sets tax rates for both elementary and high school districts, subject only to the limitations on general operating fund levies set in ceilings which must be approved by the electorate.

Although a department of the city, it operates independently of other city departments and has rather minimal contact with most of them. Its only joint program with another city department is the after-school recreation program, and the school system has threatened to withdraw its funds from that next year.

The charter includes a no-exception rule for public meetings of the board of education. "All meetings of said board shall be public," it says in Article XI, Section 4.

As the city council depends largely on the city manager for administration of its business, the board of education depends on the superintendent to carry out its charter mandate of "entire control and management of the public schools."

Unlike the city manager, however, the superintendent of schools serves under a contract. Until last year, "joint-administration" school districts such as San Rafael's were required by state law to give the superintendent a four-year contract. That requirement was eliminated by a law passed by the 1968 Legislature.

Current superintendent is John F. Plank.

The board selects its president annually from among its own members. Current president is Herman L. Childress. Other members are Carl J. Brown, Paul L. Jones, Lawrence I. Kramer Jr., and John C. Pfeiffer.

Brown has the longest service of any present board member, having been elected in 1963 and reelected in 1967. He is also the only member who is also a school teacher, being a teacher and athletic coach at Sir Francis Drake High School in Tamalpais High School District.

Kramer, a former Dixie School District trustee, was elected to the San Rafael board in 1965 and reelected this year. Childress was appointed in 1966 to complete the term of Walter R. Castro Jr., who resigned, and won election the following year. Jones was appointed in 1967 to complete the term of Walter J. Doll, who resigned, and won election this year. Pfeiffer joined the board by election in 1967.

Appointments to fill board of education vacancies are by the city council.

Besides Brown, the school teacher, the current board includes two management consultants (Kramer and Pfeiffer), a Standard Oil Co. of California executive (Childress), and the area field director of the Civil Defense Administration (Jones).

(Tomorrow: The planning commission.)

Scientist's Dilemma Makes A Good Play

By KARL BARRON

SAN FRANCISCO — "It isn't the physicists' fault that every brilliant idea ends up as a bomb these days," says Dr. Edward Teller from the witness stand of "In the Matter of J. Robert Oppenheimer," which opened last night at the Curran. Much of this sometimes brilliant work by Heinar Kipphardt centers about the role (and potential guilt) of the scientist whose works become killing agencies.

An excellent production by the Repertory Theater of Lincoln Center brings several familiar Actors' Workshop faces back to San Francisco, including director Jules Irving.

The play is based loosely upon the hearing held before the personnel security board of the Atomic Energy Commission in 1954 which resulted in the denial of Dr. Oppenheimer's security clearance. Evidence used to accuse him of disloyalty is based upon occurrences which happened long before his original security approval. The difference was that the 1954 hearing came during the height of the McCarthy era, when, as a program note says politely, "the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy exerted great influence on the policies of our country."

Kipphardt, in juggling the procedures of the hearing for dramatic purposes, gives us Curtis Moffat Jr., attorney for the AEC, as an acidulous prosecutor with tactics lifted right from the McCarthy files. Moffat (W. B. Brydon) continually attacks Oppenheimer in the manner of a district attorney seeking a murder conviction.

Oppenheimer, who freely admitted Communist associations prior to World War II, finds himself pilloried for these admissions, and crucified for his avowal that the hydrogen bomb was not good for humanity — a view he adopted after the horror of Hiroshima.

Perhaps the most significant line of the play comes from Teller, "father of the H-bomb," when he says, "the discovery of facts by scientists is neither good nor bad. . .It is how they are used afterward."

But over and again, we are reminded that in star chamber proceedings such as this, guilt by association and conviction by accusation only are used to destroy people. During the proceedings, Moffat accuses Oppenheimer of "ideological treason." In his final speech, Oppenheimer questions whether perhaps he was guilty of this!

The play is staged on a simple two-level set, and both of its two acts are preceded by films of the bombs — A and H. Irving keeps his actors moving with easy casualness, and what could become static never does.

Oppenheimer is played with deep intensity by Paul Sparer, who ends up as the only person in the hearing room with a sense of humor, laughing much of the time at his own downfall, and yet deeply affected by it.

Others contributing much to the production's excitement are Philip Sterling with his frustrated defense attorney; Tom Rosqui as an oily Security officer; Walter Abel as a more sympathetic security officer; and Ray Fry as physicist Jacob Lehmann, a brusque and sometimes acid witness. Deserving special mention are William Myers for his delightful protrait of Ward. V. Evans, the AEC board member who voted to clear Oppenheimer, and Frederick Rolf for his irritating Teller.

"In the Matter of J. Robert Oppenheimer" is the first solid hit that Lincoln Center Rep has had since the company ceased being the Actors' Workshop and became Manhattanized. It is a fine piece of theatrical craftsmanship, and an omen of good things to come. It will play at the Curran through Jan. 10.

Rock Fete: Police Dogs, Preaching

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI)— Marijuana-sniffing police dogs gave the Miami Rock Festival a nearly-clean bill of health for its opening today. It gets underway in chilly weather with the strident sounds of the "Riff Rock" group.

Despite temperatures in the low 40s, 35,000 youthful fans were expected to attend the 72-hour musical weekend.

Before the festival opened, a pack of K-9 corps dogs from the Broward County Sheriffs Department sniffed around the 440-acre Hollywood Speedway festival site and cleared the area of narcotics that had been smuggled in and buried before the festival opened.

"The dogs found a couple of small packets of marijuana, but that was about all," said Sheriff Ed Stack.

The festival has been plagued by county ordinances that at first banned it and then limited it to eight-hour segments of music.

Yesterday, a girl installing a psychedelic light show was injured. Casey Carrasco of Berkeley, Calif., was hurt when a gust of wind blew a board from scaffolding and it hit her on the back and head. She was hospitalized in fair condition, but the accident delayed work at the festival for several hours.

The festival—the second one in south Florida this year—will get some religion tomorrow morning when evangelist Billy Graham will preach an 11 a.m. sermon to the music lovers.

Schools Under City Government

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON
(Second in a series)

The San Rafael Board of Education, unlike any other school board in Marin, is a part of city government.

This comes about because the city charter, adopted in 1912, sets up an educational department.

Article XI, Section 1, of the charter says:

"The school department of the City of San Rafael shall comprise all the schools within the City of San Rafael, the San Rafael School District, and all territory that is now or may hereafter be annexed thereto for school purposes. . . . It shall consist of elementary and secondary schools as now established or that may hereafter be established, and may, at the discretion of the board of education, include technical, industrial, kindergarten and night schools; provided, that no school money shall be used for technical, industrial or night schools or kindergarten when such use would prevent the board of education from maintaining elementary and secondary schools as provided by law."

Thus San Rafael once had what is now known as a "unified school district" — elementary and high schools within one system.

This was turned into two districts, however, to permit inclusion within the high school district of what were then the Novato, San Jose, Dixie, and San Quentin elementary school districts, in accord with a 1951 state law that required every elementary district to be part of a high school district. Unification and mergers have since eliminated all except the Divie district.

Meanwhile, however, territory has been added to the San Rafael Elementary School District (designated simply San Rafael School District when the high school district was made separate). As a result, boundaries of both elementary and high school districts vary greatly from boundaries of the city itself.

Nevertheless, the San Rafael Board of Education, set up under the city charter, remains the governing board for both elementary and high school districts. It is the only elective board in San Rafael city government besides the city council itself.

The board of education has five members, serving four-year terms, who are elected in the same municipal elections with city councilmen. Residents of the school districts who live outside the city limits can vote for board of education members although they cannot vote for mayor, city councilmen, city attorney, clerk, treasurer, or police chief.

Except for being a branch of city government, the San Rafael Board of Education operates like any other California school board.

It sets tax rates for both elementary and high school districts, subject only to the limitations on general operating fund levies set in ceilings which must be approved by the electorate.

Although a department of the city, it operates independently of other city departments and has rather minimal contact with most of them. Its only joint program with another city department is the after-school recreation program, and the school system has threatened to withdraw its funds from that next year.

The charter includes a no-exception rule for public meetings of the board of education. "All meetings of said board shall be public," it says in Article XI, Section 4.

As the city council depends largely on the city manager for administration of its business, the board of education depends on the superintendent to carry out its charter mandate of "entire control and management of the public schools."

Unlike the city manager, however, the superintendent of schools serves under a contract. Until last year, "joint-administration" school districts such as San Rafael's were required by state law to give the superintendent a four-year contract. That requirement was eliminated by a law passed by the 1968 Legislature.

Current superintendent is John F. Plank.

The board selects its president annually from among its own members. Current president is Herman L. Childress. Other members are Carl J. Brown, Paul L. Jones, Lawrence I. Kramer Jr., and John C. Pfeiffer.

Brown has the longest service of any present board member, having been elected in 1963 and reelected in 1967. He is also the only member who is also a school teacher, being a teacher and athletic coach at Sir Francis Drake High School in Tamalpais High School District.

Kramer, a former Dixie School District trustee, was elected to the San Rafael board in 1965 and reelected this year. Childress was appointed in 1966 to complete the term of Walter R. Castro Jr., who resigned, and won election the following year. Jones was appointed in 1967 to complete the term of Walter J. Doll, who resigned, and won election this year. Pfeiffer joined the board by election in 1967.

Appointments to fill board of education vacancies are by the city council.

Besides Brown, the school teacher, the current board includes two management consultants (Kramer and Pfeiffer), a Standard Oil Co. of California executive (Childress), and the area field director of the Civil Defense Administration (Jones).

(Tomorrow: The planning commission.)

Scientist's Dilemma Makes A Good Play

By KARL BARRON

SAN FRANCISCO — "It isn't the physicists' fault that every brilliant idea ends up as a bomb these days," says Dr. Edward Teller from the witness stand of "In the Matter of J. Robert Oppenheimer," which opened last night at the Curran. Much of this sometimes brilliant work by Heinar Kipphardt centers about the role (and potential guilt) of the scientist whose works become killing agencies.

An excellent production by the Repertory Theater of Lincoln Center brings several familiar Actors' Workshop faces back to San Francisco, including director Jules Irving.

The play is based loosely upon the hearing held before the personnel security board of the Atomic Energy Commission in 1954 which resulted in the denial of Dr. Oppenheimer's security clearance. Evidence used to accuse him of disloyalty is based upon occurrences which happened long before his original security approval. The difference was that the 1954 hearing came during the height of the McCarthy era, when, as a program note says politely, "the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy exerted great influence on the policies of our country."

Kipphardt, in juggling the procedures of the hearing for dramatic purposes, gives us Curtis Moffat Jr., attorney for the AEC, as an acidulous prosecutor with tactics lifted right from the McCarthy files. Moffat (W. B. Brydon) continually attacks Oppenheimer in the manner of a district attorney seeking a murder conviction.

Oppenheimer, who freely admitted Communist associations prior to World War II, finds himself pilloried for these admissions, and crucified for his avowal that the hydrogen bomb was not good for humanity — a view he adopted after the horror of Hiroshima.

Perhaps the most significant line of the play comes from Teller, "father of the H-bomb," when he says, "the discovery of facts by scientists is neither good nor bad. . .It is how they are used afterward."

But over and again, we are reminded that in star chamber proceedings such as this, guilt by association and conviction by accusation only are used to destroy people. During the proceedings, Moffat accuses Oppenheimer of "ideological treason." In his final speech, Oppenheimer questions whether perhaps he was guilty of this!

The play is staged on a simple two-level set, and both of its two acts are preceded by films of the bombs — A and H. Irving keeps his actors moving with easy casualness, and what could become static never does.

Oppenheimer is played with deep intensity by Paul Sparer, who ends up as the only person in the hearing room with a sense of humor, laughing much of the time at his own downfall, and yet deeply affected by it.

Others contributing much to the production's excitement are Philip Sterling with his frustrated defense attorney; Tom Rosqui as an oily Security officer; Walter Abel as a more sympathetic security officer; and Ray Fry as physicist Jacob Lehmann, a brusque and sometimes acid witness. Deserving special mention are William Myers for his delightful protrait of Ward. V. Evans, the AEC board member who voted to clear Oppenheimer, and Frederick Rolf for his irritating Teller.

"In the Matter of J. Robert Oppenheimer" is the first solid hit that Lincoln Center Rep has had since the company ceased being the Actors' Workshop and became Manhattanized. It is a fine piece of theatrical craftsmanship, and an omen of good things to come. It will play at the Curran through Jan. 10.

Rock Fete: Police Dogs, Preaching

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI)—Marijuana-sniffing police dogs gave the Miami Rock Festival a nearly-clean bill of health for its opening today. It gets underway in chilly weather with the strident sounds of the "Riff Rock" group.

Despite temperatures in the low 40s, 35,000 youthful fans were expected to attend the 72-hour musical weekend.

Before the festival opened, a pack of K-9 corps dogs from the Broward County Sheriffs Department sniffed around the 440-acre Hollywood Speedway festival site and cleared the area of narcotics that had been smuggled in and buried before the festival opened.

"The dogs found a couple of small packets of marijuana, but that was about all," said Sheriff Ed Stack.

The festival has been plagued by county ordinances that at first banned it and then limited it to eight-hour segments of music.

Yesterday, a girl installing a psychedelic light show was injured. Casey Carrasco of Berkeley, Calif., was hurt when a gust of wind blew a board from scaffolding and it hit her on the back and head. She was hospitalized in fair condition, but the accident delayed work at the festival for several hours.

The festival—the second one in south Florida this year—will get some religion tomorrow morning when evangelist Billy Graham will preach an 11 a.m. sermon to the music lovers.

Inmates Elated By Change In Family Visiting Rules

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Morale among prisoners at the maximum security Western Penitentiary was "100 per cent higher" yesterday because of an experiment triggered by a letter from a 10-year-old boy.

About 70 families visited inmates at the walled-in grey penitentiary on the Ohio River Christmas Day, and for the first time the prisoners were able to kiss their wives and children and hold the youngsters on their laps.

In the past they could talk with their families only through a wire screen.

"We are going to continue the practice every visiting day," Warden Joseph R. Brierly said. "Morale around here has increased 100 per cent."

The warden said he decided on the experiment after much thought, following a letter received from an inmate's son several weeks ago. the letter said in part:

"Dear Warden:

"I love my daddy. The next time I visit him will you let me kiss him?"

Brierly said the experiment went off without a single problem.

"The inmates behaved like perfect gentlemen. No one took advantage of the situation," he said.

Benefit Recital Set

Argentine concert organist Norberto Guinaldo will give a recital Jan. 11 at 8 p.m. at the Sonoma Community Center, 264 East Napa Street, Sonoma, to benefit the Furnishings Restoration Fund of the General Vallejo Memorial Association.

Fairfax Driver Charged After Crash, Argument

A 27-year-old Fairfax man was arrested on suspicion of resisting arrest and interfering with a policeman discharging his duties after a two-car collision in San Rafael Wednesday, police reported.

Young's car collided with one driven by Robert David Grime, 16, of 1423 Grand Avenue, police said.

The man, Charles Leroy Young of 11 Maring Street, was booked into Marin County Jail after he refused to allow a tow truck to move his damaged car from Grand and Belle avenues following the 9:50 p.m. crash, police said.

Young used abusive language and hit an officer in the stomach with his elbow as he was being taken in an elevator to county jail, police charged.

He was released on $625 bail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Puerto Rico is about 1,000 miles southeast of Miami.

Inmates Elated By Change In Family Visiting Rules

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Morale among prisoners at the maximum security Western Penitentiary was "100 per cent higher" yesterday because of an experiment triggered by a letter from a 10-year-old boy.

About 70 families visited inmates at the walled-in grey penitentiary on the Ohio River Christmas Day, and for the first time the prisoners were able to kiss their wives and children and hold the youngsters on their laps.

In the past they could talk with their families only through a wire screen.

"We are going to continue the practice every visiting day," Warden Joseph R. Brierly said. "Morale around here has increased 100 per cent."

The warden said he decided on the experiment after much thought, following a letter received from an inmate's son several weeks ago. the letter said in part:

"Dear Warden:

"I love my daddy. The next time I visit him will you let me kiss him?"

Brierly said the experiment went off without a single problem.

"The inmates behaved like perfect gentlemen. No one took advantage of the situation," he said.

Benefit Recital Set

Argentine concert organist Norberto Guinaldo will give a recital Jan. 11 at 8 p.m. at the Sonoma Community Center, 264 East Napa Street, Sonoma, to benefit the Furnishings Restoration Fund of the General Vallejo Memorial Association.

Fairfax Driver Charged After Crash, Argument

A 27-year-old Fairfax man was arrested on suspicion of resisting arrest and interfering with a policeman discharging his duties after a two-car collision in San Rafael Wednesday, police reported.

Young's car collided with one driven by Robert David Grime, 16, of 1423 Grand Avenue, police said.

The man, Charles Leroy Young of 11 Maring Street, was booked into Marin County Jail after he refused to allow a tow truck to move his damaged car from Grand and Belle avenues following the 9:50 p.m. crash, police said.

Young used abusive language and hit an officer in the stomach with his elbow as he was being taken in an elevator to county jail, police charged.

He was released on $625 bail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Puerto Rico is about 1,000 miles southeast of Miami.

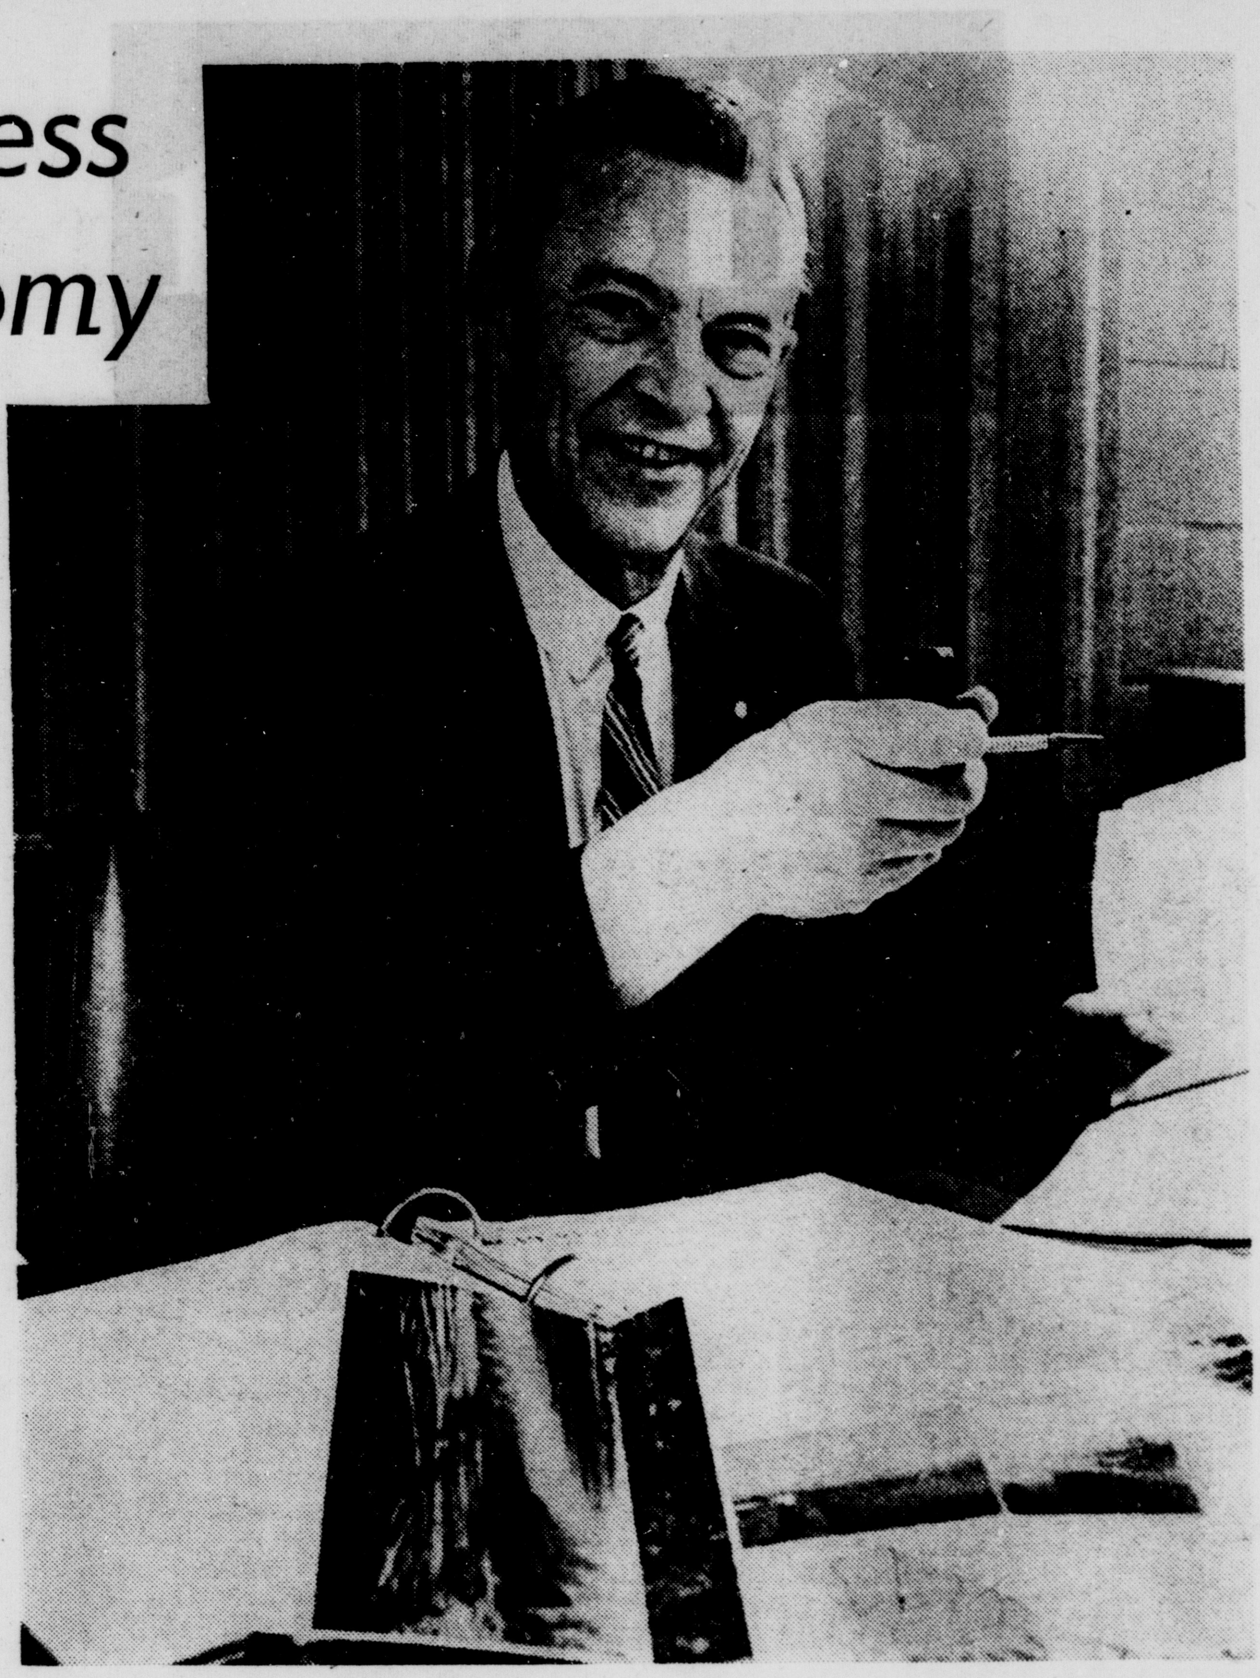
A Year Of Progress For County Economy

Marin Made Significant Forward Strides In '69



CARROLL A. SNYKER, manager of the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau, has written another of his year-end articles for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine, summarizing the economic trends and developments of the year just completed, and looking ahead to the new year before us.

By CARROLL A. SNYKER

In a recapitulation of Marin's economic development during the past year, several pluses stand out and merit stressing:

1. Though we are still limited in capability, the county's first real emergence into servicing more sizable numbers of visitors in either groups or as individuals in one establishment.

2. Mentioned last year and increasing both in size and frequency in 1969 was the choice of Marin for administrative offices. There is good evidence that this relatively new type of economic development in Marin will continue to be active.

3. Started by the acquisition of Fairchild Semiconductor 10 years ago, Marin has had a resurgence as the locale for establishment of electronic and related technical product facilities.

4. By its continuing and sharp increase in numbers of visitors, Point Reyes National Seashore is proving itself as the magnet it was anticipated to be, but there has been practically a total lacking of facilities to accommodate these tourists for longer than a daytime stay. In July, the Olema Ranch Campground opened with 67 units. It has done well, and the owner plans a 33-unit expansion for the next year's season.

I THINK you'll find more detail on these points interesting, not only because of the progress they already encompass, but also for what they portend.

The Holiday Inn has been described as an "instantaneous success." This fortunate experience in its short life since last June is all the more outstanding in view of the many who investigated Marin over the years as a possible location for a motel of about the Holiday's size and then backed off. The success has prompted an expansion of 120 units now under construction which, added to the present 118, gives us a nicely expanded convention potential.

While they are not entirely dependent upon each other, better motels-hotels and administrative offices/distributors do have a relationship, since the latter promote executives and salesmen visitors who expect a better-class place to stay in the vicinity. The administrative office splurge got started before the Holiday, but most of the larger acquisitions antedate it.

It's an added plus on both sides.

THE WORD "splurge" is a good description of what is happening in the office building and administrative office field in Marin. There are now six sizable such projects in process in the Terra Linda area containing a total of 368,000 square feet.

Commerce Clearing House — now constructing 110,000 square feet of office space on Quail Hill for their western headquarters and including space for lease. This is only the start of what Commerce Clearing House plans to do with this 82-acre site. Later development will include a 200-person conference complex, a separate office building, some housing and a small vineyard to produce premium wines. So far, three and a half million dollars in site development and construction permits have been issued on the project. Commerce Clearing House will have about 100 employees.

Western Travelers Life Insurance and its affiliated Mutual Fund Associates — work has started on their 24,000-square-foot national headquarters. Western Travelers has moved here from Los Angeles, and Mutual Fund will do so from San Francisco. Will have 60 to 70 employees. The building permit was for $399,300.

American Pacific Life Insurance Co. — is acquiring a five-acre parcel near the Terra Linda interchange on which it will construct a 90,000-square-foot building for removal of their national headquarters from San Francisco. Some of the office space will be available for lease.

Holiday Plaza — a building permit for $1,158,600 has been issued for this 60,000-square-foot office structure near the Holiday Inn. All of the space is to be leased and the market for it was intensively investigated before the construction go-ahead was given.

El Marinero — a 63,000-square-foot office building on North San Pedro Road planned by the Charlton Investment Co. of San Francisco. All of the space will be available for lease.

A series of office buildings has been erected in recent years in Northgate Industrial Park aggrating 124,000 square feet. The latest, now practically completed, is 21,000 square feet in size. Most of this space has been built and is owned by Ron Antonioli of San Rafael who has had great success in leasing it out.

THE MARIN County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau is preparing a campaign to exploit further this obviously lucrative market based on the major premise that, of the large number of principal executives living in Marin, at least a fair proportion of their establishments are domiciled in San Francisco out of pure habit so, "Why commute?" and endure the expense, time and tension that routine exacts.

Additionally, there are other sales points not germane to this article but of value to the customer.

For 1969 we have records of five new manufacturers of electronics and related technical equipment in Marin. The total of such establishments in the county is now 10. The new ones and what they do are:

Alfred Adams Associates — 11 Mark Drive, San Rafael, electronic instrumentation.

Digital Telephone Systems — 85 Mitchell Boulevard, San Rafael, electronic telephone components and systems.

Optoelectronics, Inc. — 4380 Redwood Highway, San Rafael, optoelectronic sensors.

Small Precision Tools, Inc. — 28 Paul Drive, San Rafael, miniature process tools for the electronics industry.

TPLOT Corp., Division of Fair-Isaac — 55 Mitchell Boulevard, San Rafael, computing devices.

This year, so far, 33 new manufacturing enterprises making a variety of products have been established in the county. None is large, but all have growth potential in a matter compatible with Marin's characteristics and opportunities.

STILL IN its infancy and incomplete, Point Reyes National Seashore has become the most popular park in the county. However, strong visitor growth has been experienced by all of them except Samuel P. Taylor State Park which during the season on weekends and holidays is nearly always filled to capacity.

For the short span of years shown below, the five most popular parks in Marin have experienced this kind of attendance increase:

	1965	1969
Point Reyes National Seashore	151,443	909,772 (11 months)
Muir Woods National Monument	596,881	669,510

	1964-65	1967-68
Mount Tamalpais State Park	492,353	718,163
Stinson Beach State Park	431,183	521,981
Samuel P. Taylor State Park	181,408	188,397

THIS IS a lot of visitors even when the Marinites included in the count (an unknown number but undoubtedly a minority) are excluded. From an economic aspect, the benefits are limited because practically all of the attendees are one-daytime-only visitors, spending little or no money locally.

Two things prompt hope for improvement: a visitor area destination survey, predominately federally financed, which

QUAIL HILL is just one of the Marin areas where year-end construction activity signifies that the year now coming to an end has been a busy one on the developmental front for the county. Development and construction permits to date total three and a half million dollars. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

El Marinero — a 63,000-square-foot office building on North San Pedro Road planned by the Charlton Investment Co. of San Francisco. All of the space will be available for lease.

A series of office buildings has been erected in recent years in Northgate Industrial Park aggrating 124,000 square feet. The latest, now practically completed, is 21,000 square feet in size. Most of this space has been built and is owned by Ron Antonioli of San Rafael who has had great success in leasing it out.

THE MARIN County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau is preparing a campaign to exploit further this obviously lucrative market based on the major premise that, of the large number of principal executives living in Marin, at least a fair proportion of their establishments are domiciled in San Francisco out of pure habit so, "Why commute?" and endure the expense, time and tension that routine exacts.

Additionally, there are other sales points not germane to this article but of value to the customer.

For 1969 we have records of five new manufacturers of electronics and related technical equipment in Marin. The total of such establishments in the county is now 10. The new ones and what they do are:

Alfred Adams Associates — 11 Mark Drive, San Rafael, electronic instrumentation.

Digital Telephone Systems — 85 Mitchell Boulevard, San Rafael, electronic telephone components and systems.

Optoelectronics, Inc. — 4380 Redwood Highway, San Rafael, optoelectronic sensors.

Small Precision Tools, Inc. — 28 Paul Drive, San Rafael, miniature process tools for the electronics industry.

TPLOT Corp., Division of Fair-Isaac — 55 Mitchell Boulevard, San Rafael, computing devices.

This year, so far, 33 new manufacturing enterprises making a variety of products have been established in the county. None is large, but all have growth potential in a matter compatible with Marin's characteristics and opportunities.

STILL IN its infancy and incomplete, Point Reyes National Seashore has become the most popular park in the county. However, strong visitor growth has been experienced by all of them except Samuel P. Taylor State Park which during the season on weekends and holidays is nearly always filled to capacity.

For the short span of years shown below, the five most popular parks in Marin have experienced this kind of attendance increase:

	1965	1969
Point Reyes National Seashore	151,443	909,772 (11 months)
Muir Woods National Monument	596,881	669,510
	1964-65	1967-68
Mount Tamalpais State Park	492,353	718,163
Stinson Beach State Park	431,183	521,981
Samuel P. Taylor State Park	181,408	188,397

THIS IS a lot of visitors even when the Marinites included in the count (an unknown number but undoubtedly a minority) are excluded. From an economic aspect, the benefits are limited because practically all of the attendees are one-daytime-only visitors, spending little or no money locally.

Two things prompt hope for improvement: a visitor area destination survey, predominately federally financed, which

A Year Of Pluses For

MARIN COUNTY HAS begun to move in the direction of more and better facilities for servicing conventions and other large gatherings. A major step in that direction is the new Holiday Inn at Terra Linda that has been described as "an instantaneous success." An expansion program is under way there.

SOMETHING NEW in the way of modest-cost housing in Marin County is the mobile home park. The county now boasts two such projects, both near Hamilton Air Force Base. This photo shows one of them, Marin Valley Mobile Country Club Homes in a pretty setting just south of the big air base.

MARIN'S ECONOMY

A Survey Of '69 And Peek At '70

was instigated by the Marin County Planning Department to be performed by consultants next year and in whose direction the county chamber is participating; and, as mentioned, the installation of Olema Ranch Campground which is the first facility of some size in proximity to the National Seashore that permits longer stays.

The survey should provide needed evaluating and waypointing in taking more advantage of our scenic and recreational drawing power, and the ranch is hopefully the forerunner of additional entrepreneurs that will provide useful visitor services and extract more economic benefit from them in the process.

HOW HAS Marin's economy performed in 1969? There are only a few indices available that are sufficiently up-to-date to provide a factual gauge, but those that are, are useful.

During the first six months this year, taxable retail sales were up 11.5 per cent over the like period in 1968. For the first quarter, the increase was 13.1 per cent, second best in the Bay Area counties, and during the second quarter the volume was up 10.5 per cent or fourth best in the Bay Area.

Several of the cities in Marin showed significant advances during the first half of the year. Larkspur's taxable retail volume was up 48.2 per cent; Mill Valley, 26.4 per cent, and Novato, 21.9 per cent. San Rafael, which did 44.1 per cent of the county-wide total, had an increase of 13.7 per cent.

The most significant new retail establishment acquired during the year is the 40,000-square-foot store of W & J Sloane now being completed in Northgate Shopping Center Mall.

THE TOTAL value of building permits during the first 11 months is 19.1 per cent better than in the same 1968 period, or $60,447,324 compared to $50,756,603. The best improvement is in the commercial category (offices, stores, industries, etc.) which is up 46.5 per cent or from $7,954,115 to $11,651,340.

The 1970 prospects in this field appear good.

Residential construction has been slightly better with 1,535 housing units permitted compared to 1,401 in 1968. It was composed of 854 single-family dwellings and 681 units in apartments.

This predominance of homes may not hold next year, judging from the number of larger apartment projects now in the works. This is understandable when considering that the average permit value per home this year is $30,747 (in 1966, it was $26,423), the problems in financing them and the avid demand for apartments.

COSTS FOR housing have played a large part in the emergence of mobile homes as an affordable alternative to houses. Marin now has two such projects — the Los Robles Mobile Home Park, north of Hamilton, with 206 pads; and the Marin Valley Mobile Country Club, south of Hamilton, with 510 pads.

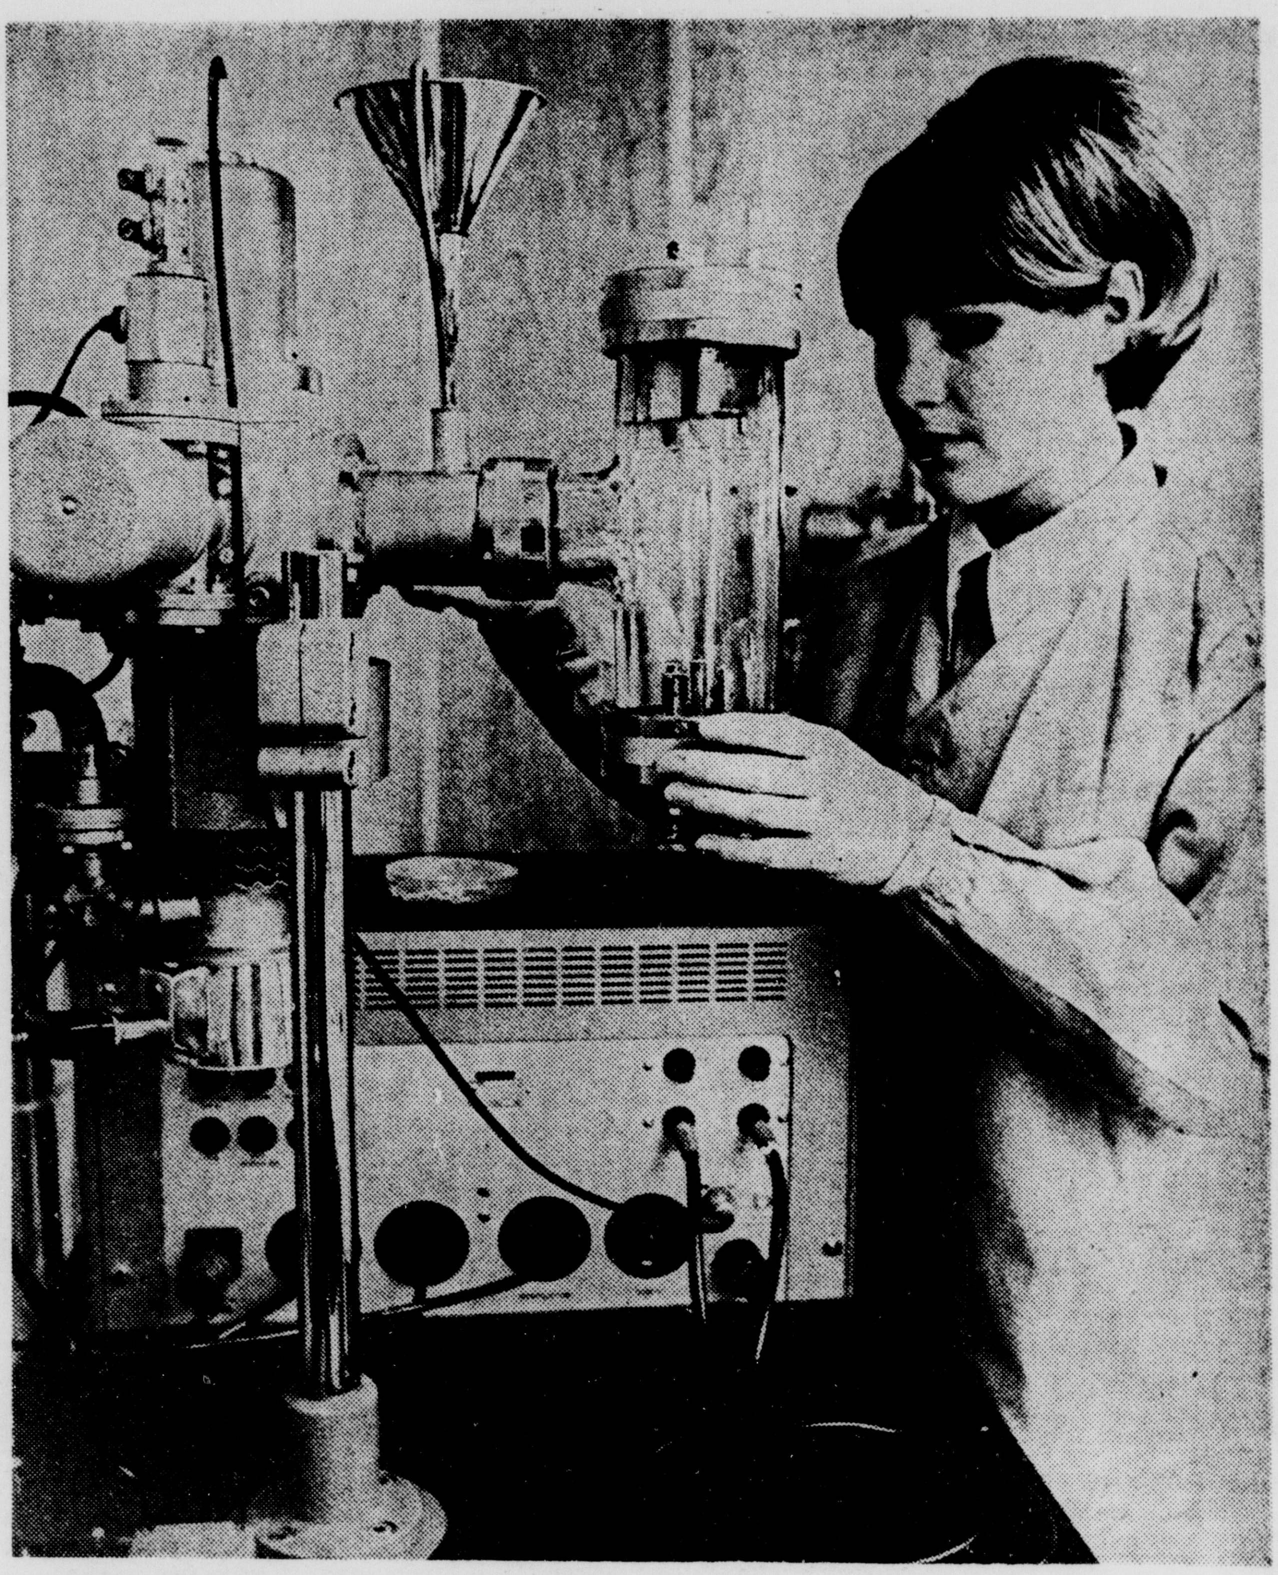
Bank debits, a good indicator of business activity, were up 14.3 per cent in November compared to that month in 1968. However, bank deposits showed only a narrow advance of 1.2 per cent.

The state of the national economy in 1970 will, of course, have a bearing on Marin. Most particularly the availability and cost of financing as it is related to the volume of things we collectively buy or build and the "feel" we have toward making or not making those commitments.

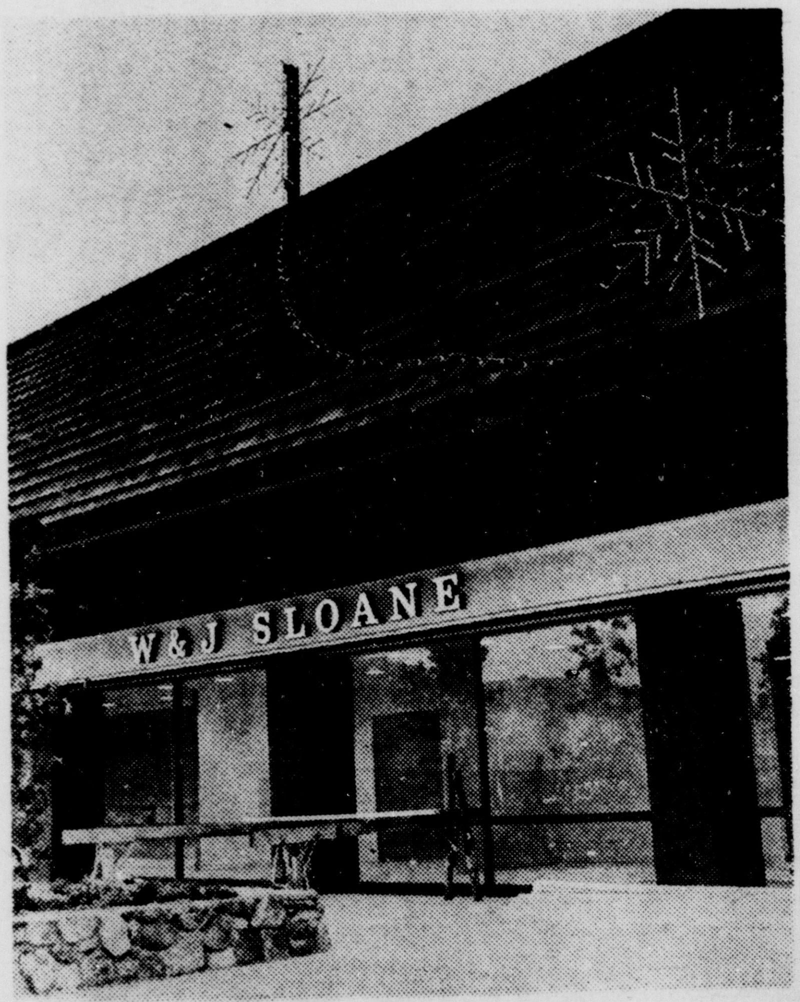
The national economy is in a period of transition. The cooling-off efforts are showing some signs of effect. Given a reasonable balance to the favorable in international and national affairs, the period of shifting will, in the main, be healthy. The next six months or so will be interesting to observe and vital in their effect for a long time thereafter.

MARIN'S ECONOMY is a relatively stable one. Possessing as its residents do, a high average income, and the positions of import which that affluence reflects, we are less affected by economic turns.

Unless the money supply and the costs of putting it to use continue getting tighter, the interest in our county from the outside being evidenced will present Marin in 1970 with a nice batch of new advancements.



PATSY DATOR is employed at the Optoelectronics Inc. plant, manufacturers of optoelectronic sensors, at 4380 Redwood Highway, San Rafael. The concern is one of five manufacturers of electronic and related technical equipment which chose to locate in Marin in 1969, bringing the total of such installations to 10 and making the field of prime importance in the county's economy.



A HIGHLY significant new retail establishment acquired by Marin County during the year now ending is the new W & J Sloane store, now being completed in the Northgate Shopping Center mall at Terra Linda. Countywide, it was a prosperous year for retail business.

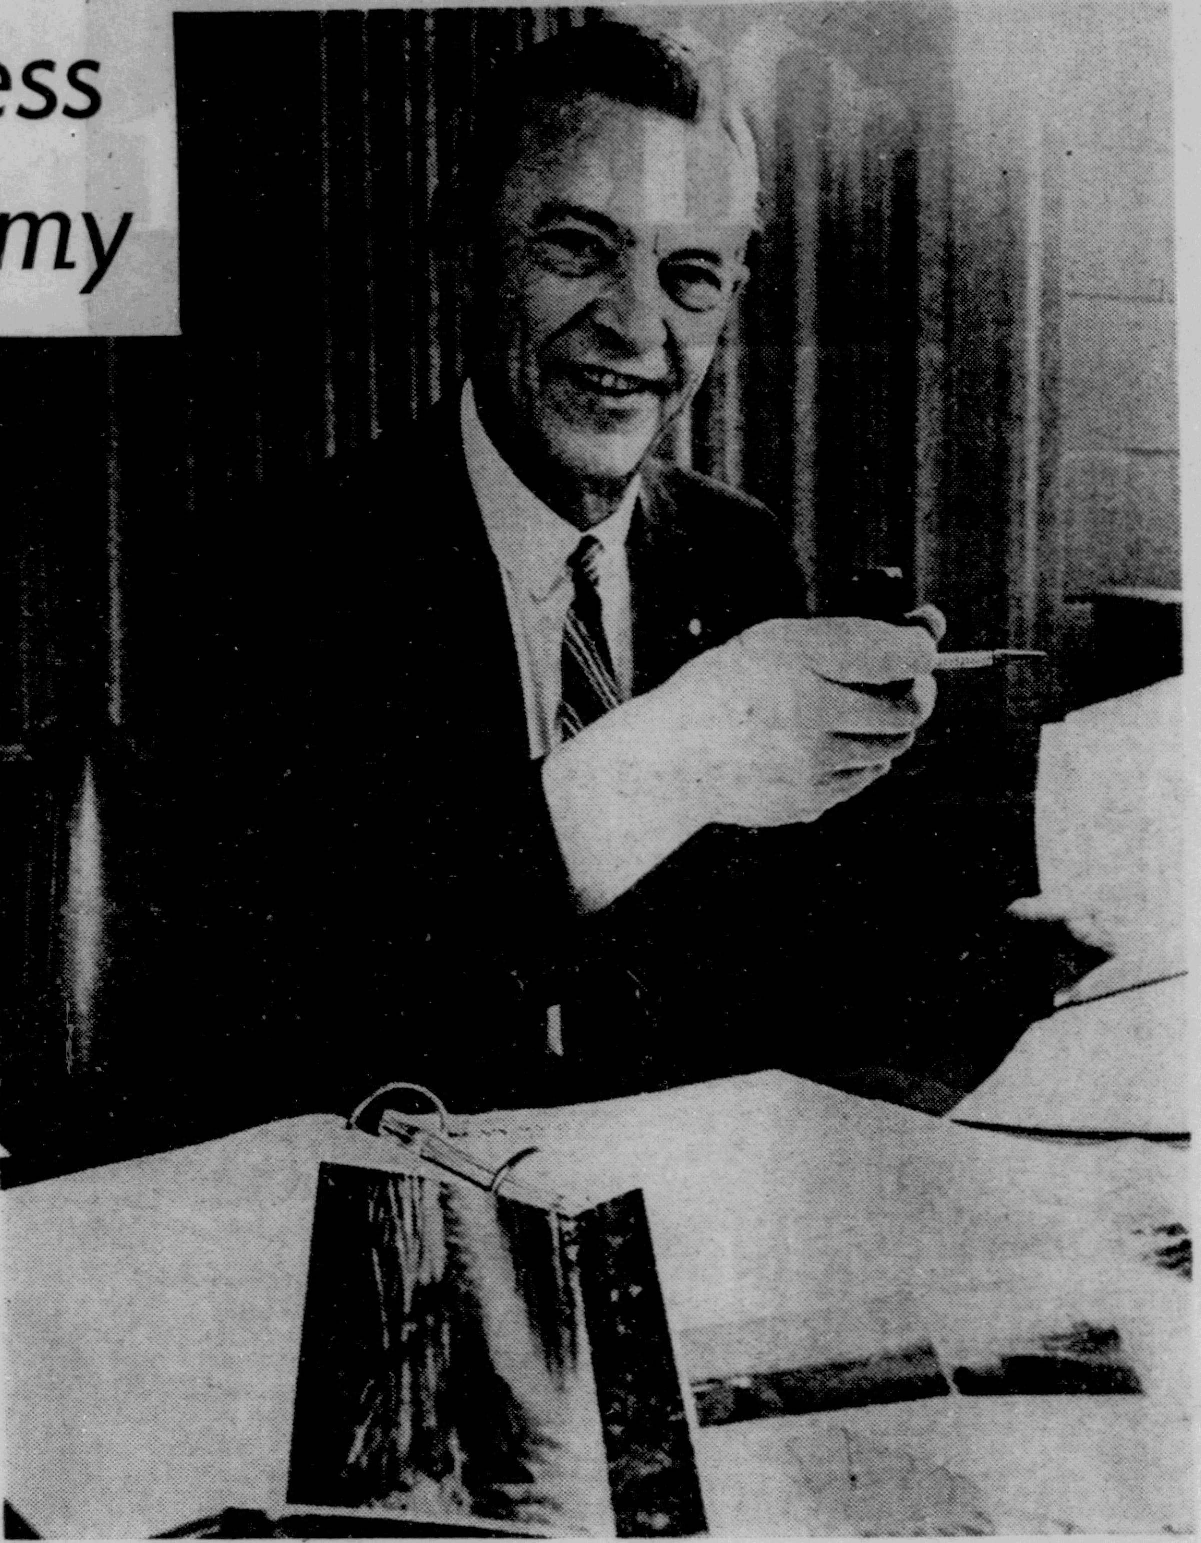
A Year Of Progress For County Economy

Marin Made Significant Forward Strides In '69



CARROLL A. SNYKER, manager of the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau, has written another of his year-end articles for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine, summarizing the economic trends and developments of the year just completed, and looking ahead to the new year before us.

By CARROLL A. SNYKER

In a recapitulation of Marin's economic development during the past year, several pluses stand out and merit stressing:

1. Though we are still limited in capability, the county's first real emergence into servicing more sizable numbers of visitors in either groups or as individuals in one establishment.

2. Mentioned last year and increasing both in size and frequency in 1969 was the choice of Marin for administrative offices. There is good evidence that this relatively new type of economic development in Marin will continue to be active.

3. Started by the acquisition of Fairchild Semiconductor 10 years ago, Marin has had a resurgence as the locale for establishment of electronic and related technical product facilities.

4. By its continuing and sharp increase in numbers of visitors, Point Reyes National Seashore is proving itself as the magnet it was anticipated to be, but there has been practically a total lacking of facilities to accommodate these tourists for longer than a daytime stay. In July, the Olema Ranch Campground opened with 67 units. It has done well, and the owner plans a 33-unit expansion for the next year's season.

I THINK you'll find more detail on these points interesting, not only because of the progress they already encompass, but also for what they portend.

The Holiday Inn has been described as an "instantaneous success." This fortunate experience in its short life since last June is all the more outstanding in view of the many who investigated Marin over the years as a possible location for a motel of about the Holiday's size and then backed off. The success has prompted an expansion of 120 units now under construction which, added to the present 118, gives us a nicely expanded convention potential.

While they are not entirely dependent upon each other, better motels-hotels and administrative offices/distributors do have a relationship, since the latter promote executives and salesmen visitors who expect a better-class place to stay in the vicinity. The administrative office splurge got started before the Holiday, but most of the larger acquisitions antedate it.

It's an added plus on both sides.

THE WORD "splurge" is a good description of what is happening in the office building and administrative office field in Marin. There are now six sizable such projects in process in the Terra Linda area containing a total of 368,000 square feet.

Commerce Clearing House — now constructing 110,000 square feet of office space on Quail Hill for their western headquarters and including space for lease. This is only the start of what Commerce Clearing House plans to do with this 82-acre site. Later development will include a 200-person conference complex, a separate office building, some housing and a small vineyard to produce premium wines. So far, three and a half million dollars in site development and construction permits have been issued on the project. Commerce Clearing House will have about 100 employees.

Western Travelers Life Insurance and its affiliated Mutual Fund Associates — work has started on their 24,000-square-foot national headquarters. Western Travelers has moved here from Los Angeles, and Mutual Fund will do so from San Francisco. Will have 60 to 70 employees. The building permit was for $399,300.

American Pacific Life Insurance Co. — is acquiring a five-acre parcel near the Terra Linda interchange on which it will construct a 90,000-square-foot building for removal of their national headquarters from San Francisco. Some of the office space will be available for lease.

Holiday Plaza — a building permit for $1,158,600 has been issued for this 60,000-square-foot office structure near the Holiday Inn. All of the space is to be leased and the market for it was intensively investigated before the construction go-ahead was given.

El Marinero — a 63,000-square-foot office building on North San Pedro Road planned by the Charlton Investment Co. of San Francisco. All of the space will be available for lease.

A series of office buildings has been erected in recent years in Northgate Industrial Park aggrating 124,000 square feet. The latest, now practically completed, is 21,000 square feet in size. She Is The 'Mother' To The Bunnies

Beautiful Marin Blonde Holds Key Playboy Job

Francesca (Frankie) Helms is a beautiful blonde bachelor girl with a peaches and cream complexion and a figure any model could envy.

She is also mother, mentor, confidant and boss to 40 luscious Playboy Bunnies.

As Bunny Mother for the San Francisco Playboy Club, Frankie is responsible for hiring, firing, and training of the Bunnies. But that's just the beginning.

FOR FRANKIE, it's a matter of total "family" involvement, and the Bunnies are her family. When a Bunny gets married, Frankie is there . . . sometimes in the role of "mother" of the bride. When a Bunny underwent surgery recently, Frankie was there when she was wheeled into the operating room and at her bedside when she awoke.

"The job becomes your life," Frankie explains, "but for a single woman without a family, it's a very gratifying life."

Frankie's business day starts at 10 a.m. when she arrives at the club, and ends at 7 p.m. when she points her Mustang convertible across the Golden Gate Bridge to her hilltop apartment in Sausalito.

IN A TYPICAL day, she will juggle work schedules to cover the many entertainment facilities of the Playboy Club; interview potential Bunnies ("I'm always on the lookout for new girls"), or conduct training classes where Bunnies are indoctrinated into such mysteries as "the Bunny Dip" (a graceful back-bend used when serving guests that serves two purposes. It keeps trays extended over the aisles in case of spillage, and it allows the Bunnies to maintain their decorum despite their famous abbreviated costumes).

She may also take time out for a heart-to-heart chat with a Bunny who is having personal problems, or recruit a Bunny softball or basketball team for a charity benefit.

"THE BUNNIES are constantly involved in community projects," she comments. "We probably do more charity work than any other Bay Area business organization."

Adding to the cheerful informality of her office is Frankie's constant companion, "Bunny," a cuddly Maltese-Lhasa dog who was a birthday gift from the Bunnies. In keeping with the Playboy policy of no men in the Bunny quarters, "Bunny" is female.

Frankie's fragile femininity belies her capability and experience in the business world.

The Virginia-born beauty enjoyed a highly successful career in broadcasting before joining the Playboy empire, managing to land in succession a floor director's job at KSD-TV, St. Louis, and a producer's berth at

She Is The 'Mother' To The Bunnies

Beautiful Marin Blonde Holds Key Playboy Job

Francesca (Frankie) Helms is a beautiful blonde bachelor girl with a peaches and cream complexion and a figure any model could envy.

She is also mother, mentor, confidant and boss to 40 luscious Playboy Bunnies.

As Bunny Mother for the San Francisco Playboy Club, Frankie is responsible for hiring, firing, and training of the Bunnies. But that's just the beginning.

FOR FRANKIE, it's a matter of total "family" involvement, and the Bunnies are her family. When a Bunny gets married, Frankie is there . . . sometimes in the role of "mother" of the bride. When a Bunny underwent surgery recently, Frankie was there when she was wheeled into the operating room and at her bedside when she awoke.

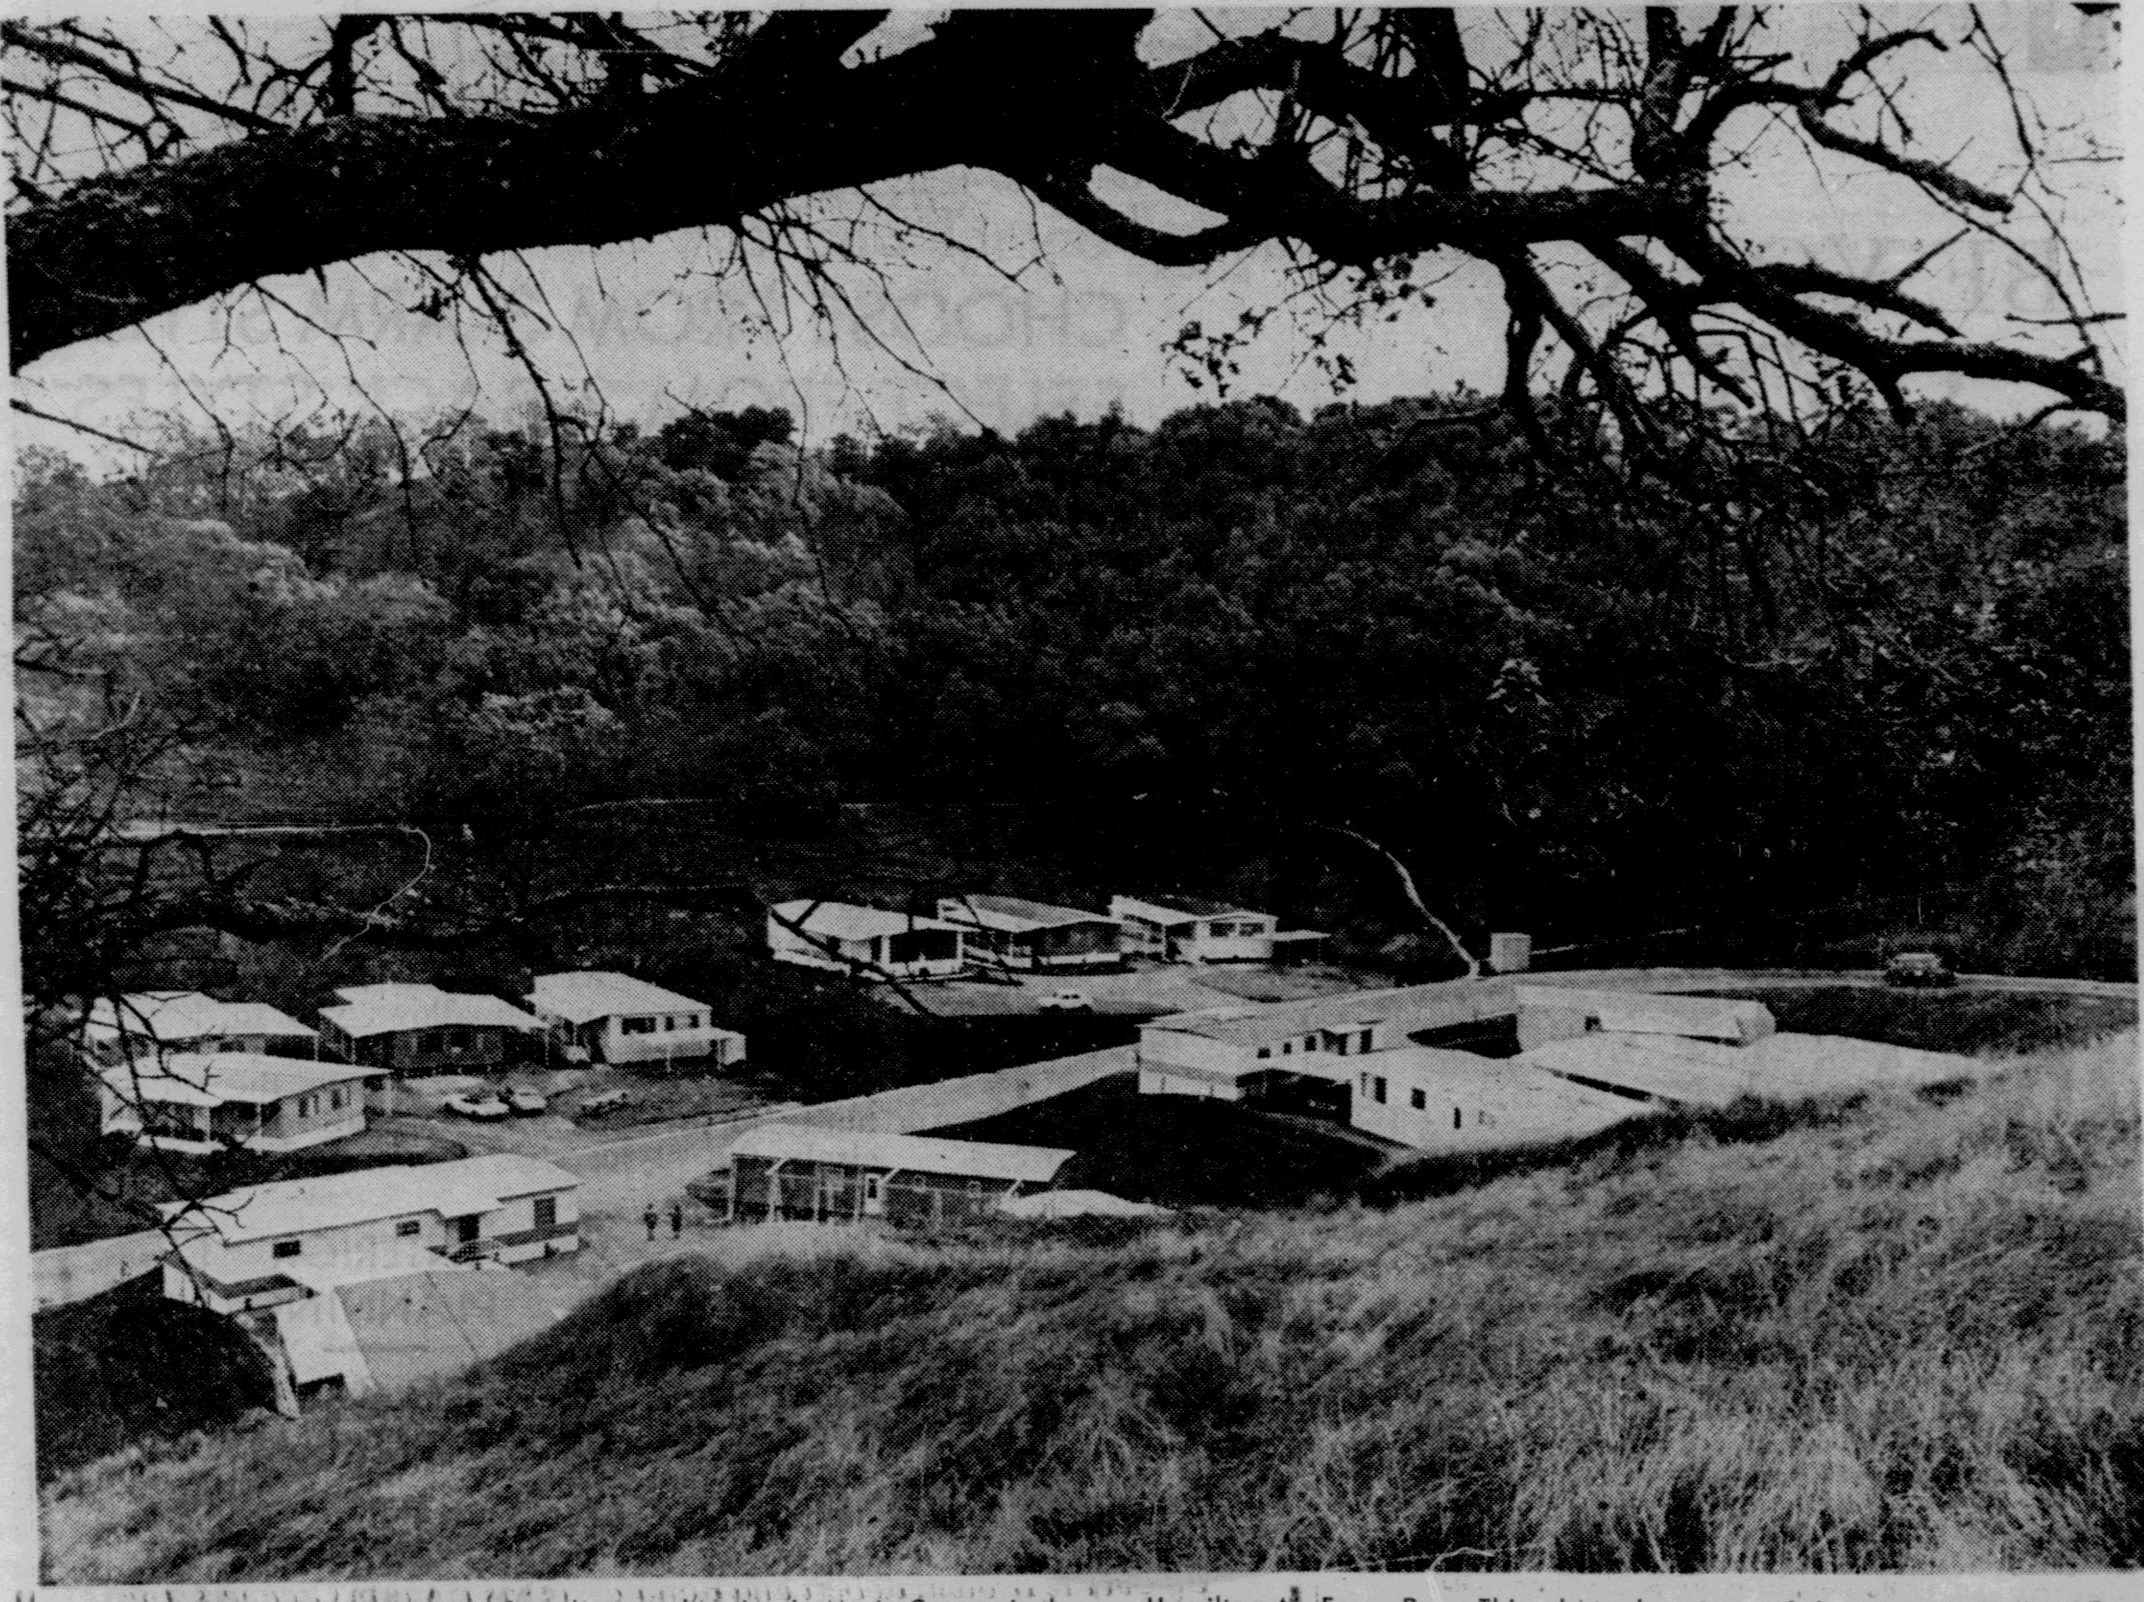
MARIN COUNTY HAS begun to move in the direction of more and better facilities for servicing conventions and other large gatherings. A major step in that direction is the new Holiday Inn at Terra Linda that has been described as "an instantaneous success." An expansion program is under way there.



SOMETHING NEW in the way of modest-cost housing in Marin County is the mobile home park. The county now boasts two such projects, both near Hamilton Air Force Base. This photo shows one of them, Marin Valley Mobile Country Club Homes in a pretty setting just south of the big air base.

THERE'S AN ART to serving the guests properly, and the San Francisco Playboy Club's new Bunnies learn the techniques quickly at the Playboy Bunny Training School. Their instructor is Frankie Helms, San Francisco's Mother Bunny, who conducts weekly classes at the club. This Wednesday night these pretty girls will be serving refreshments to New Year's revelers.

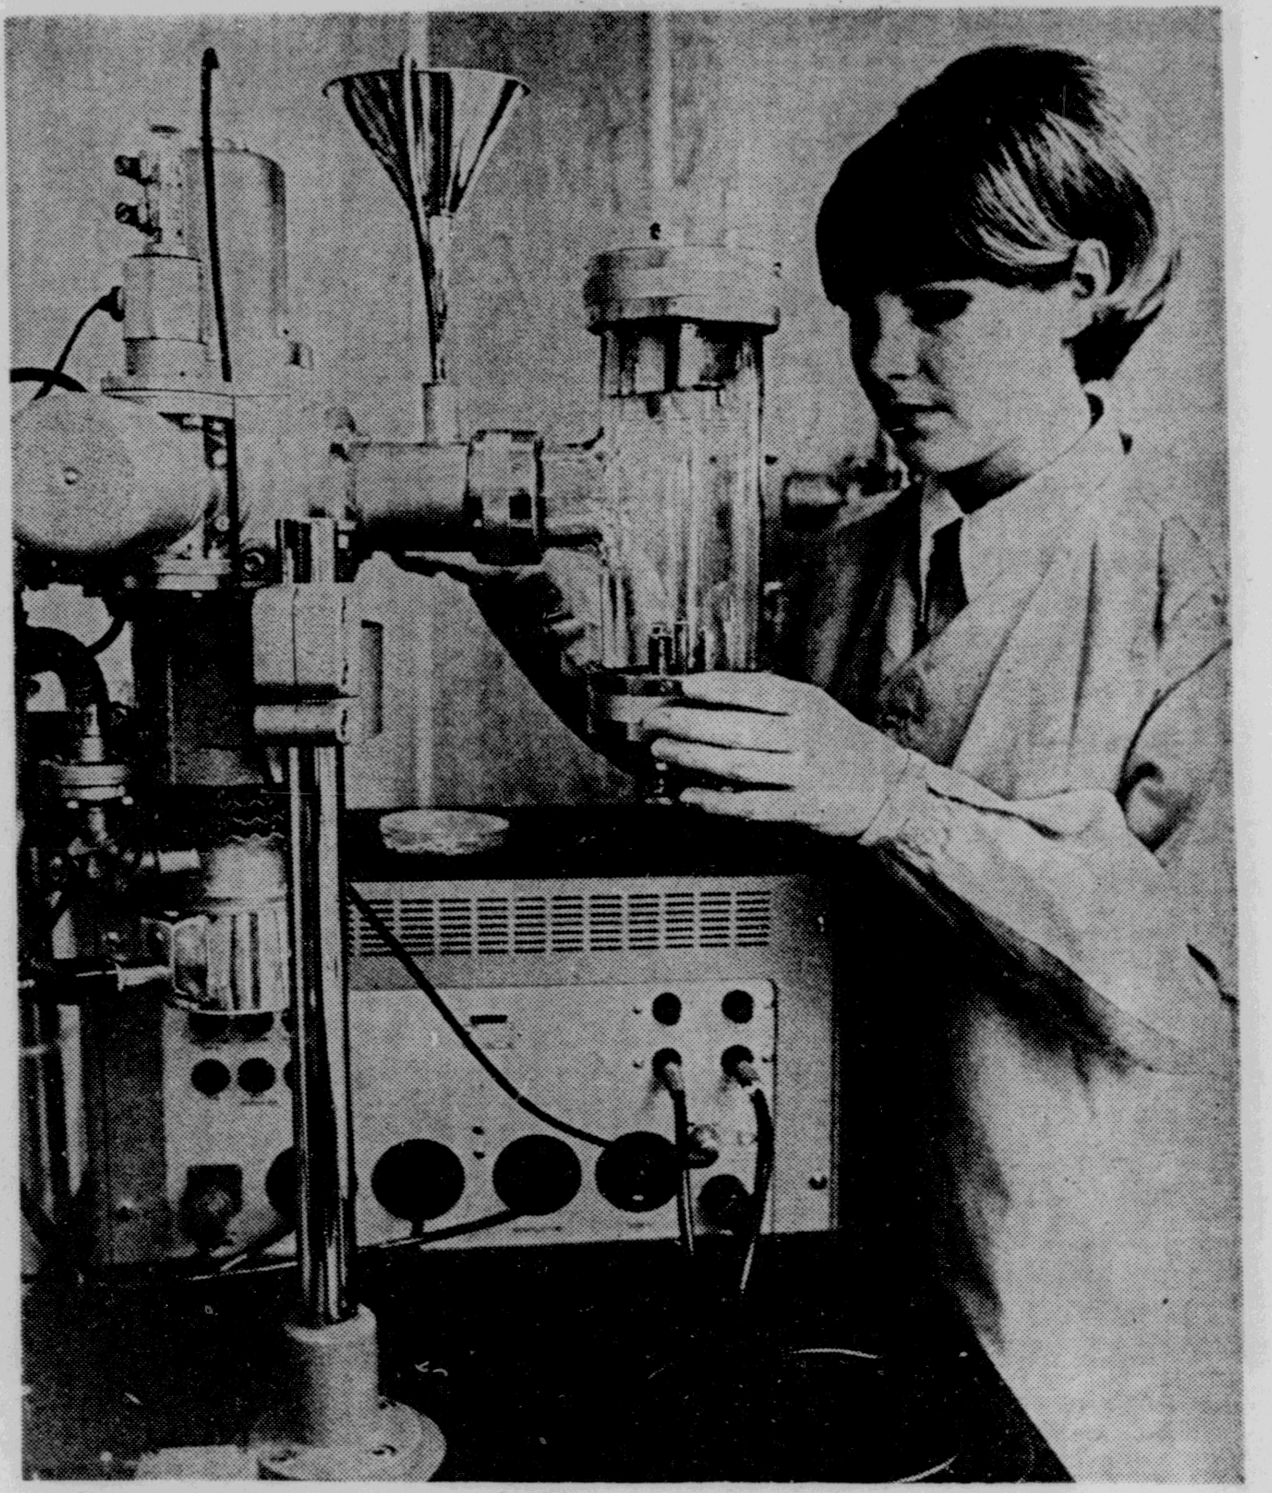
MARIN'S ECONOMY

A Survey Of '69 And Peek At '70



PATSY DATOR is employed at the Optoelectronics Inc. plant, manufacturers of optoelectronic sensors, at 4380 Redwood Highway, San Rafael. The concern is one of five manufacturers of electronic and related technical equipment which chose to locate in Marin in 1969, bringing the total of such installations to 10 and making the field of prime importance in the county's economy.

was instigated by the Marin County Planning Department to be performed by consultants next year and in whose direction the county chamber is participating; and, as mentioned, the installation of Olema Ranch Campground which is the first facility of some size in proximity to the National Seashore that permits longer stays.

The survey should provide needed evaluating and waypointing in taking more advantage of our scenic and recreational drawing power, and the ranch is hopefully the forerunner of additional entrepreneurs that will provide useful visitor services and extract more economic benefit from them in the process.

HOW HAS Marin's economy performed in 1969? There are only a few indices available that are sufficiently up-to-date to provide a factual gauge, but those that are, are useful.

During the first six months this year, taxable retail sales were up 11.5 per cent over the like period in 1968. For the first quarter, the increase was 13.1 per cent, second best in the Bay Area counties, and during the second quarter the volume was up 10.5 per cent or fourth best in the Bay Area.

Several of the cities in Marin showed significant advances during the first half of the year. Larkspur's taxable retail volume was up 48.2 per cent; Mill Valley, 26.4 per cent, and Novato, 21.9 per cent. San Rafael, which did 44.1 per cent of the county-wide total, had an increase of 13.7 per cent.

The most significant new retail establishment acquired during the year is the 40,000-square-foot store of W & J Sloane now being completed in Northgate Shopping Center Mall.

THE TOTAL value of building permits during the first 11 months is 19.1 per cent better than in the same 1968 period, or $60,447,324 compared to $50,756,603. The best improvement is in the commercial category (offices, stores, industries, etc.) which is up 46.5 per cent or from $7,954,115 to $11,651,340.

The 1970 prospects in this field appear good.

Residential construction has been slightly better with 1,535 housing units permitted compared to 1,401 in 1968. It was composed of 854 single-family dwellings and 681 units in apartments.

This predominance of homes may not hold next year, judging from the number of larger apartment projects now in the works. This is understandable when considering that the average permit value per home this year is $30,747 (in 1966, it was $26,423), the problems in financing them and the avid demand for apartments.

COSTS FOR housing have played a large part in the emergence of mobile homes as an affordable alternative to houses. Marin now has two such projects — the Los Robles Mobile Home Park, north of Hamilton, with 206 pads; and the Marin Valley Mobile Country Club, south of Hamilton, with 510 pads.

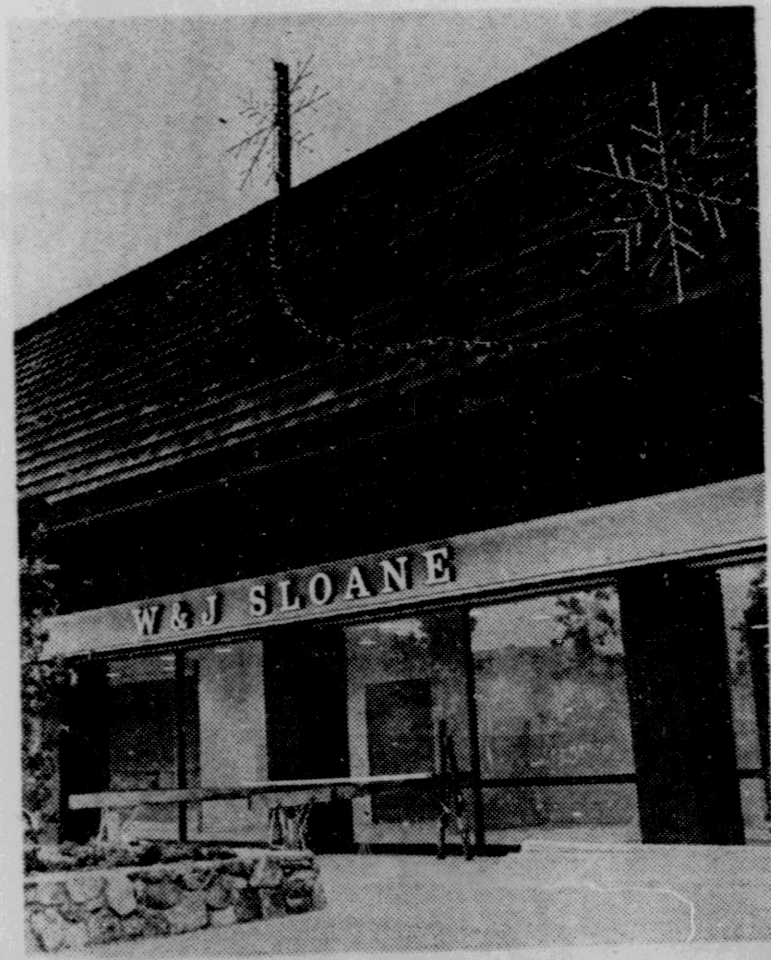
Bank debits, a good indicator of business activity, were up 14.3 per cent in November compared to that month in 1968. However, bank deposits showed only a narrow advance of 1.2 per cent.

The state of the national economy in 1970 will, of course, have a bearing on Marin. Most particularly the availability and cost of financing as it is related to the volume of things we collectively buy or build and the "feel" we have toward making or not making those commitments.

The national economy is in a period of transition. The cooling-off efforts are showing some signs of effect. Given a reasonable balance to the favorable in international and national affairs, the period of shifting will, in the main, be healthy. The next six months or so will be interesting to observe and vital in their effect for a long time thereafter.

MARIN'S ECONOMY is a relatively stable one. Possessing as its residents do, a high average income, and the positions of import which that affluence reflects, we are less affected by economic turns.

Unless the money supply and the costs of putting it to use continue getting tighter, the interest in our county from the outside being evidenced will present Marin in 1970 with a nice batch of new advancements.



A HIGHLY significant new retail establishment acquired by Marin County during the year now ending is the new W & J Sloane store, now being completed in the Northgate Shopping Center mall at Terra Linda. Countywide, it was a prosperous year for retail business.

KMOG-Radio, where she also conducted a children's show on the air and freelanced on television commercials.

SHE ABANDONED radio and television in 1962 when several of her broadcasting friends became franchise owners of the St. Louis Playboy Club and talked her into coming over as Bunny Mother.

Frankie wasn't destined to remain in St. Louis for long. The Miami and Atlanta clubs borrowed her to set up their operations, and she later opened the Jamaica and Denver Playboy clubs. When the multi-million dollar Lake Geneva Playboy Club Hotel was built, Frankie was invited to be resident Bunny Mother.

"That was after I had discovered San Francisco," she comments, "and as far as I was concerned, there was no contest. San Francisco won hands down."

ALTHOUGH SHE is greatly in demand on the social circuit, Frankie, on the whole, prefers a more casual life.

"I'm basically a homebody," she confesses. "It's great fun to go out on the town once in a while, but I really prefer entertaining at home.

"Dating just for the sake of dating bores me. I suppose I'd be termed a one-man woman."

There is no "one man" in the picture at the moment, but Frankie will definitely know him when he appears. Like all truly feminine women, she likes a man who takes charge and asserts his masculinity.

"If he combines that with tenderness and a sense of humor, he's the man for me."

AS ONE OF a handful of women throughout the world experienced in her field, Frankie could request a transfer to London, Montreal or any of the glamor cities where Playboy clubs exist. But, she prefers to stay in the Bay Area.

"I have the best of all possible worlds here. A ready made family . . . a home in Sausalito . . . and a job I love in my favorite city. Who could ask for more?"

Well, maybe that special man.

But for a beautiful and intelligent Southern belle like Francesca Helms, that's never a problem or worry.

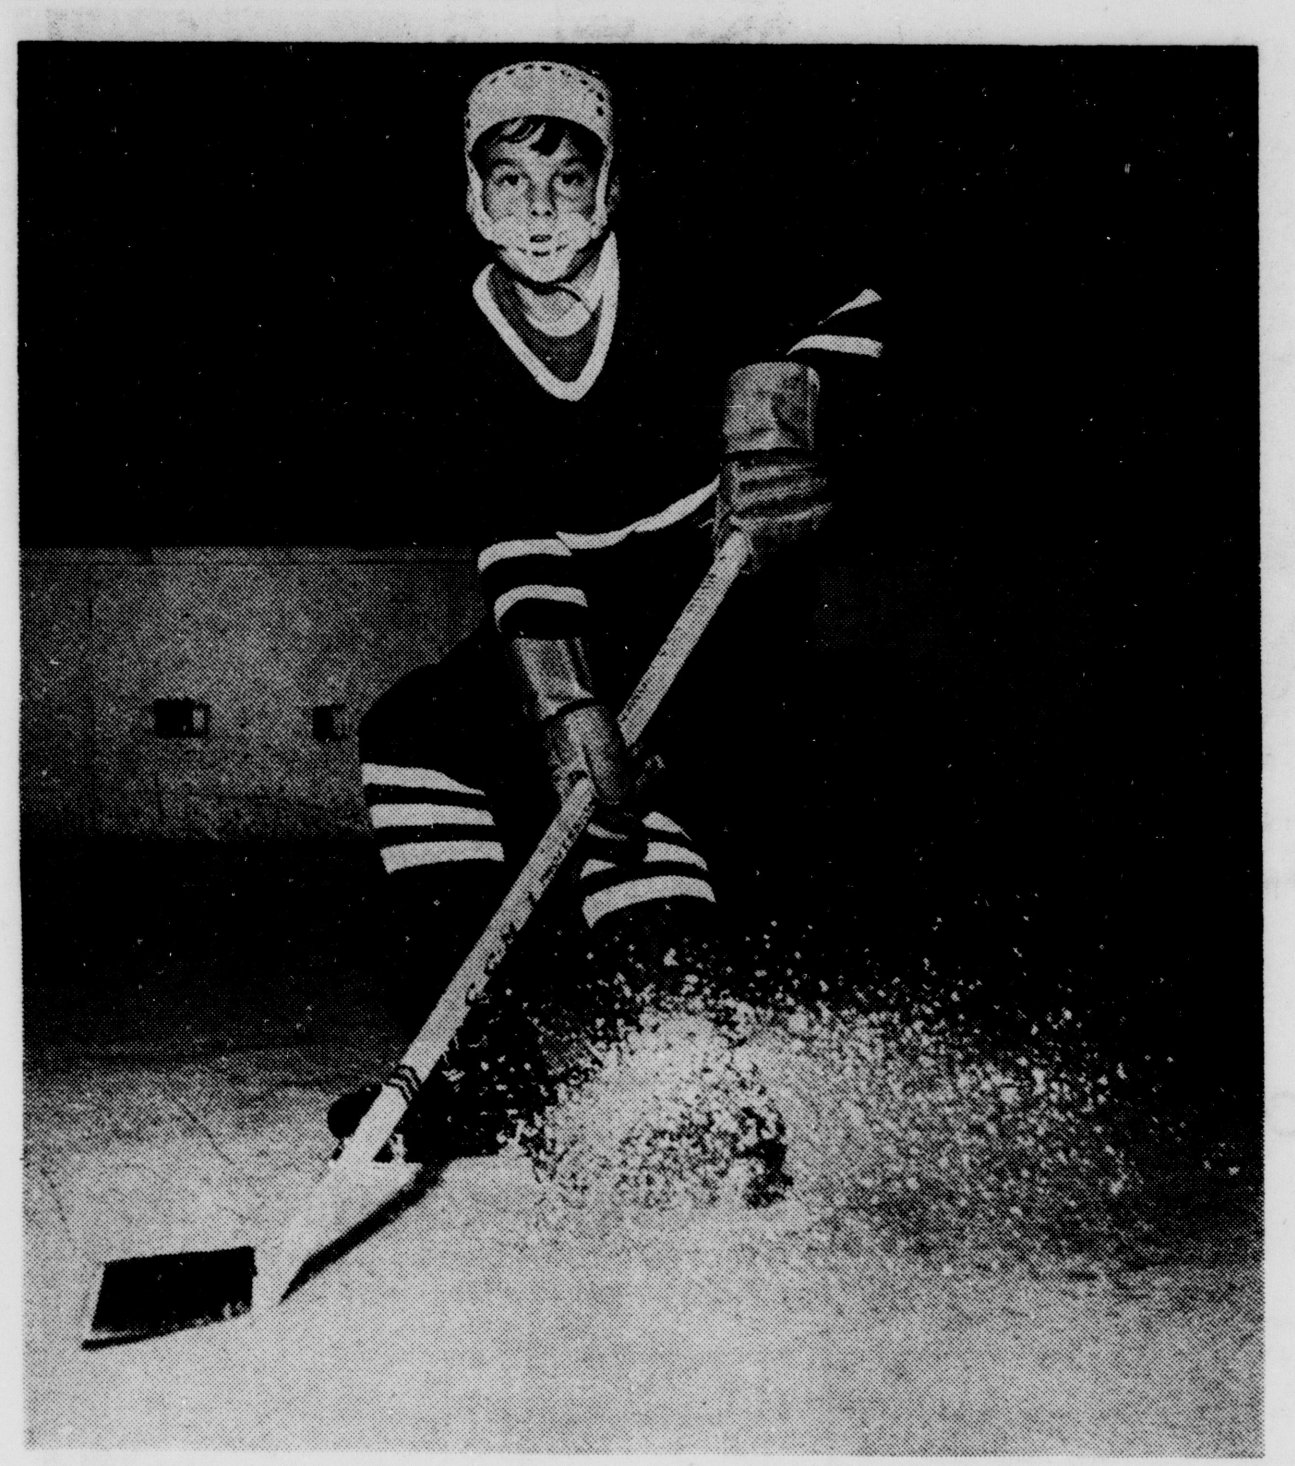
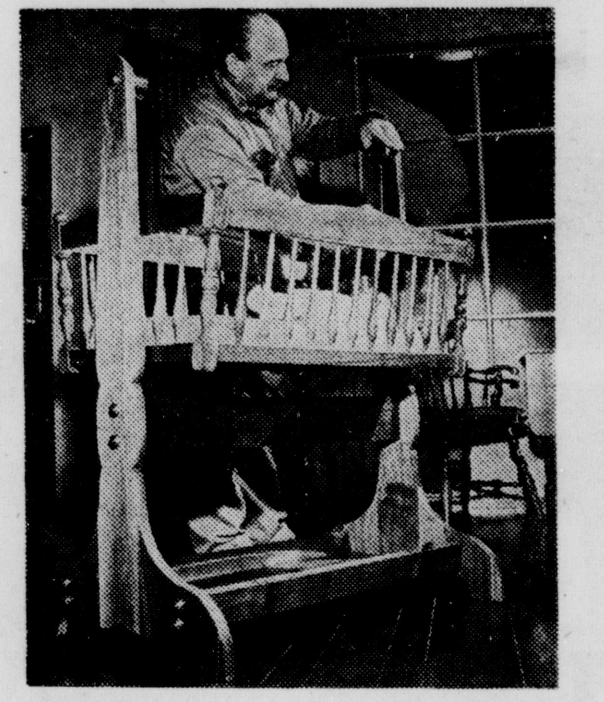
MARIN MAGAZINE PICTURES RECALL THE VARIED ACTIVITIES OF 1969



A JANUARY, 1969, cover of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine was devoted to the appropriate winter season sport of ice hockey, as played by the county's juniors. Randy Harris was the young player caught in scrimmage action on the ice.

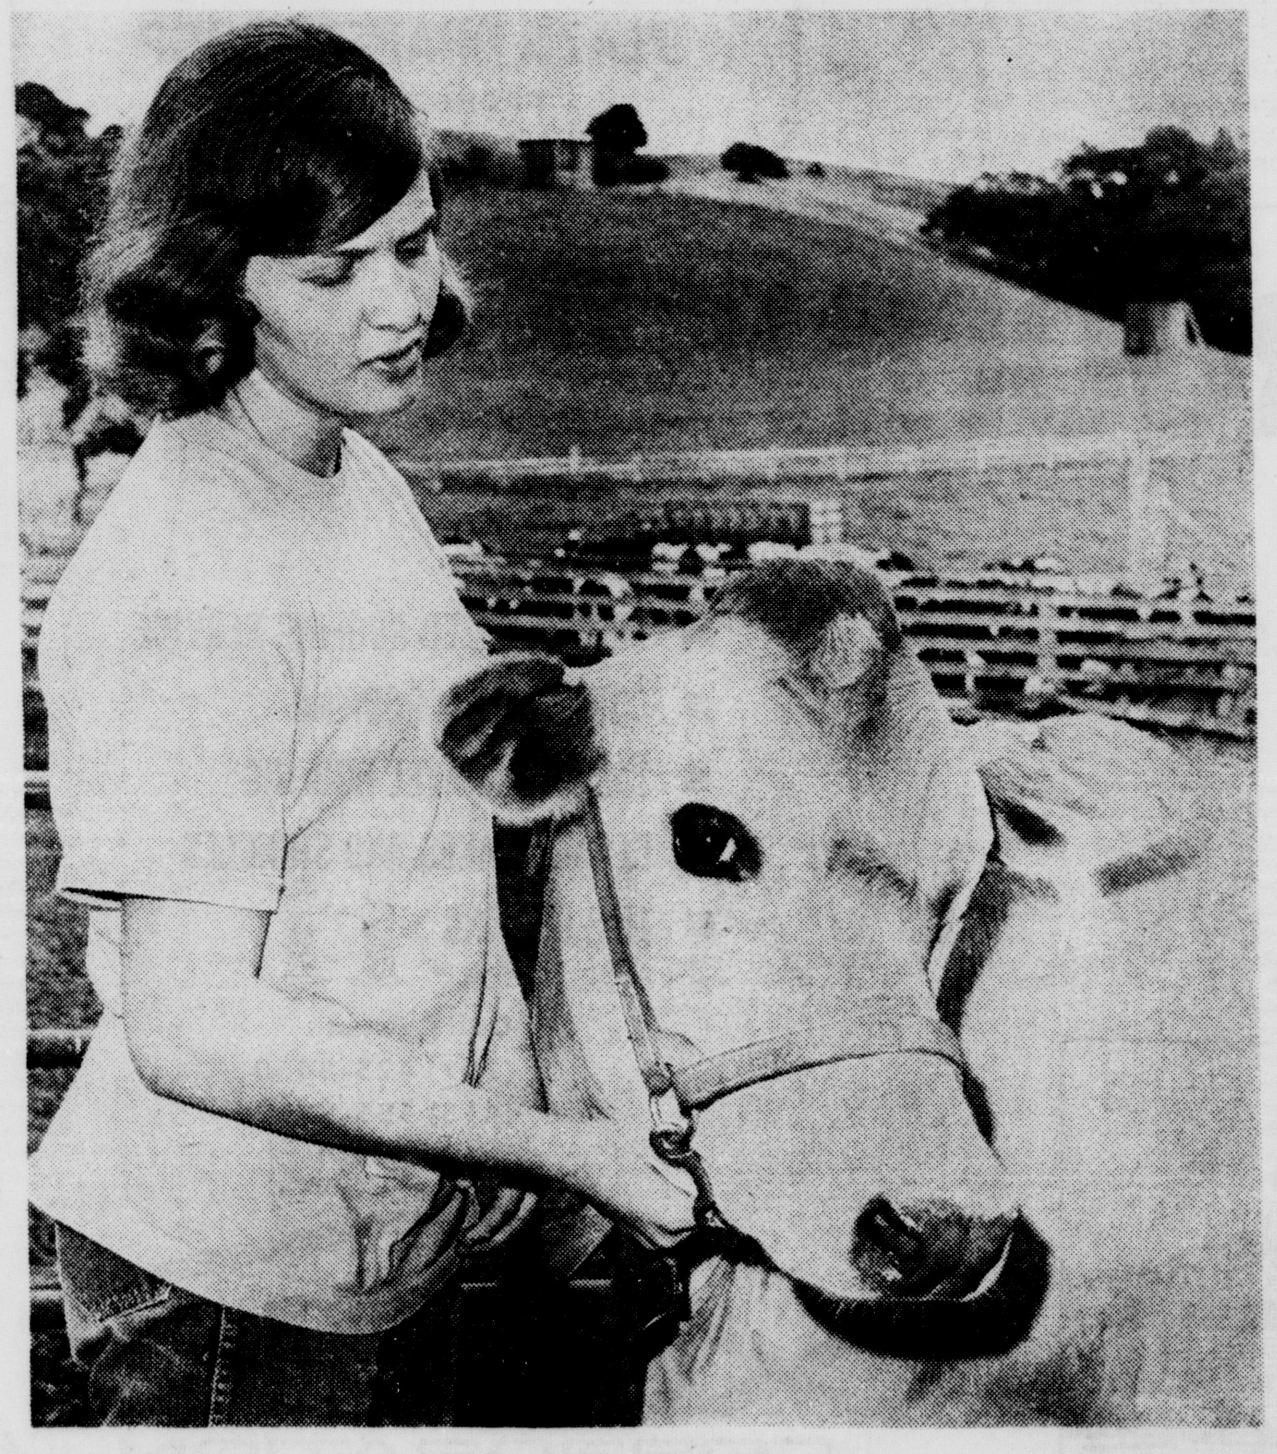


IN FEBRUARY, the magazine took a look at one of Marin's many skilled craftsmen-hobbyists, focussing upon Robert Cooper of Kentfield and the cradle he had built for his grandchild.

MARCH IS a time for reading beside the fire, in Marin and elsewhere. And so the Marin Magazine that month visited the Dominican College library and its collection of Browning's works.

APRIL FINDS the Easter bunny a privileged character among Marin County's youngsters. The I-J's magazine gave featured coverage to Thumper, the popular pet of the Merrie-Go-Round School children.

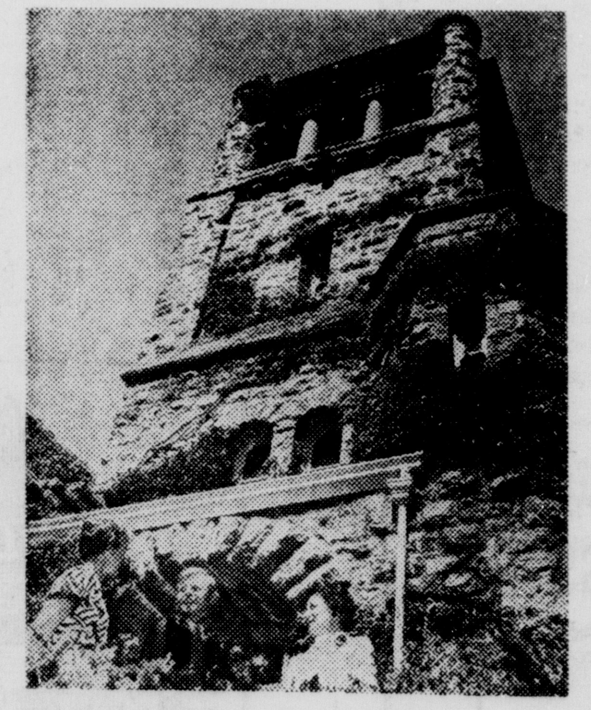
BY MAY THE thoughts of many Marinites are turning to the outdoors and the seashore. A Marinite with a special interest in and a splendid collection of shells, Sister M. Aquinas, graced the cover of one of the Marin Magazine issues for that balmy month.



JUNE IS vacation-time for Marin County's youngsters. It is also fairtime for 4-Hers and Future Farmers. Beverly Grossi of Novato, a 4-H Club member, was one of the young people who exhibited their livestock, in this case the yearling Oly.

IF JULY IS a vacation time from regular classes, it is also a time of studies for many summer school students, such as the Marinites who enrolled in the interior design and decor class conducted for Montgomery Ward by Stephanie Luker.

IN AUGUST, with the start of a new school term drawing near, the I-J's Marin Magazine saluted those unsung heroes of education, the maintenance personnel. John Galego of College of Marin was featured in the cover picture for the issue.



SEPTEMBER saw the congregation of San Rafael's First Presbyterian Church celebrating their centennial in one of the West Coast's most impressive places of worship.

OCTOBER WAS marked in Marin County and across the state by an observance of Land Surveyor's Week with Marin's surveyors publicizing the achievements of their profession.

Lincolnshire, England

IN NOVEMBER, at Thanksgiving time, Marinite Charles H. Salt harkened back to his native Lincolnshire in England to tell how the story of the Pilgrim Fathers all began.

AND IN DECEMBER, as the holidays drew near, Garden Society of Marin members gathered greens for the traditional Decorations Guild sale. (Cover photos from 1969 Marin Magazine issues reproduced here are by I-J photographers Bob Hax, Jim Kean, Roger Bockrath, Harold Bard and Jackie Hartman)

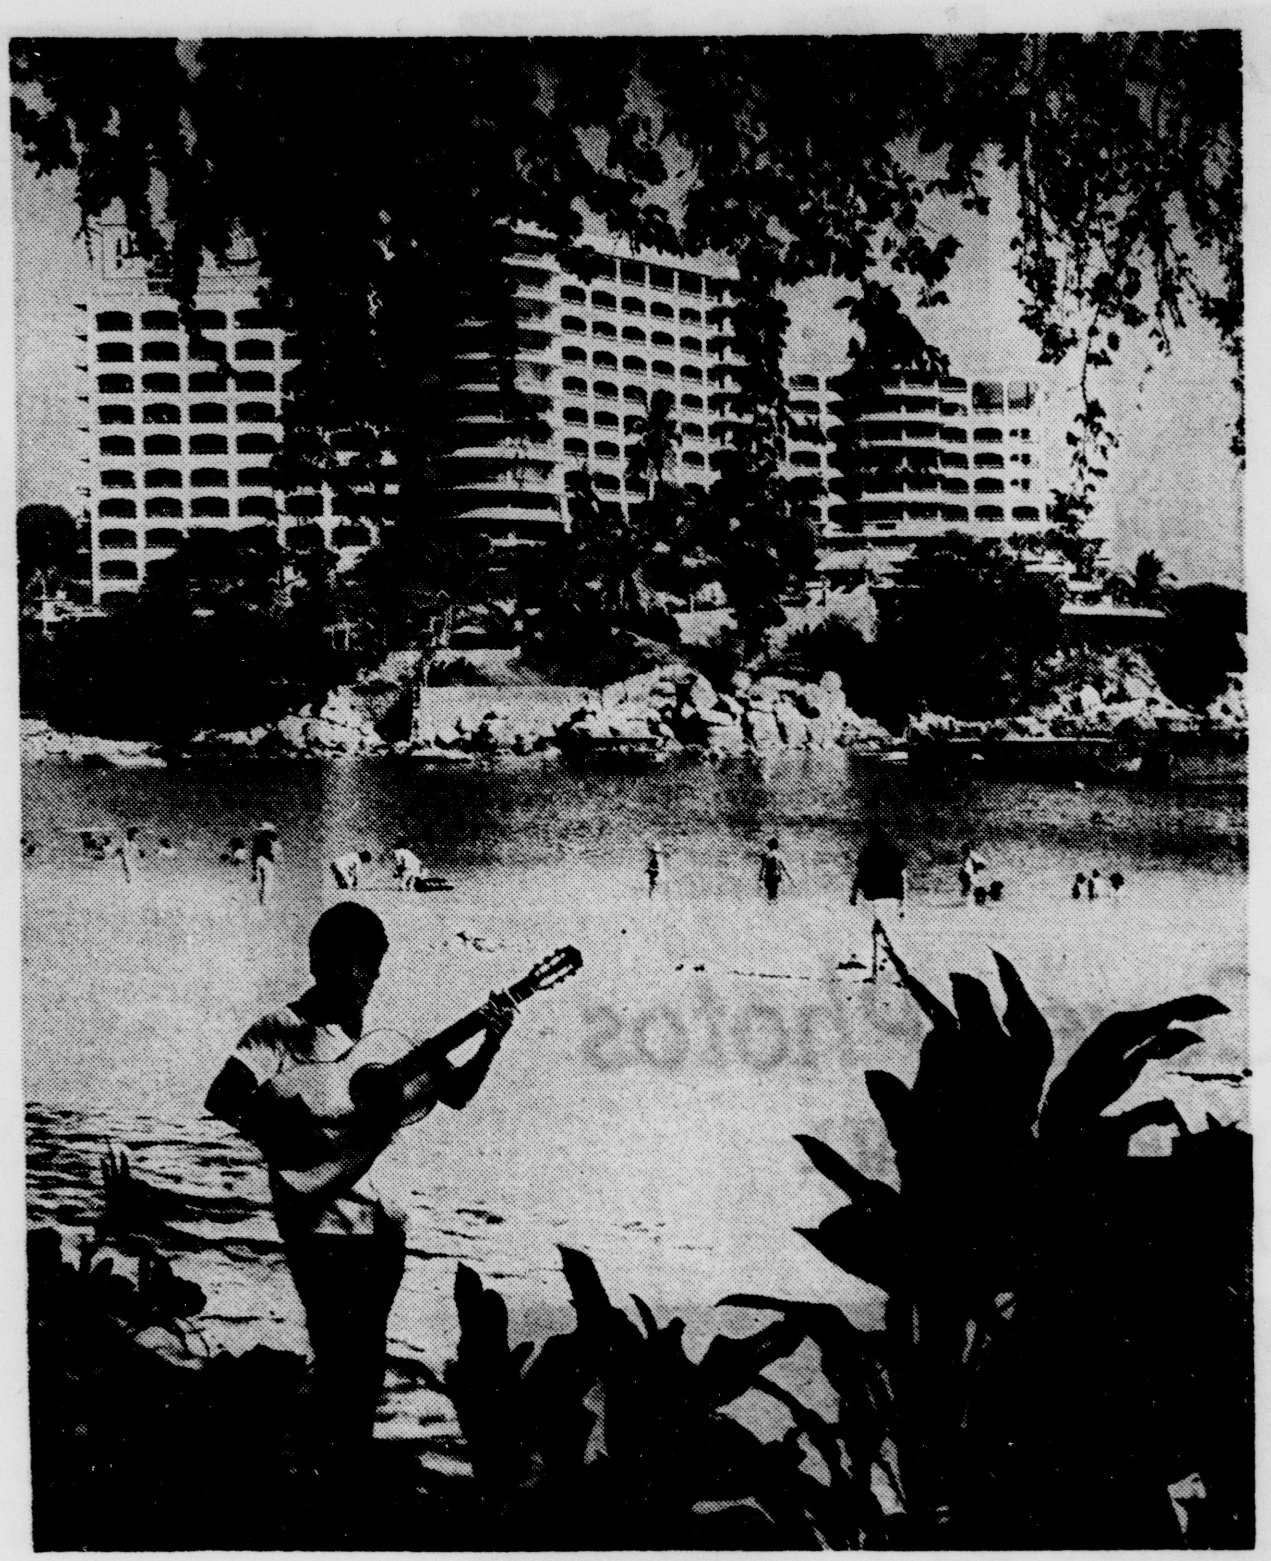
Acapulco Offers Something For All Its Visitors

By MURRAY J. BROWN



THE BEACHES of Acapulco remain a prime source of pleasure for visiting tourists, but are far from the resort city's only attraction.

Above, a strolling guitarist plays on Caleta Beach with the Hotel Caleta in the background.

There is something for everyone in Acapulco, the famous Mexican resort on the Pacific Coast — the sportsman, the swinger, the shopper, the sightseer and the spectator.

In fact, one of the big problems for the American visitor is to find time to take advantage of all the attractions.

For the sports-minded, there are swimming, surfing, water skiing, skin and scuba diving, sailing, fishing, golf, tennis, riding and other sea and land activities.

There also are parachute rides over the bay; high-powered speedboats attached by lines to the chutes pull riders up to 100 feet and more.

FOR THE swinger, there are nightclubs, discotheques, cafes and bars and the action goes on virtually around the clock.

Daytime swingers head for the thatch-roofed, open-sided Paradise Club on La Condesa Beach where the food, band and dancing are hot.

For the shopper, there are boutiques with the latest fashions from Paris and other haute coutourier centers, curio shops and street stalls with leather goods, silver jewelry and other handicrafts and peddlers hawking colorful serapes, rugs, mantillas and other locally-produced wares on the beaches.

FOR THE sightseer, there are tours by boat and bus to Mexican fishing and farming villages and through the old city of Acapulco with its steep, narrow alleys and ancient homes and churches, including the blue-domed 240-year-old Church of the Lonely Virgin.

There also are miles of beaches decorated by shapely bikini-clad American and Mexican beauties for the girl-watchers.

For the spectator, there are the exciting jai aliai games, bullfights in the winter season, water skiing tournaments, nightly water acrobatic shows and the famed divers who risk life and limb by plunging 140 feet from a cliff into a narrow and shallow inlet.

I MADE MY first visit to Acapulco with other American writers as guests for the press opening of the Paraiso Marriott Hotel, fronting on the beach.

The 22-story hotel, with a lighthouse-like tower on the roof, is the first outside the United States to be operated by the Marriott Corp. Hotel Division.

Decorated in traditional Mexican style, the hotel offers 442 rooms with views of the bay or mountains, tour and transportation services, shops, cocktail lounge, dining and other facilities.

MY ROOM overlooking the horseshoe-shaped bay was furnished with twin beds, a bureau-desk, a small sofa and two chairs and a table. It also had a terrace, dressing room with washbasin and double closet and a bathroom with shower, toilet, bidet and extra telephone.

Unusual to Americans who have visited other top resorts is Acupulco's informality when it comes to clothes. Ties and jackets are not required even in the fanciest places. And women can leave their evening gowns and furs at home, too.

Casual clothes, such as pants sets and bare midriff outfits are acceptable everywhere.

MOST POPULAR nightspots include the discotheque Tequila A-Go-Go, just off Miguel Aleman Avenue, a short distance from the Paraiso. There's a cover charge of 25 pesos or about $2. Order locally-made liquors and beer — imported alcoholic drinks are expensive in Mexico.

Another top "in" spot for the jet set is Le Dome, which also has live entertainment (and cover charge).

About a half-dozen American and Mexican airlines fly to Acapulco from cities in the United States.

I made the flight between New York and Acapulco aboard an Aeronaves de Mexico DC8 — about seven hours via Mexico City going and about five hours non-stop on return.

There also are regular bus and air services between Acapulco and Mexico City, 265 miles to the north.

For entry into Mexico, U.S. citizens need only a tourist card which can be obtained through the airlines or from Mexican tourist offices or consulates in the states. There is no fee. And Mexico does not impose a departure tax on air travelers.

The Travel Pages

AT NIGHT, Acapulco is ablaze with lights and alive with action, with nightclubs, discotheques, cafes and bars doing a brisk business. Seen here in the harbor at right foreground is the brightly-lit yacht, the Sea Cloud II, that carries tourists on excursion trips around Acapulco Bay.

Acapulco Offers Something For All Its Visitors

By MURRAY J. BROWN

There is something for everyone in Acapulco, the famous Mexican resort on the Pacific Coast — the sportsman, the swinger, the shopper, the sightseer and the spectator.

In fact, one of the big problems for the American visitor is to find time to take advantage of all the attractions.

For the sports-minded, there are swimming, surfing, water skiing, skin and scuba diving, sailing, fishing, golf, tennis, riding and other sea and land activities.

There also are parachute rides over the bay; high-powered speedboats attached by lines to the chutes pull riders up to 100 feet and more.

FOR THE swinger, there are nightclubs, discotheques, cafes and bars and the action goes on virtually around the clock.

Daytime swingers head for the thatch-roofed, open-sided Paradise Club on La Condesa Beach where the food, band and dancing are hot.

For the shopper, there are boutiques with the latest fashions from Paris and other haute coutourier centers, curio shops and street stalls with leather goods, silver jewelry and other handicrafts and peddlers hawking colorful serapes, rugs, mantillas and other locally-produced wares on the beaches.

FOR THE sightseer, there are tours by boat and bus to Mexican fishing and farming villages and through the old city of Acapulco with its steep, narrow alleys and ancient homes and churches, including the blue-domed 240-year-old Church of the Lonely Virgin.

There also are miles of beaches decorated by shapely bikini-clad American and Mexican beauties for the girl-watchers.

For the spectator, there are the exciting jai aliai games, bullfights in the winter season, water skiing tournaments, nightly water acrobatic shows and the famed divers who risk life and limb by plunging 140 feet from a cliff into a narrow and shallow inlet.

I MADE MY first visit to Acapulco with other American writers as guests for the press opening of the Paraiso Marriott Hotel, fronting on the beach.

The 22-story hotel, with a lighthouse-like tower on the roof, is the first outside the United States to be operated by the Marriott Corp. Hotel Division.

Decorated in traditional Mexican style, the hotel offers 442 rooms with views of the bay or mountains, tour and transportation services, shops, cocktail lounge, dining and other facilities.

MY ROOM overlooking the horseshoe-shaped bay was furnished with twin beds, a bureau-desk, a small sofa and two chairs and a table. It also had a terrace, dressing room with washbasin and double closet and a bathroom with shower, toilet, bidet and extra telephone.

Unusual to Americans who have visited other top resorts is Acupulco's informality when it comes to clothes. Ties and jackets are not required even in the fanciest places. And women can leave their evening gowns and furs at home, too.

Casual clothes, such as pants sets and bare midriff outfits are acceptable everywhere.

MOST POPULAR nightspots include the discotheque Tequila A-Go-Go, just off Miguel Aleman Avenue, a short distance from the Paraiso. There's a cover charge of 25 pesos or about $2. Order locally-made liquors and beer — imported alcoholic drinks are expensive in Mexico.

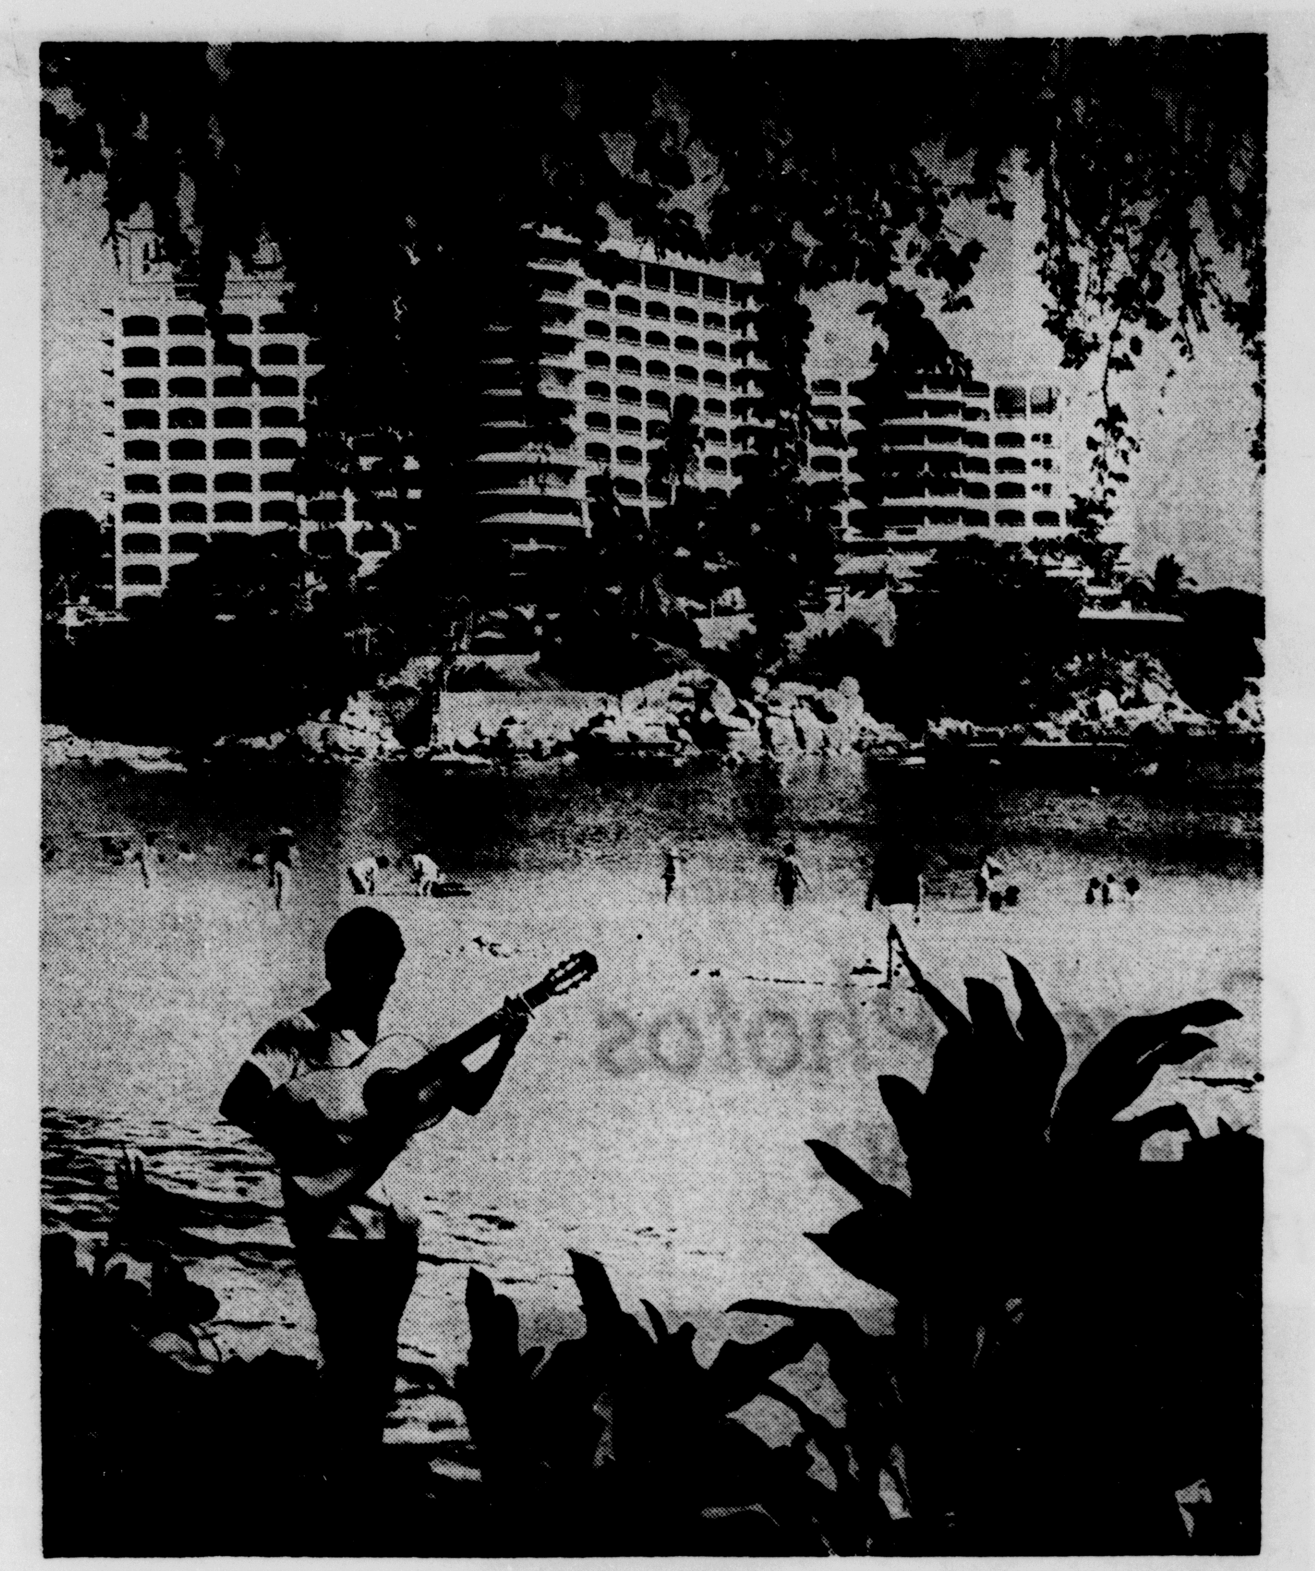
Another top "in" spot for the jet set is Le Dome, which also has live entertainment (and cover charge).

About a half-dozen American and Mexican airlines fly to Acapulco from cities in the United States.

I made the flight between New York and Acapulco aboard an Aeronaves de Mexico DC8 — about seven hours via Mexico City going and about five hours non-stop on return.

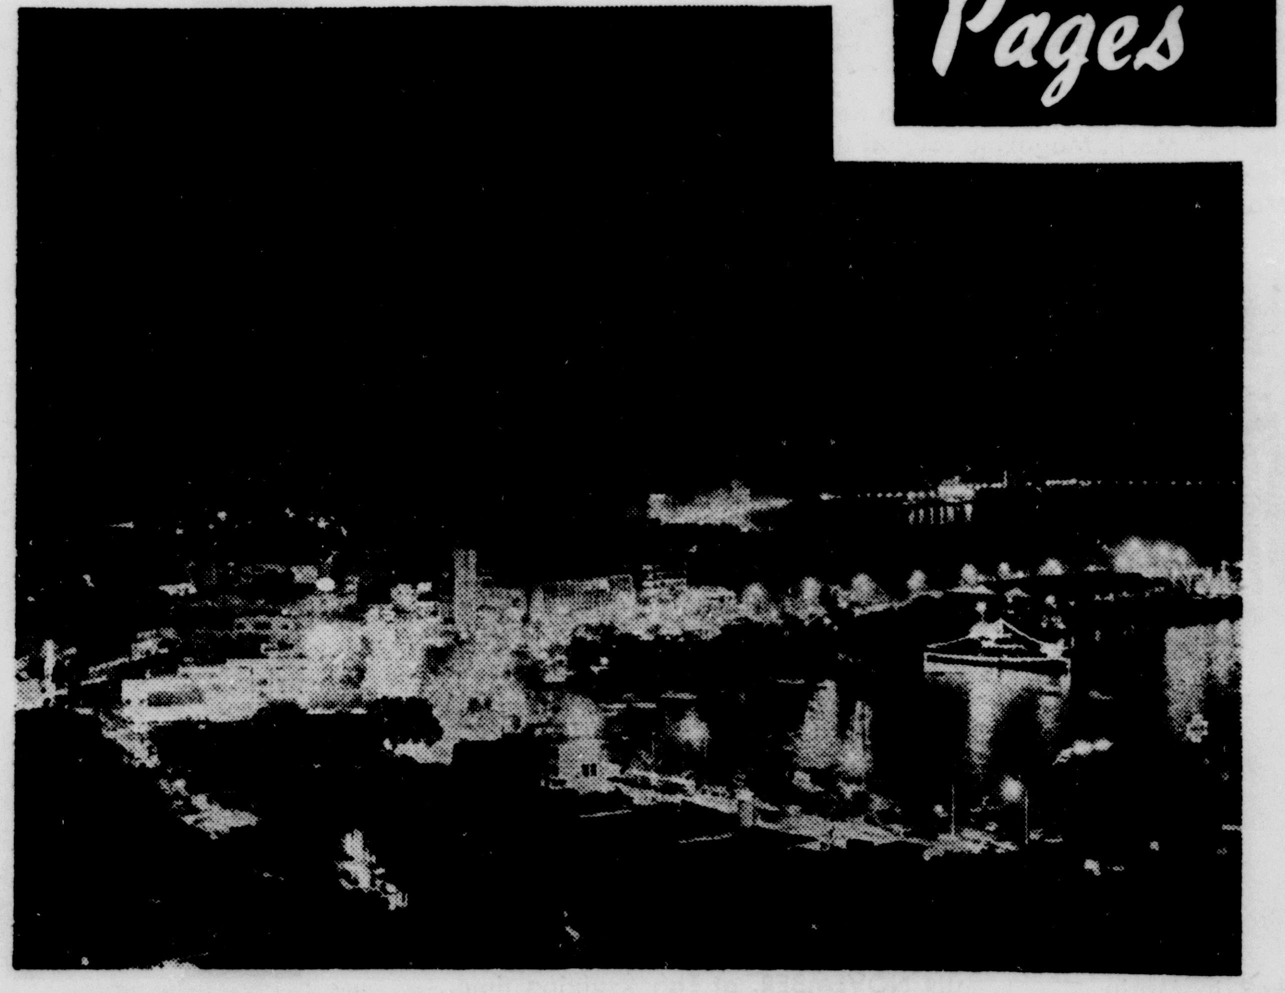
There also are regular bus and air services between Acapulco and Mexico City, 265 miles to the north.

For entry into Mexico, U.S. citizens need only a tourist card which can be obtained through the airlines or from Mexican tourist offices or consulates in the states. There is no fee. And Mexico does not impose a departure tax on air travelers.



THE BEACHES of Acapulco remain a prime source of pleasure for visiting tourists, but are far from the resort city's only attraction. Above, a strolling guitarist plays on Caleta Beach with the Hotel Caleta in the background.

The Travel Pages



AT NIGHT, Acapulco is ablaze with lights and alive with action, with nightclubs, discotheques, cafes and bars doing a brisk business. Seen here in the harbor at right foreground is the brightly-lit yacht, the Sea Cloud II, that carries tourists on excursion trips around Acapulco Bay.

A Budget Vacation In Phoenix Is Possible

Luxury-style vacations may be a specialty of southern Arizona, but a mild-weather holiday around Phoenix need not be expensive.

In fact, a sun-break in the Valley of the Sun can mean high fun at low cost.

The secret of keeping expenses down during the popular high season around Phoenix is three-fold: selection of lower-priced accommodations immediately in the area; using quickly-accessible-by-car fringe bases with fewer crowds and cheaper rates, and concentrating on the bonanza of things to see and do at little or no cost.

THE QUESTION of securing good accommodations at moderate rates, American Airlines says, requires early planning this time of year since vacationists who look ahead are more likely to get what they want than those who wait until the last minute. Finding the kind of place one wishes at the price one wants to pay without reservations can occur, because of cancellations, but the odds are against it.

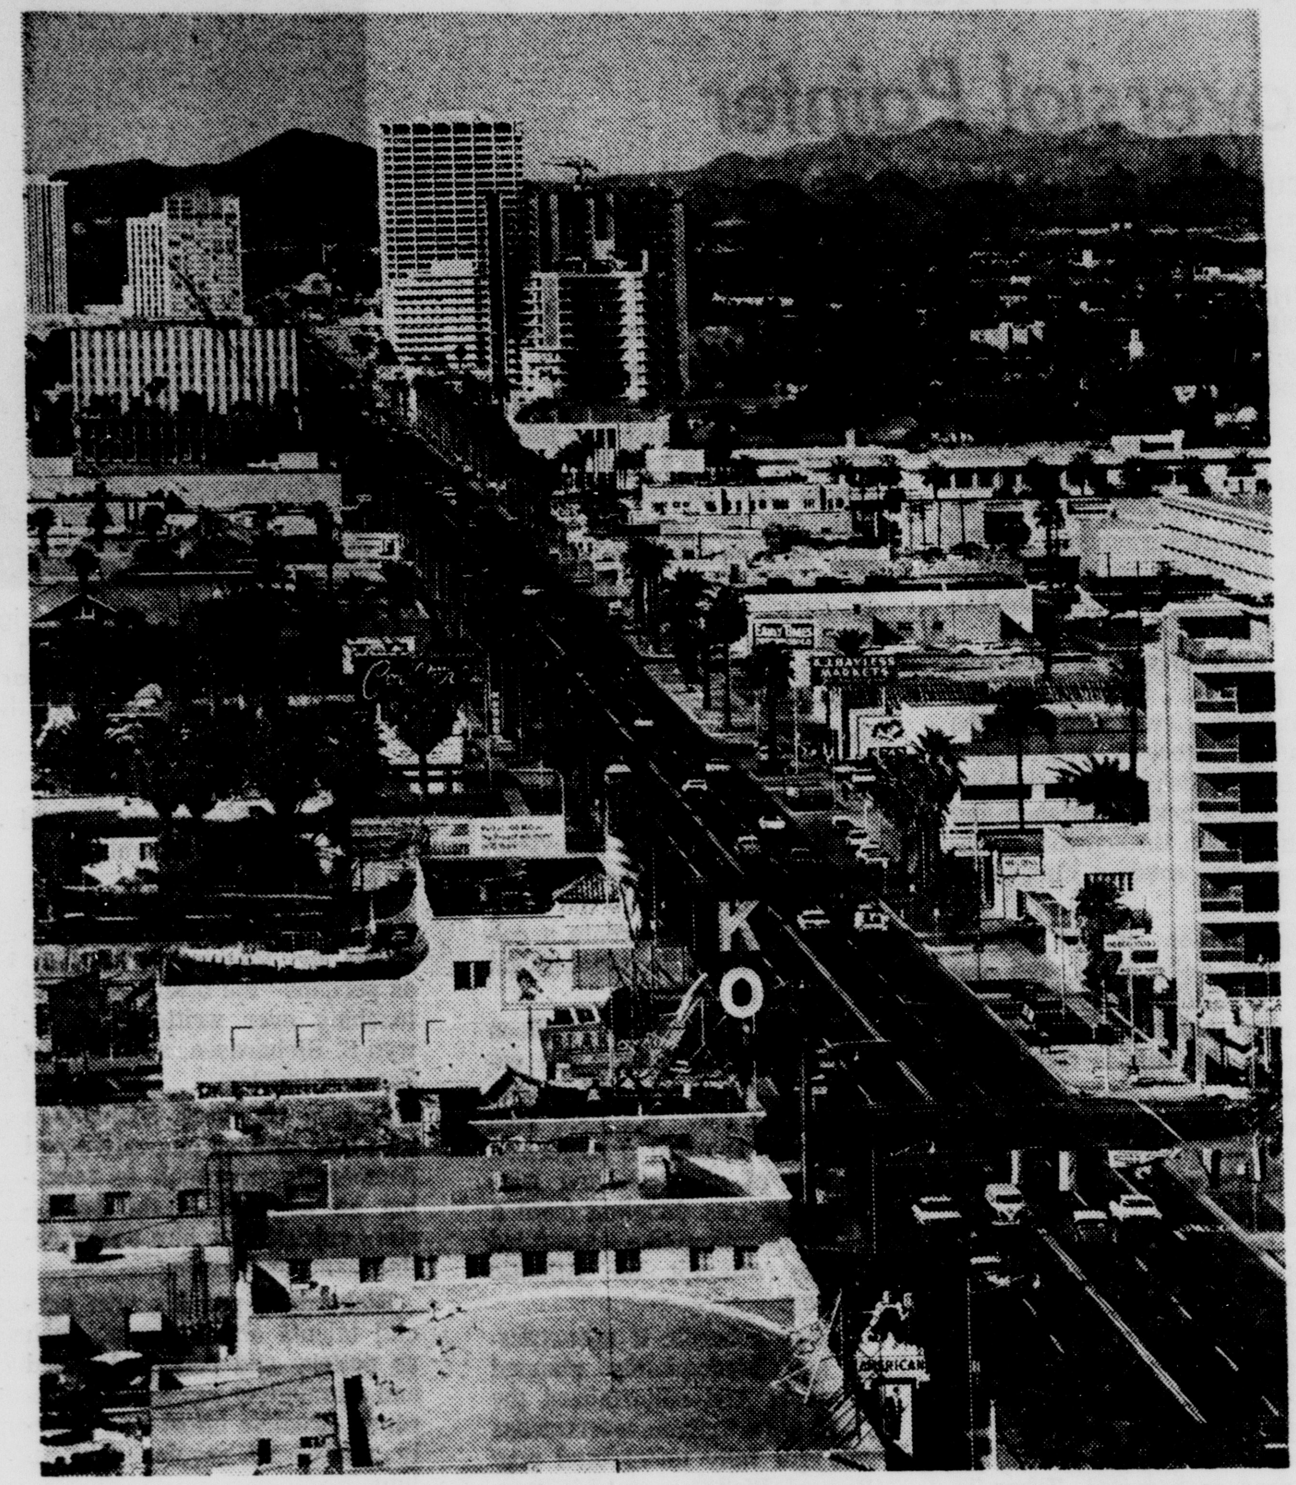
While the majority of double room rates during the winter and early spring periods tend toward high moderate or upper levels, there are quite a few fine motels with $10 daily double minimum rates and some as low as $7 and $8. And that's for such amenities as wall-to-wall carpeting, television and swimming pools.

The motels not only are located in Phoenix but also in satellite communities such as Scottsdale, Tempe, Glendale and Mesa.

Naturally, because of the attractive tariffs, these rooms generally get taken quickly.

ANOTHER WAY to reduce costs is short-term apartment rental. However, word has gotten around about these bargains (larger first-class accommodations at rates normally charged for smaller motel units). The result is that this season, apartment space in the immediate Phoenix area is rather tight, even for weekly rentals.

Nonetheless, motels in communities along or near the fringe of the Valley of the Sun — in locales about an hour or so away, usually by fast freeways — normally have plenty of space. What's more, charges are lower — some 25 per cent to 40 per cent under the summer highs. Facilities are good to excellent.



A DOWNTOWN STREET scene in Phoenix shows the multitude of palm trees that line the boulevards and the avenues of the Arizona metropolis. A winter vacation in and around its sunny climes need not be expensive.

Among possibilities are colorful sections like Oak Creek Canyon and the Verde Valley or smaller desert towns such as Collidge or Casa Grande.

HERE, AS well as around the Valley of the Sun, a money-saving policy is to concentrate on attractions without big price tags. They come in diverse quantity and fine quality.

Sightseeing is a natural, and with a package-deal rental car, it isn't very costly. Ghost towns, copper mines, Indian villages, canyons and other typical Southwestern scenes are quite near Phoenix.

Bygone days come alive in Phoenix at no-fee places like the Arizona History Room, Arizona Museum, Bayless Cracker Barrel Store, the Hohokam ruins at Pueblo Grande or at the low-fee Heard Museum which features fabulous Indian collections. You can view thousands of species of desert flora at the Botanical Garden or look at natural ones such as those around Superstition Mountain and Carefree-Cavecreek.

A wonderful array of arts and crafts can be seen in dozens of shops, galleries and at the Phoenix Art Museum.

FOR A CHANGE of pace, there are some two dozen kinds of recreation — in addition to free sun-tanning — and, again, the cost is zero or just a little. A great favorite is Encanto Park where lawns, lagoons and exotic trees provide a setting for free or inexpensive diversions from boating and golf to tennis and shuffleboard.

For 25 cents, a carload can enter South Mountain Park, the nation's biggest city park, for hiking, riding, picnicking or scenic drives to panoramic points like Dobbins Lookout. There are even electric outlets and dance areas at well-equipped picnic sites.

Special events — more than 400 spark the valley scene during the winter season — bring a batch of fascinating fun outlets. Some have a price tab, many don't.

Rodeos, gymkhanas or horse shows are staged practically every week. You can watch colorful western parades such as those of Scottsdale's Parada del Sol or the Phoenix Rodeo of Rodeos.

IT DOESN'T cost a cent to pan for gold (and keep what you find) at Wickenburg's Gold Rush Days. The same is true of training sessions of the Phoenix Roadrunners hockey team, while for 50 cents you can watch one of almost a half dozen major league baseball teams that train in the valley each spring.

Indian ceremonials such as the Yaqui rites around Easter have no price tag. And these are only a few of the events taking place.

Even on a budget vacation, a taste of the posh resort life is not only possible but reasonably priced. Phoenix area resorts welcome "non-guests" for cocktails and most meals. Popular are family brunches or lunch by the pool for around $3 or so per person, and that includes the opportunity to soak up the resort's special atmosphere in a leisurely manner.

Package vacations — American Airlines offers a wide variety — also bring money-saving holidays and they eliminate the problem of searching for good accommodations. Besides a room, they include some meals, airport transfer, even sightseeing and other extras.

WHEN THERE IS no man around, a Bunny Mother can come in handy in helping with a stubborn zipper, as Frankie Helms does above. The difficult bow tie, at right, is yet another problem with which Frankie can give her young and pretty chargest a helping hand.

THE BUNNY MOTHER

Frankie Helms Is Mentor To Luscious Playboy Club Girls

KMOG-Radio, where she also conducted a children's show on the air and freelanced on television commercials.

SHE ABANDONED radio and television in 1962 when several of her broadcasting friends became franchise owners of the St. Louis Playboy Club and talked her into coming over as Bunny Mother.

Frankie wasn't destined to remain in St. Louis for long. The Miami and Atlanta clubs borrowed her to set up their operations, and she later opened the Jamaica and Denver Playboy clubs. When the multi-million dollar Lake Geneva Playboy Club Hotel was built, Frankie was invited to be resident Bunny Mother.

"That was after I had discovered San Francisco," she comments, "and as far as I was concerned, there was no contest. San Francisco won hands down."

ALTHOUGH SHE is greatly in demand on the social circuit, Frankie, on the whole, prefers a more casual life.

"I'm basically a homebody," she confesses. "It's great fun to go out on the town once in a while, but I really prefer entertaining at home.

"Dating just for the sake of dating bores me. I suppose I'd be termed a one-man woman."

There is no "one man" in the picture at the moment, but Frankie will definitely know him when he appears. Like all truly feminine women, she likes a man who takes charge and asserts his masculinity.

"If he combines that with tenderness and a sense of humor, he's the man for me."

AS ONE OF a handful of women throughout the world experienced in her field, Frankie could request a transfer to London, Montreal or any of the glamor cities where Playboy clubs exist. But, she prefers to stay in the Bay Area.

"I have the best of all possible worlds here. A ready made family . . . a home in Sausalito . . . and a job I love in my favorite city. Who could ask for more?"

Well, maybe that special man.

But for a beautiful and intelligent Southern belle like Francesca Helms, that's never a problem or worry.

THE BOOK PAGES

A Portfolio From Marin's Most Controversial Painter

By DON KEOWN

CUCARO by Robert E. Hopkins; Sentinel Art Books, 64 pages, $6.95.

THE MOTOR BALLOON "AMERICA" by Edward Mabley; Stephen Greene Press, 93 pages, $4.95.

Commercially, Pascual (Pat) Cucaro of Sausalito is a prime candidate for Marin County's most successful painter. And critically, he is unquestionably our most controversial.

Cucaro has succeeded Walter Keane in the Bay Area not only as a prolific seller, but also as a favorite target of the critics.

His wistful clowns are now as familiar as Keane's wide-eyed children.

But it must be noted that whereas Keane drew almost unanimous condemnation and even disdain from highbrow critics, Cucaro has attracted a much more mixed response. True, there have been critics who have gushed venom in evaluating his work. But there have also been critics who have defended him with equal vigor.

Whatever the differences among critics, the general public has responded most favorably toward Cucaro and Cucaro art. And these fans have now been afforded an opportunity to acquire a book that is, in its essence, a portfolio of his work.

"Cucaro" is being offered in three editions. Out first was a limited, leatherbound edition with 81 engravings and 40 color plates, accompanied by two original Cucaro graphics for each book, and priced at $150.

Graphics or no graphics, $150 books are beyond our interest range.

But now there is a $6.95 clothbound edition in circulation, containing the same engravings and color plates. And this fits far better within our means, and, we suspect, within the resources of the typical Cucaro admirer as well.

But if you still resist the cost, a paperback edition is scheduled for publication some time in mid-1970.

"Cucaro" opens with a brief biography (printed in three languages) of the Italian immigrants' son who fought his way up the tough art ladder to commercial recognition and success. It was written by Robert E. Hopkins, and, if hardly inspired, nevertheless provides an adequate backgrounding for the reader. But the main attraction of the book is, of course, the Cucaro art.

His work here is divided into four portfolios, by time periods, so that the viewer can note the changing interests and styles. But he can also observe that the distinctive Cucaro approach and touch remain throughout. A Cucaro is very much a Cucaro, in 1946 or 1969.

Reproduction of the art is generally quite good and the book is attractively designed. The black binding with gold signature script title is rich in its simplicity.

The biggest drawback is the restriction imposed by the page size. Unlike the usual king-sized pages of an art tome, Cucaro's work has been reproduced on standard nine-by-six inch pages, usually with several paintings or sketches to a page. This proves to be a handicap, particularly for what Cucaro calls his "people-people" paintings — crowds in some such setting as a bazaar or carnival. There is simply too much compression.

His clowns, dating back to a boyhood association with the circus, fare much better, as do his portraits of self and family. But our own special favorites are his street scenes, be they of Naples, Paris, San Francisco or Taxco. Here, it seems to us, Cucaro demonstrates an even greater sensitivity than in his studies of the human face. And these streets are drawn so starkly and so dramatically that the limited space accorded them in the book proves only a minor obstacle in the way of their appreciation.

"Cucaro" is available now only through the Cory Galleries of 377 Geary Street and 360 Jefferson Street, San Francisco, but plans are under way for distribution through book stores and possibly other sources.

Pat Cucaro is an interesting human being as well as a talented artist, with a keen feeling for people and places. He has a flair, too, for publicity, a trait that has backfired and sometimes alienates the more conservative art connoisseurs. But it has also served to add to his legend and to increase his followers. "Cucaro," the book, should enjoy a wide acceptance among them, just as has Cucaro, the individualist and painter.

THEATER and television writer-director Edward Mabley has reached back into the early 20th Century to re-create a colorful but almost forgotten event in American history.

In his "The Motor Balloon 'America'" he recalls the excitement of Oct. 15, 1910, when, at Atlantic City, N.J., six men and a cat boarded a motorized "cabin" of oil cloth and isinglass that was dangling from a battered, blimp-like gas-filled bag to attempt an Atlantic crossing.

It was a heroic if unsuccessful and inadequately planned endeavor. And editorialized the Chicago Tribune afterwards: "We can fully understand why (Walter) Wellman and his companions embarked on a voyage which for foolhardiness exceeds anything in the history of human recklessness, but what gets us is how a perfectly sane cat ever consented to go."

If the attempted flight wound up in distress and eventual rescue, its participants, cat and all, were nevertheless treated as heroes, and they did, indeed, set records and make a substantial contribution toward man's eventual utilization of the air as a means of transport and travel.

Mabley, in telling a most interesting story, has also provided his readers with a great deal of general information on the development of the dirigible and on early aviation generally.

PASCUAL (PAT) CUCARO, right, converses with another colorful member of Northern California's art colony, Benny Buffano, at a party that marked the appearance of a leatherbound limited edition of the book "Cucaro."

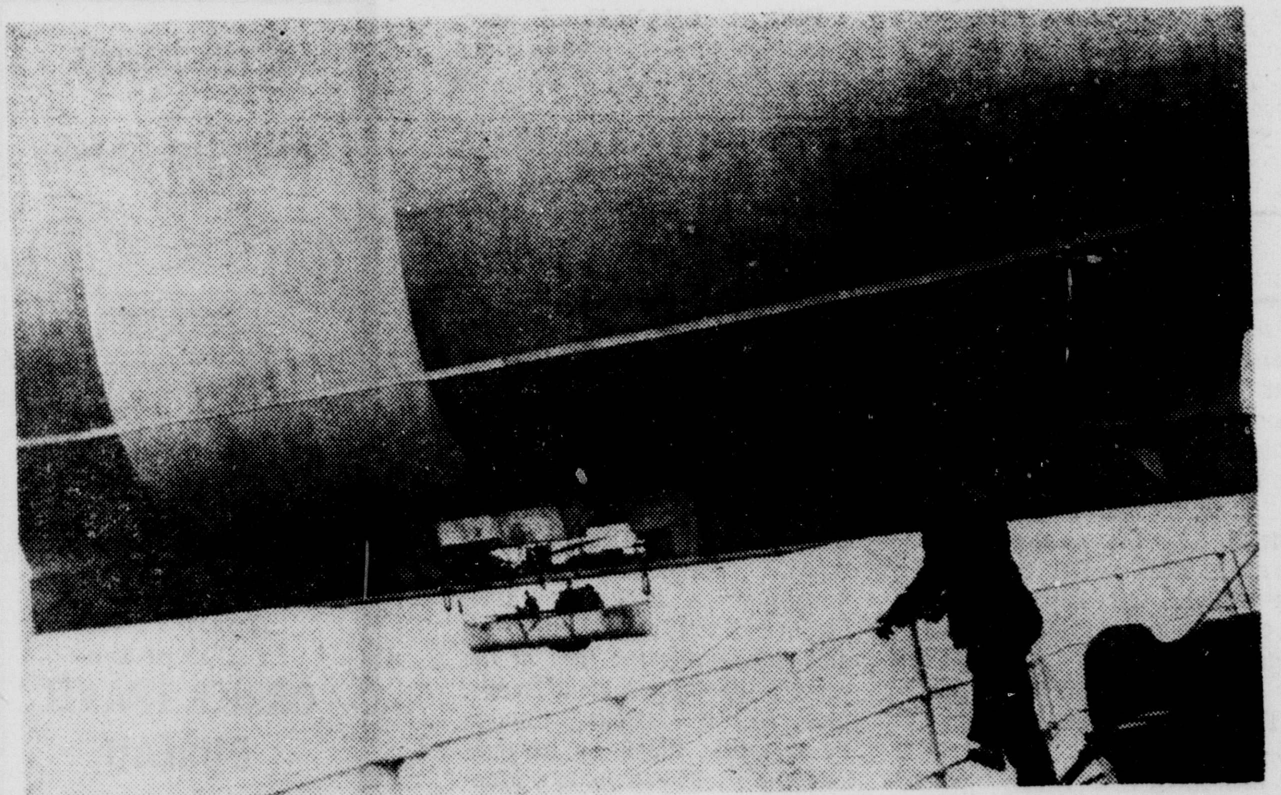
THE AUTHOR of "In the Early World" (Pantheon, $7.95), hailed by Joseph Featherstone as perhaps "the best book about teaching ever written," is Elwyn S. Richardson, a rural New Zealand teacher.

And in his book Richardson tells how with an innovative and democratic approach to teaching he inspired in the youngsters entrusted to him a new enthusiasm for learning.

Richardson put his own special talents and interests, such as pottery and botany, to good and stimulating use in his classroom. Creative effort was closely related to regular curriculum.

His account of his tenure at Oruaiti is detailed and incisive, and offers one of the more persuasive rebuttals to those who claim that effective teaching can be attained only through orthodox, time-tried and proven "three-R"-only methods and techniques. Less conforming teachers who now find themselves on the defensive should cull from its pages ammunition against their conservative critics and courage to continue with ideas and ideals.

DOVER Publications has published in two volumes a new and unabridged edition of "Twentieth-Century Stage Decoration," a book by Walter Rene Fuerst and Samuel J. Hume that first appeared in 1929. The first volume contains the text, the second the illustrating photographs, with each priced at $3. Adolphe Appia wrote the introduction that is more confusing than illuminating.

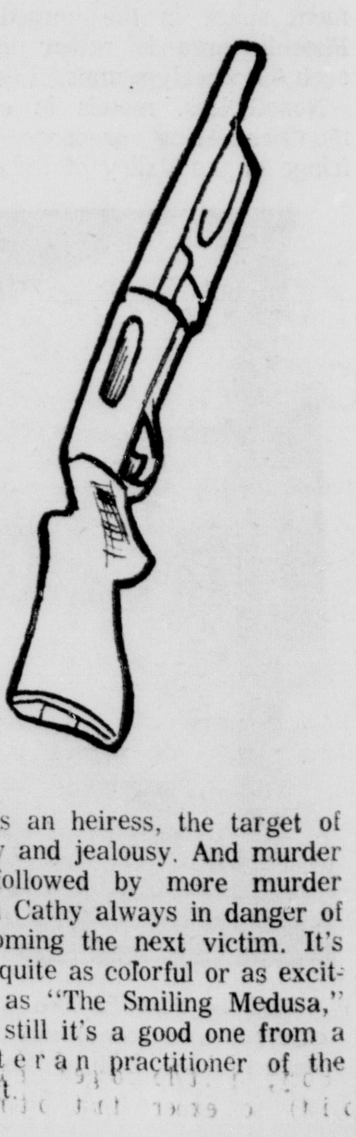


SIX MEN AND A CAT were about to wind up their attempted trans-Atlantic flight in a motorized balloon well short of their mark when this photograph was taken in 1910 from a rescue vessel. The picture is from the book "The Motor Balloon 'America'" by Edward Mabley.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE SMILING MEDUSA by Jean Muir; Dodd, Mead, 186 pages, $3.95.

GIRL ON A HIGH WIRE by Rae Foley; Dodd, Mead, 218 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The damsel-in-distress plot in the hands of a competent writer continues to make a most effective suspense novel, as demonstrated by these two books.

"The Smiling Medusa" is especially good. Called to an island off the Greek coast to claim the gloomy mansion she has inherited from her grandfather, Suzy Benson finds herself in the midst of unfriendly relatives, suspicious islanders and unpredictable expatriates. Greek legend plays a part in the peril that hangs over Suzy's head. And both geography and atmosphere are handled expertly by San Francisco resident, Miss Muir, even though this is her first suspense novel.

"Girl on a High Wire" takes place in New England. Again a young woman, this time Cathy Briggs, is summoned because of a death, in this case, her aunt, former actress Geraldine Harcourt. Again the menaced maiden is an heiress, the target of envy and jealousy. And murder is followed by more murder with Cathy always in danger of becoming the next victim. It's not quite as colorful or as exciting as "The Smiling Medusa," but still it's a good one from a veteran practitioner of the craft.

Pat Cucaro is an interesting human being as well as a talented artist, with a keen feeling for people and places. He has a flair, too, for publicity, a trait that has backfired and sometimes alienates the more conservative art connoisseurs. But it has also served to add to his legend and to increase his followers. "Cucaro," the book, should enjoy a wide acceptance among them, just as has Cucaro, the individualist and painter.

THEATER and television writer-director Edward Mabley has reached back into the early 20th Century to re-create a colorful but almost forgotten event in American history.

In his "The Motor Balloon 'America' " he recalls the excitement of Oct. 15, 1910, when, at Atlantic City, N.J., six men and a cat boarded a motorized "cabin" of oil cloth and isinglass that was dangling from a battered, blimp-like gas-filled bag to attempt an Atlantic crossing.

It was a heroic if unsuccessful and inadequately planned endeavor. And editorialized the Chicago Tribune afterwards: "We can fully understand why (Walter) Wellman and his companions embarked on a voyage which for foolhardiness exceeds anything in the history of human recklessness, but what gets us is how a perfectly sane cat ever consented to go."

If the attempted flight wound up in distress and eventual rescue, its participants, cat and all, were nevertheless treated as heroes, and they did, indeed, set records and make a substantial contribution toward man's eventual utilization of the air as a means of transport and travel.

Mabley, in telling a most interesting story, has also provided his readers with a great deal of general information on the development of the dirigible and on early aviation generally.

PASCUAL (PAT) CUCARO, right, converses with another colorful member of Northern California's art colony, Benny Buffano, at a party that marked the appearance of a leatherbound limited edition of the book "Cucaro."

THE AUTHOR of "In the Early World" (Pantheon, $7.95), hailed by Joseph Featherstone as perhaps "the best book about teaching ever written," is Elwyn S. Richardson, a rural New Zealand teacher.

And in his book Richardson tells how with an innovative and democratic approach to teaching he inspired in the youngsters entrusted to him a new enthusiasm for learning.

Richardson put his own special talents and interests, such as pottery and botany, to good and stimulating use in his classroom. Creative effort was closely related to regular curriculum.

His account of his tenure at Oruaiti is detailed and incisive, and offers one of the more persuasive rebuttals to those who claim that effective teaching can be attained only through orthodox, time-tried and proven "three-R"-only methods and techniques. Less conforming teachers who now find themselves on the defensive should cull from its pages ammunition against their conservative critics and courage to continue with ideas and ideals.

DOVER Publications has published in two volumes a new and unabridged edition of "Twentieth-Century Stage Decoration," a book by Walter Rene Fuerst and Samuel J. Hume that first appeared in 1929. The first volume contains the text, the second the illustrating photographs, with each priced at $3. Adolphe Appia wrote the introduction that is more confusing than illuminating.

SIX MEN AND A CAT were about to wind up their attempted trans-Atlantic flight in a motorized balloon well short of their mark when this photograph was taken in 1910 from a rescue vessel. The picture is from the book "The Motor Balloon 'America' " by Edward Mabley.

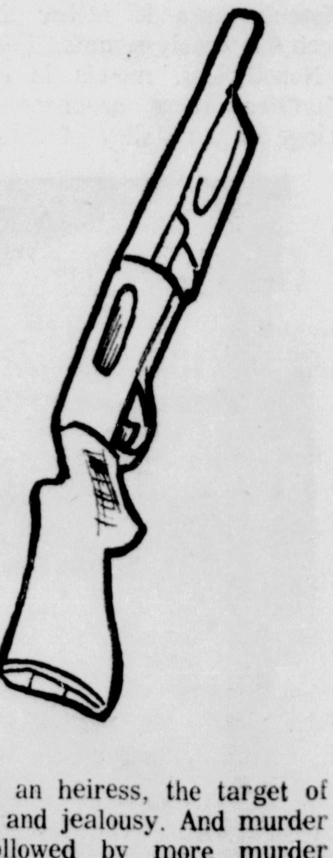
THE SMILING MEDUSA by Jean Muir; Dodd, Mead, 186 pages, $3.95.

GIRL ON A HIGH WIRE by Rae Foley; Dodd, Mead, 218 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The damsel-in-distress plot in the hands of a competent writer continues to make a most effective suspense novel, as demonstrated by these two books.

"The Smiling Medusa" is especially good. Called to an island off the Greek coast to claim the gloomy mansion she has inherited from her grandfather, Suzy Benson finds herself in the midst of unfriendly relatives, suspicious islanders and unpredictable expatriates. Greek legend plays a part in the peril that hangs over Suzy's head. And both geography and atmosphere are handled expertly by San Francisco resident, Miss Muir, even though this is her first suspense novel.

"Girl on a High Wire" takes place in New England. Again a young woman, this time Cathy Briggs, is summoned because of a death, in this case, her aunt, former actress Geraldine Harcourt. Again the menaced maiden is an heiress, the target of envy and jealousy. And murder is followed by more murder with Cathy always in danger of becoming the next victim. It's not quite as colorful or as exciting as "The Smiling Medusa," but still it's a good one from a veteran practitioner of the craft.

McCARTHY FOR PRESIDENT by Arthur Herzog; Viking, 295 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Paul E. Peterzell.

Last year's presidential campaign, as seen from one view inside by the Minnesota senator's Oregon campaign manager, failed to answer the twin questions of where either "new politics" or the poet-senator are headed.

"The regular Democrats, significantly, seemed to have misread the mood of 1968," says Herzog of the confrontation at Chicago. "They were certain that the McCarthyites would rejoin the fold once the nomination was in — as reformist dissidents had done before."

And Herzog makes clear that the regulars were wrong. "The party was resisting fresh blood just when, for the first time in many years, an army of new donors had arrived."

The author offers some stirring side speculations. The reregistration drive conducted for McCarthy in California, he notes, got about 3 per cent of the GOP vote, "and that would have been enough for Sen. Thomas Kuchel to defeat Dr. Max Rafferty in the Republican primary."

Herzog even comes up with a Marin angle.

Early in the compaign, he reports, "there was no money — the entire treasury consisted of $5,000 given by a generous San Francisco woman, June Degnan, who later would make other substantial contributions." This was June Oppen Degnan of Ross.

Herzog also details McCarthy's defeatism. A week before the convention, McCarthy told a British reporter "that he could not make it at Chicago — a statement picked up, oddly, by only one American newspaper," Herzog writes.

Herzog concludes with the observation that "Eugene McCarthy made 1968 a year Americans will long remember. A man met his times and there were certain incalculable results. Whether the man and his times will collide again no one can be sure."

SEN. EUGENE McCARTHY was pictured in a thoughtful mood as he answered the questions of David Frost during a television interview in the midst of his 1968 presidential campaign.

The Latest Novel By Longstreet

PEDLOCK SAINT, PEDLOCK SINNER by Stephen Longstreet; Delacorte Press, 469 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Stephen Longstreet, that virtuoso of fiction, has turned out another slickly-plotted, readable novel.

With skill and wit he directs the age-old conflict between idealistic youth and compromising middle age — as exemplified by young Rabbi David Mendoza, a chaplain fresh from Vietnam, and his uncle, Rabbi Charles Pedlock, shepherd of a delightful flock of hypocrites who find consolation at Temple Oheb Sholom in High Beverly, Calif. (where else?).

Old sinner Pedlock is a Jewish version of Elmer Gantry crossed with Billy Graham. He's a lecher, adulterer, charmer-of-widows, and violater-of-virgins. His one sartorial indulgence is black alligator shoes and his mating cry is Solomon's Song — King James Version.

But he's also a successful fund-raiser, a spell-binding and convincing preacher, and a suffering human being. Rabbi Pedlock is, in every sense, a winner — but his youthful, war-scarred nephew is a loser.

Young Rabbi Mendoza has his best moments in the second chapter — a grim, realistic account of a day aboard a hospital plane headed home from Vietnam. After that, it's all downhill for David — as a convincing character — and his doubts and struggles seem more adolescent than heroic.

Women are very much present in all Longstreet's novels and this time we are invited to watch luscious, long-legged Polly Bannock, a ripe, half-Mormon nurse, plead with David to convert her to Judaism while she converts him to sex.

Minna, sinner Charles Pedlock's patient wife, endures his indiscreet romping with panting, temporarily virginal Mona and cool, sophisticated Sally, and ends by being the most genuinely believable female of them all.

Longstreet's display of his knowledge of Judaism, both Orthodox and Reformed, is expert and informative. But he should have written two books — one a serious treatise of the philosophical problems of modern Jewry, and the other a sexy, fast-moving love story. But he chose to combine the two (sugar-coating?) and the result is surprisingly entertaining.

Longstreet, a scenarist and writer of screen-plays, has captured, with complete fidelity, the lilting rhythm of Jewish-American dialogue and conversation — so don't be surprised to find this story on television.

Though this novel is the third in a series about the Pedlocks — a family of wealthy American Jews — it can be read as an independent tale.

The Sordid, Murky World Of Forged Art Frauds

FAKE! by Clifford Irving; McGraw-Hill, 237 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Laura Devendorf.

If you own a Picasso, Matisse, Derain or Dufy don't mention it! The person you're trying to impress may have read Clifford Irving's "FAKE!"

In fact, having read it, anyone with nerve enough to part with real cash for these or several other painters of the period must either have watched the artist create the work himself or be an incurable masochist.

This incredible, yet true, story traces the activities of Elmyr de Hory, a style forger (not copyist) so expert that often artists themselves verified his work as their own. Through him, collectors have been bilked of uncounted millions. Yet the reluctant criminal saw almost none of the rewards and was kept to his task only through a series of involvements with unscrupulous companions.

This often sordid tale which sweeps the art and homosexual worlds of two continents is all the more spellbinding for its Dick-And-Jane directness. But the biggest point it makes is that collecting, far more than a love of art, is a colossal ego trip for dealers and buyers on down, without which the whole de Hory fraud would have been impossible.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

"Time To Go House" (Little, Brown, $4.25) is the first children's book to come from Walter D. Edmonds in far too long a time.

Edmonds has the knack for reeling off yarns for juniors in the tradition and style of the old storytellers. And "Time To Go House" finds him in his finest form.

Edmonds' principal character is the little mouse, Smalleata. And the grand adventure is the migration from field to the house for winter. It brings Smalleata into contact with new dangers and experiences, but fortunately adult mice including Uncle Stilton, are on hand to lend advice.

Edmonds, a Newbery Prize winner, again proves himself a marvelous tale-spinner who keeps things moving at a brisk and entertaining pace.

Some other new books for tykes and juniors:

"The Rabbit and the Turnip" (Doubleday, $1.95) is a small animal story for tos under 6, based upon a Chinese fable. Richard Sadler has translated it into English, while the illustrations, most appealing, are by the German Roswitha Gruttner. It is a warm story of four-footed and winged folk with a sound moral and a captivating cast. Especially recommended, and reasonably priced.

Marin's Adrien Stoutenburg is responsible for "Fee, Fi, Fo, Fum" (Viking, $4.95), a collection of old legends about friendly giants that she retells in her own expert way. Her giants hail from many sources — from the Bible and from the cultures of England, Africa, Ireland, Yugoslavia and the American Indians, to name a few. All possess the special fascination that fictional giants have always held for children. Illustrations are by Rocco Negri.

THIS IS the irrepressible little heroine of "Skrallan and the Pirates," the newest book by Astrid Lindegren, currently Sweden's best known author of stories for children.

A pretty blonde Swede, all of 3-years-old, is the heroine of "Skrallan and the Pirates" (Doubleday, $4.95) by Astrid Lindegren. Skrallan spends her summers on Saltcrow Islands, and there she indulges in the fancies and games that all tots enjoy. The cameras of Sven-Eric Deler and Stig Hallgren have followed the appealing child to record her play and activities in color. The splendid scenery adds yet another dimension to an exceptionally attractive book.

William Nordner has authored two new books for hobbyists, "How to Build Model Cars" (Meredith, $2.95) and "How to Build Model Ships" (Meredith, $2.95). Both books contain detailed instructions and both are generously illustrated with the author's own drawings. While the books are aimed at "10-year-olds and older," they are sufficiently authoritative to be of interest and assistance to hobbyists of any age who have not yet reached the advanced or expert level. For beginners, they are especially valuable.

"Pop Corn & Ma Goodness" (Viking, $4.50) by Edna Mitchell Preston with Robert Andrew Parker illustrations is a good-humored romp making splendid use of word sounds. With some unique rhymes of her own, the author tells what happens after Pop Corn meets up with Ma Goodness. It has the flavor of the nonsense poem, and yet a dash of reality. And the rollicking color illustrations are lively eye-catchers.

Time brings the days and months,

Time is sunrise and sunset.

Time is something that comes

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

ENGLISH ORGAN MUSIC — Simon Preston at the organ of Colston Hall, Bristol — Argo ZRG 528:

The major work in this collection is the organ Sonata in G by Elgar, a 19th Century Romantic piece almost orchestral in its conception. Any listener who finds thrills in the massive organ symphonies of Widor and Vierne will surely want this one.

The second side of the LP contains five short modern organ works. Bridge, Tippett and Britten are among the top English composers represented. Sound is superb throughout.

RAWSTHORNE: Symphony No. 3; GERHARD: Concerto for Orchestra — BBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Norman Del Mar — Argo ZRG 553:

The 1964 symphony is modern though not avant-garde English symphonic material and left me unmoved. The Gerhard work, though, had quite an impact. For a larger orchestra with extra percussion, and in a single movement, it employs three types of continuity: (1) instrumental timbre as the compositional impulse; (2) pulse as the creative force; and (3) action in very slow motion where the music seems suspended in a vacuum. Extremely atonal yet with easily-felt form and sense, the Concerto is a work of amazing virtuosity. The performance seems to do it justice as well.

ITALIAN RECORDER SONATAS — CORELLI, BARSANTI, VERACINI, BIGAGLIA, VIVALDI — Frans Bruggen, recorder/Bykma, cello/Leonhardt, harpsichord — Telefunken SAWT 9518-A Ex:

Frans Bruggen is the most skilled recorder player on records today. Anyone who has had even passing acquaintance with the instruments knows their maddening tendency to come up with wrong or off-key notes even when all your fingers are supposedly in the right places. Bruggen never misses, and this can't all be due to post-editing of the tape. His tone is round, rich and smooth, and his virtuosity in fast passages little short of astounding.

The period covered, around 1700, marked the final flowering of recorder playing in Baroque Europe. All five sonatas are complex, varied and tuneful.

VIVALDI: Concerti a cinque, a quattro, a tre — Frans Bruggen and other instrumentalists — Telefunken SAWT 9528-A Ex:

More Bruggen, even to some of his own liner notes in which he admits with high good humor to the criticisms so often leveled at Vivaldi, i.e.: Perhaps he made a stencil of a particular passage of notes, and then stencilled it wherever he wanted it, treble, bass, all over the score. . . . Anyway, the fact we can laugh at some aspects of a thing we love doesn't mean we love it any less.

Any Vivaldi lovers will go ape over this LP.

NEW YEAR'S PRAYER

Sing a song of the New Year
Hear the cooing of the dove,
Give us, Oh Lord, no dirge;
Rather, lead us in a paean to love.

CHATTERERS

Wing to wing when
Magpies fly the skies
Shouting causes
In raucous ring
Dark goes the sun
Eclipsing silent pauses.

SAUSALITO — LEON SPIRO

UNTITLED

In Sausalito sunness fading now framing now
in orange tones
the Golden Gate
from city extricate to stillness
in twilight — now night
oh! stillness, Sausalito.
Winter sidewalks crowd with leaves
and not the treadmill
tourist feet heaves
winter evening and the night
on a Sausalito hillside.
what a haven we have found
on this choice bit of ground between the Golden Gates.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

ENGLISH ORGAN MUSIC — Simon Preston at the organ of Colston Hall, Bristol — Argo ZRG 528:

The major work in this collection is the organ Sonata in G by Elgar, a 19th Century Romantic piece almost orchestral in its conception. Any listener who finds thrills in the massive organ symphonies of Widor and Vierne will surely want this one.

The second side of the LP contains five short modern organ works. Bridge, Tippett and Britten are among the top English composers represented. Sound is superb throughout.

RAWSTHORNE: Symphony No. 3; GERHARD: Concerto for Orchestra — BBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Norman Del Mar — Argo ZRG 553:

The 1964 symphony is modern though not avant-garde English symphonic material and left me unmoved. The Gerhard work, though, had quite an impact. For a larger orchestra with extra percussion, and in a single movement, it employs three types of continuity: (1) instrumental timbre as the compositional impulse; (2) pulse as the creative force; and (3) action in very slow motion where the music seems suspended in a vacuum. Extremely atonal yet with easily-felt form and sense, the Concerto is a work of amazing virtuosity. The performance seems to do it justice as well.

ITALIAN RECORDER SONATAS — CORELLI, BARSANTI, VERACINI, BIGAGLIA, VIVALDI — Frans Bruggen, recorder/Bykma, cello/Leonhardt, harpsichord — Telefunken SAWT 9518-A Ex:

Frans Bruggen is the most skilled recorder player on records today. Anyone who has had even passing acquaintance with the instruments knows their maddening tendency to come up with wrong or off-key notes even when all your fingers are supposedly in the right places. Bruggen never misses, and this can't all be due to post-editing of the tape. His tone is round, rich and smooth, and his virtuosity in fast passages little short of astounding.

The period covered, around 1700, marked the final flowering of recorder playing in Baroque Europe. All five sonatas are complex, varied and tuneful.

VIVALDI: Concerti a cinque, a quattro, a tre — Frans Bruggen and other instrumentalists — Telefunken SAWT 9528-A Ex:

More Bruggen, even to some of his own liner notes in which he admits with high good humor to the criticisms so often leveled at Vivaldi, i.e.: Perhaps he made a stencil of a particular passage of notes, and then stencilled it wherever he wanted it, treble, bass, all over the score. . . . Anyway, the fact we can laugh at some aspects of a thing we love doesn't mean we love it any less.

Any Vivaldi lovers will go ape over this LP.

Acapulco Offers Something For All Its Visitors

By MURRAY J. BROWN

There is something for everyone in Acapulco, the famous Mexican resort on the Pacific Coast — the sportsman, the swinger, the shopper, the sightseer and the spectator.

In fact, one of the big problems for the American visitor is to find time to take advantage of all the attractions.

For the sports-minded, there are swimming, surfing, water skiing, skin and scuba diving, sailing, fishing, golf, tennis, riding and other sea and land activities.

There also are parachute rides over the bay; high-powered speedboats attached by lines to the chutes pull riders up to 100 feet and more.

FOR THE swinger, there are nightclubs, discotheques, cafes and bars and the action goes on virtually around the clock.

Daytime swingers head for the thatch-roofed, open-sided Paradise Club on La Condesa Beach where the food, band and dancing are hot.

For the shopper, there are boutiques with the latest fashions from Paris and other haute coutourier centers, curio shops and street stalls with leather goods, silver jewelry and other handicrafts and peddlers hawking colorful serapes, rugs, mantillas and other locally-produced wares on the beaches.

FOR THE sightseer, there are tours by boat and bus to Mexican fishing and farming villages and through the old city of Acapulco with its steep, narrow alleys and ancient homes and churches, including the blue-domed 240-year-old Church of the Lonely Virgin.

There also are miles of beaches decorated by shapely bikini-clad American and Mexican beauties for the girl-watchers.

For the spectator, there are the exciting jai aliai games, bullfights in the winter season, water skiing tournaments, nightly water acrobatic shows and the famed divers who risk life and limb by plunging 140 feet from a cliff into a narrow and shallow inlet.

I MADE MY first visit to Acapulco with other American writers as guests for the press opening of the Paraiso Marriott Hotel, fronting on the beach.

The 22-story hotel, with a lighthouse-like tower on the roof, is the first outside the United States to be operated by the Marriott Corp. Hotel Division.

Decorated in traditional Mexican style, the hotel offers 442 rooms with views of the bay or mountains, tour and transportation services, shops, cocktail lounge, dining and other facilities.

MY ROOM overlooking the horseshoe-shaped bay was furnished with twin beds, a bureau-desk, a small sofa and two chairs and a table. It also had a terrace, dressing room with washbasin and double closet and a bathroom with shower, toilet, bidet and extra telephone.

Unusual to Americans who have visited other top resorts is Acupulco's informality when it comes to clothes. Ties and jackets are not required even in the fanciest places. And women can leave their evening gowns and furs at home, too.

Casual clothes, such as pants sets and bare midriff outfits are acceptable everywhere.

MOST POPULAR nightspots include the discotheque Tequila A-Go-Go, just off Miguel Aleman Avenue, a short distance from the Paraiso. There's a cover charge of 25 pesos or about $2. Order locally-made liquors and beer — imported alcoholic drinks are expensive in Mexico.

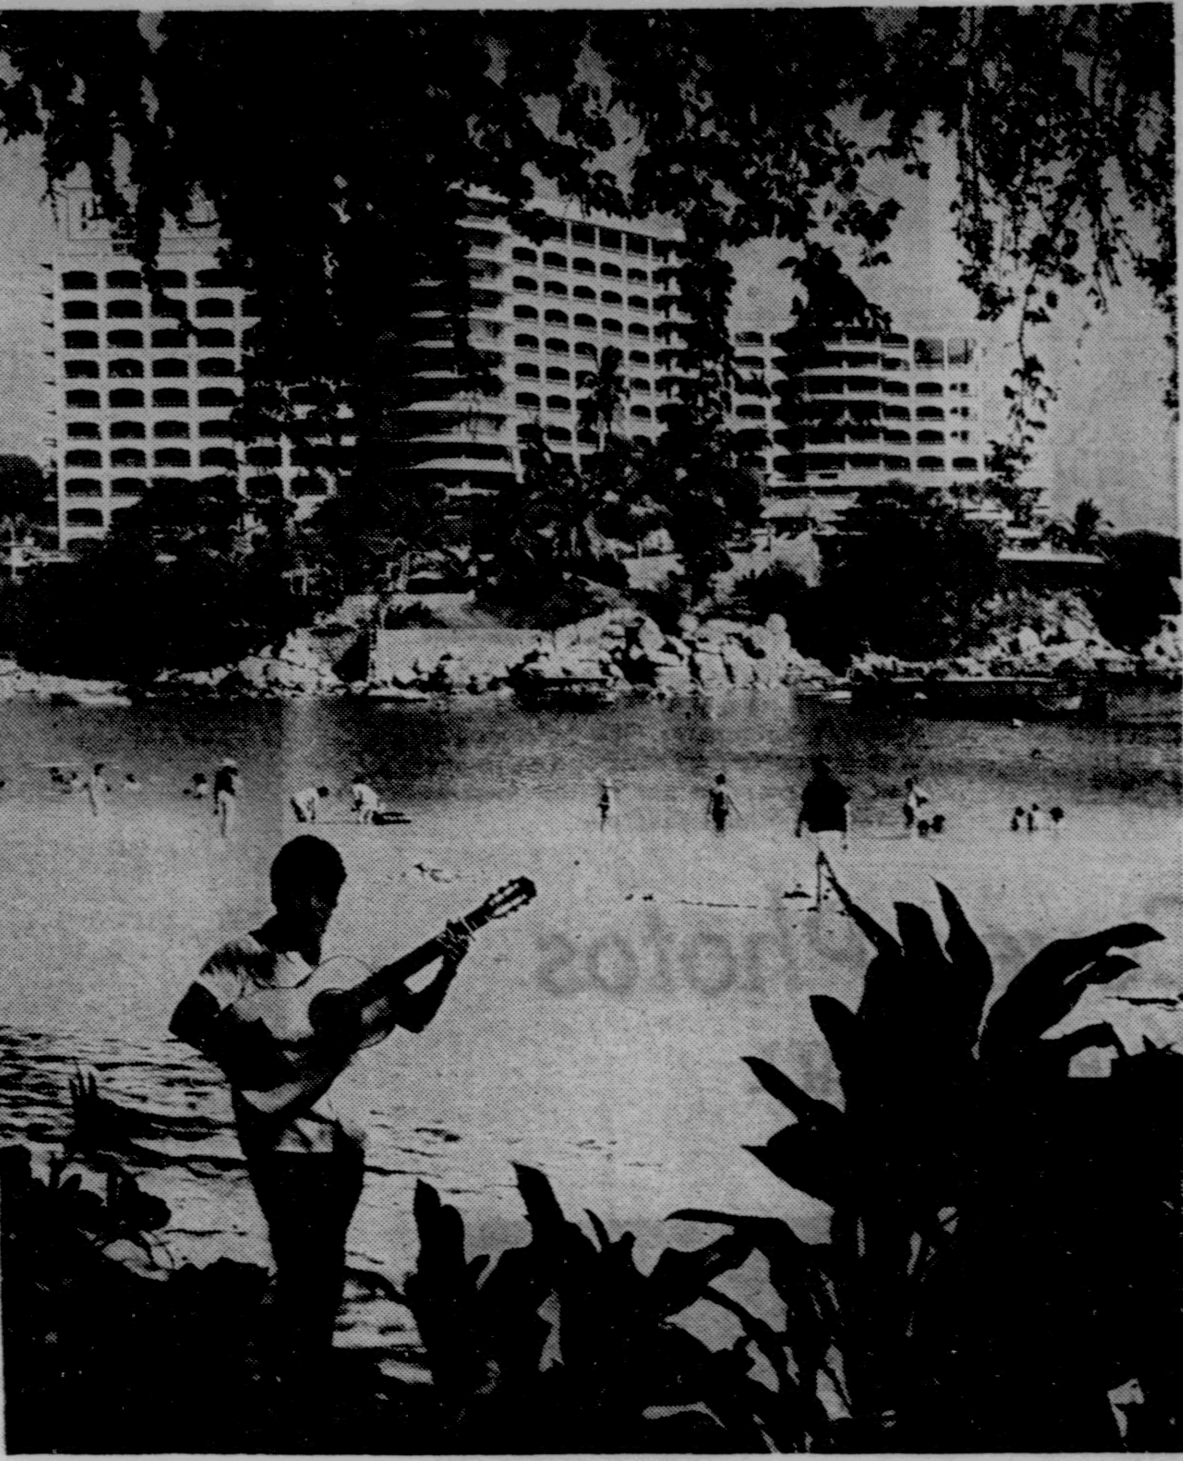
Another top "in" spot for the jet set is Le Dome, which also has live entertainment (and cover charge).

About a half-dozen American and Mexican airlines fly to Acapulco from cities in the United States.

I made the flight between New York and Acapulco aboard an Aeronaves de Mexico DC8 — about seven hours via Mexico City going and about five hours non-stop on return.

There also are regular bus and air services between Acapulco and Mexico City, 265 miles to the north.

For entry into Mexico, U.S. citizens need only a tourist card which can be obtained through the airlines or from Mexican tourist offices or consulates in the states. There is no fee. And Mexico does not impose a departure tax on air travelers.



THE BEACHES of Acapulco remain a prime source of pleasure for visiting tourists, but are far from the resort city's only attraction. Above, a strolling guitarist plays on Caleta Beach with the Hotel Caleta in the background.

The Travel Pages

AT NIGHT, Acapulco is ablaze with lights and alive with action, with nightclubs, discotheques, cafes and bars doing a brisk business. Seen here in the harbor at right foreground is the brightly-lit yacht, the Sea Cloud II, that carries tourists on excursion trips around Acapulco Bay.

Bonsai Plant Care And Culture Prove Fascinating To Marinites

Garden Page

Bonsai, anyone?

The answer has to be an overwhelming yes, for more and more Marinites are taking a fancy to these picturesque trees, dwarfed and twisted in Japanese fashion.

It is true that in Japan a gardener may start a young bonsai that will reach its perfection in the lifetime of his grandchildren. Patience is a big factor in shaping and training a specimen to the shape desired.

But, if patience isn't your virtue, don't despair, for most nurserymen have ready-grown bonsai plants in pots which you can enjoy and cherish in your home.

FOR THOSE who want to start a bonsai from a seedling, or hunt down older rugged-looking specimens to train, there are simplified procedures which will bring more rapid results.

Bonsai developed from year-old seedlings can be attractive specimens in five or 10 years. If you find a larger plant to start with — in the wild, in your own garden or in the nursery — you can have an attractive piece immediately.

If starting with older plants, look for misshaped, irregular growth rather than shapely plants such as are preferred for planting in the garden. Prune unwanted branches to add to the interest of specimen form.

KEEP IN mind the shape you're trying to achieve. A twisted look as though it had lived a rugged life on a rocky mountain top is ideal.

Back to the year-old seedling for bonsai: These are available at nurseries and have certain advantages. The trunk and branches will be pliable and easy to train. There are excellent manuals available, which show you how to wire the branches and trunks to achieve artistic shapes.

Pruning the young plants is confined to removing a few unwanted branches with sharp shears, then pinching-back new growth as it appears. The results are stouter trunks and small foliage.

START YOUR seedling in a small pot. Bonsai containers, available at nurseries and florist shops, are usually shallow — longer and wider than they are deep. Increase the size of the container from year to year until the specimen has reached the ultimate size you wish.

When you place the small tree in the container, try tilting it slightly for artistic effect. If the bowl is oblong, set the plant closer to one end than the other; if it's round, put the bonsai in the center.

Soil for bonsai specimens should be porous and not excessively rich. Equal parts of garden loam, leaf mold and sand is the usual mixture.

Drainage holes in the container should be covered with a fine wire screening or a piece of crockery set over the hole to prevent soil loss. A layer of gravel in the bottom of the container is recommended. Over that, add a layer of sand. Place the plant in the container, spread out its roots and then add the soil mixture. Press the soil firmly, then water it thoroughly with a fine spray.

CARE OF bonsai specimens differ from that of plants in the ground or in larger redwood tubs. They depend on your help to live in a small area of soil. Therefore, watering becomes very important.

Once a day with a fine mist is average, but in warm weather they may need water as many as three times a day.

Keep your bonsai out of direct hot sun and don't expose it to strong, drying winds. Don't be afraid of cold weather, as most bonsai plants are naturally hardy — conifers, deciduous shrubs and trees, or hardy evergreens. Naturally, if you're using a tender plant, you would give it winter protection.

If in doubt, ask your nurseryman.

WHETHER YOU'RE looking for older specimens or bonsai seedlings, choosing the plants is half the fun. There's a good variety available, and your imagination will happily run wild. Remember that the plants which are naturally slow-growing and picturesque are the best bets.

BONSAI PLANTS are a delightful hobby. In Japan, a gardener may start a young bonsai that will reach its perfection in the lifetimes of his grandchildren. But in this country, more impatient gardeners can purchase ready-grown bonsai plants in pots, such as the one above, at the nurseries and florist shops.

Before You Plant Those New Bareroot Roses —

As the New Year gets underway, so does the California rosarian's calendar of activities in the Golden State.

January is not only the month of pruning old roses, but a busy time for planting new ones.

Before rushing out and buying the first roses you see advertised, read the following advice from the California Association of Nurserymen about selecting and planting bareroot roses bushes:

THE MOST important step is in the selection of healthy bareroot stock. The good is easy to discern from the bad, and any nurseryman will be happy to explain the difference to you. Basically, you want to determine if the prospective purchase seems well formed with at least three strong canes (branches).

Beware of the shrivelled-up ones — or those with weak canes.

Roses are graded No. 1, No. 1½, and No. 2, with No. 1 being the best. No. 2 grade is discarded by most reputable rose growers. These are often sold as "bargain roses" — especially when sold without a variety name and just referred to as "pink," "yellow," etc.

Another thing to remember about rose buying is that the new All-American First Prize, and other 1970 introductions, will be in great demand. Supply generally doesn't meet demand, so select your's early in the season.

NOW FOR the planting of those new roses you bring home from the nursery: The requirements are not that complicated, and will assure beautiful results.

First, select a sunny planting site. The location should receive sun for at least half a day and more is preferable, especially in coastal gardens.

A well-drained soil is ideal, but a lack of such can be compensated for at time of planting. The planting hole should be large enough to permit you to spread out the roots of the rose. They should never be crammed into a hole in the ground.

If your soil isn't all it should be, it is advisable to mix it with a nurserymen's planter mix before returning it back into the hole.

WITH A good-sized planting hole, mound the soil and planter mix preparation into the shape of a cone and spread the roots so that they settle over this mound.

At the base of the rose is the bud union. This is located in the area where the canes branch out from the shank — and resembles a thumbnail. The rose should be planted at a depth so the bud union is slightly above the final soil level — about one inch above.

When the level has been determined, fill-in around the roots with the soil you have taken from the hole and combined with planter mix to create a rich, organic planting medium. When the hole is completely full, firm the area with your feet. Make sure the soil is packed firmly, eliminating any air pockets that may have formed.

MAKE A water basin around the bush. If the bud union has been lowered during the planting, now is the time to raise it before making this basin. This becomes the irrigation basin and it should be filled with water immediately, both to settle the soil and to keep the roots moist.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- ✓Lily bulbs are still available for planting. Give them a well-drained soil — rich in humus (as is provided by a nurseryman's planter mix used when setting-out the bulbs).
- ✓Crabgrass controls should be applied now to kill seeds that are overwintering — and waiting to germinate in spring. Ask your nurseryman to recommend a product for this job.
- ✓Christmas gift plants should be watered regularly so they won't dry out in the warm air of your home.
- ✓Check the camellias and azaleas in bloom now at your nearby nursery to see if they're the ones you've been looking for.

Winter's A Busy Planting Time For Marin Gardeners

January ushers in one of the busiest planting seasons for Marin gardeners.

From now till late March is the best time to plant any number of dormant trees and shrubs. Especially when you consider that most fruit trees, many shade trees, flowering specimens, vines, various berries and grapes can be easily planted in winter — more economically!

IF YOU LONG for a home fruit orchard, now is the time to start it. The bareroot prices are attractive and the variety is at its peak: From apples, peaches, plums, cherries, and other tasty fruit, to walnuts, pecans and almonds. Individual varieties have winter and summer cultural requirements that mean success or failure in your garden.

In planting a home orchard, consider how many trees your garden can accommodate. When temptation is great and space is at a premium, use dwarf fruit trees. While their overall size is less than normal, their fruit is of standard size and quality.

Most deciduous trees can be planted in the bareroot season — during the dormancy period. The list runs from alders and birches to sycamores and willows — with a host of others in-between.

THERE ARE excellent shade trees — at a tidy savings, you can enjoy that much more shade next summer from these bigger bareroot specimens.

Roses head the list of plants available during the bareroot season. Most nurseries will have their greatest selection of roses at this time. This will include 1970 All-American, First Prize, and other introductions available for the very first time.

A Budget Vacation In Phoenix Is Possible

Luxury-style vacations may be a specialty of southern Arizona, but a mild-weather holiday around Phoenix need not be expensive.

In fact, a sun-break in the Valley of the Sun can mean high fun at low cost.

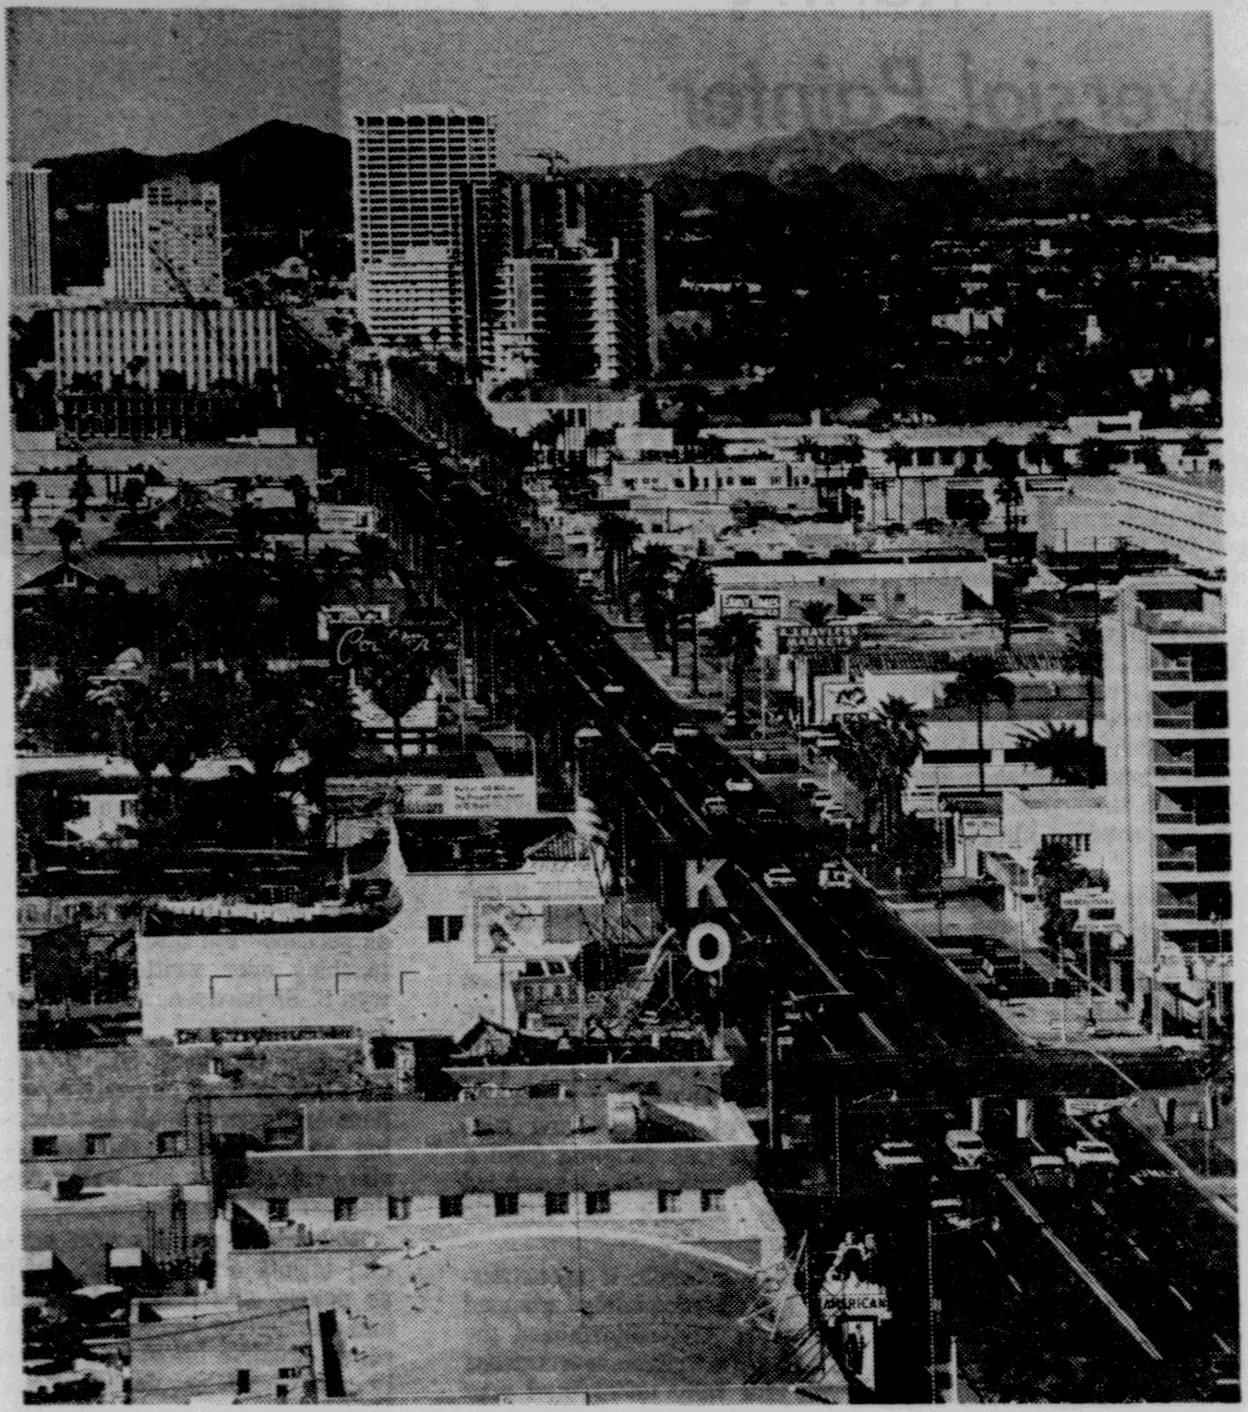
The secret of keeping expenses down during the popular high season around Phoenix is three-fold: selection of lower-priced accommodations immediately in the area; using quickly-accessible-by-car fringe bases with fewer crowds and cheaper rates, and concentrating on the bonanza of things to see and do at little or no cost.

THE QUESTION of securing good accommodations at moderate rates, American Airlines says, requires early planning this time of year since vacationists who look ahead are more likely to get what they want than those who wait until the last minute. Finding the kind of place one wishes at the price one wants to pay without reservations can occur, because of cancellations, but the odds are against it.

While the majority of double room rates during the winter and early spring periods tend toward high moderate or upper levels, there are quite a few fine motels with $10 daily double minimum rates and some as low as $7 and $8. And that's for such amenities as wall-to-wall carpeting, television and swimming pools.

The motels not only are located in Phoenix but also in satellite communities such as Scottsdale, Tempe, Glendale and Mesa.

Naturally, because of the attractive tariffs, these rooms generally get taken quickly.



A DOWNTOWN STREET scene in Phoenix shows the multitude of palm trees that line the boulevards and the avenues of the Arizona metropolis. A winter vacation in and around its sunny climes need not be expensive.

ANOTHER WAY to reduce costs is short-term apartment rental. However, word has gotten around about these bargains (larger first-class accommodations at rates normally charged for smaller motel units). The result is that this season, apartment space in the immediate Phoenix area is rather tight, even for weekly rentals.

Nonetheless, motels in communities along or near the fringe of the Valley of the Sun — in locales about an hour or so away, usually by fast freeways — normally have plenty of space. What's more, charges are lower — some 25 per cent to 40 per cent under the summer highs. Facilities are good to excellent.

Among possibilities are colorful sections like Oak Creek Canyon and the Verde Valley or smaller desert towns such as Collidge or Casa Grande.

HERE, AS well as around the Valley of the Sun, a money-saving policy is to concentrate on attractions without big price tags. They come in diverse quantity and fine quality.

Sightseeing is a natural, and with a package-deal rental car, it isn't very costly. Ghost towns, copper mines, Indian villages, canyons and other typical Southwestern scenes are quite near Phoenix.

Bygone days come alive in Phoenix at no-fee places like the Arizona History Room, Arizona Museum, Bayless Cracker Barrel Store, the Hohokam ruins at Pueblo Grande or at the low-fee Heard Museum which features fabulous Indian collections. You can view thousands of species of desert flora at the Botanical Garden or look at natural ones such as those around Superstition Mountain and Carefree-Cavecreek.

A wonderful array of arts and crafts can be seen in dozens of shops, galleries and at the Phoenix Art Museum.

FOR A CHANGE of pace, there are some two dozen kinds of recreation — in addition to free sun-tanning — and, again, the cost is zero or just a little. A great favorite is Encanto Park where lawns, lagoons and exotic trees provide a setting for free or inexpensive diversions from boating and golf to tennis and shuffleboard.

For 25 cents, a carload can enter South Mountain Park, the nation's biggest city park, for hiking, riding, picnicking or scenic drives to panoramic points like Dobbins Lookout. There are even electric outlets and dance areas at well-equipped picnic sites.

Special events — more than 400 spark the valley scene during the winter season — bring a batch of fascinating fun outlets. Some have a price tab, many don't.

Rodeos, gymkhanas or horse shows are staged practically every week. You can watch colorful western parades such as those of Scottsdale's Parada del Sol or the Phoenix Rodeo of Rodeos.

IT DOESN'T cost a cent to pan for gold (and keep what you find) at Wickenburg's Gold Rush Days. The same is true of training sessions of the Phoenix Roadrunners hockey team, while for 50 cents you can watch one of almost a half dozen major league baseball teams that train in the valley each spring.

Indian ceremonials such as the Yaqui rites around Easter have no price tag. And these are only a few of the events taking place.

Even on a budget vacation, a taste of the posh resort life is not only possible but reasonably priced. Phoenix area resorts welcome "non-guests" for cocktails and most meals. Popular are family brunches or lunch by the pool for around $3 or so per person, and that includes the opportunity to soak up the resort's special atmosphere in a leisurely manner.

Package vacations — American Airlines offers a wide variety — also bring money-saving holidays and they eliminate the problem of searching for good accommodations. Besides a room, they include some meals, airport transfer, even sightseeing and other extras.

Travel agents have complete details.

ARIZONA PLACES like Apacheland near Phoenix recall the colorful and sometimes violent past of the old Southwest. Here tourists thrill to the re-creation of a historic gunbattle.

What To Do About A Clogged Kitchen Sink

When fats and greases flow down the kitchen sink day after day, as they almost invariably do in most homes, it is only a question of time before there is a stoppage.

When solid materials, such as pieces of vegetable, are also permitted to enter the sink drain, the problem is compounded.

This being a period when it isn't always easy to obtain a plumber when you need him — especially for so-called small jobs — it is essential that someone in the family know something about unclogging sink drains.

MOST OF the time the stoppage will give way with the use of a rubber plunger or "plumber's friend," one of which should be standard equipment in every house.

The rubber cup of the plunger should be placed directly over the drain. Hold the handle with both hands, press it down, then lift it up with a kind of snap motion. Don't be discouraged if nothing happens the first few times.

It often takes 10 or 20 such actions to unclog the pipe and start the water flowing freely again.

IF THIS doesn't work, use a "snake" or auger, another item that should be around the house.

There are several variations of this tool, which is basically a flexible wire with a hook on the end of it. If yours has a crank handle, it should be turned in a clockwise direction after the wire has been inserted in the drain and jiggled around with an up-and-down movement.

In the event that neither the plunger nor the auger produces results, the trap under the sink may have to be cleaned out. Take off the cleanout plug at the bottom of the U with a wrench, unscrewing it in a counter-clockwise direction.

If there is no plug, unscrew the nuts that hold the U in place.

BE SURE TO place a pail or other container under the trap before opening it, since some water will come out. After the plug or U has been removed, use a snake or piece of wire with a hook on the end of it to pull out any clogged material on either side of the trap.

Commercial chemical drain cleaners are often effective when used according to directions.

Following the directions is vital, as there are many different kinds of cleaners on the market. The manufacturers of these products say that their regular use will prevent stoppages by dissolving accumulated matter, such as grease.

CHATTER CENTER

SINCE CONVERSATION is making a comeback, it's nice to have a suitable, comfortable and attractive place for the "oral exchange of sentiments, observations, opinions, ideas," as a current dictionary calls this talk-talk. Such a spot, shown here, offers cozy seating, some conversation-starters on the table at left and the one in the center. The room's atmosphere is comfortably conducive to an easy flow of words. Starting with the walls of warm-appearing Masonite textured hardboard, the decorator added some interesting touches — an ultra-modern painting, spindle-type room divider, a hanging plant, an attractive pilasters-and-shelving unit over settee, and a convenient lamp on endtable.

Do Your Homework Now If You Plan An Addition To The House

By VIVIAN BROWN

If the do-it-yourselfer is planning an addition to the house next spring, his wife should get him to spend the winter studying the project to give it a professional look, advises a well-known architect.

It may be the difference between a project that looks good and one that looks patchy.

"I GET LIVID when I see how do-it-yourselfers ruin the lines of a lovely house. It is like an attractive person who tolerates a skin blemish; or, a homemade dress that is carelessly thrown together. It could be different, if they'd just give it some thought," he says.

What secrets in house remodeling set the architect's look apart from the do-it-yourselfer's look?

Lots of them, says this architect, who prefers anonymity. The principal secret is detail.

FOR EXAMPLE, many do-it-yourselfers put a room on the house without considering whether it is compatible with the existing architecture. They cannot visualize the finished room.

Amateurs, he says, can educate themselves on this point.

One way is to photograph the exterior of the house from every angle while the trees are denuded and everything is pretty stark around the building. The photographs may then be enlarged and used as a base on which to sketch the planned addition. Or, tracing paper can be used to copy the photograph, and then the contemplated addition can be drawn on the paper. Three or four sketches should be made and friends and family should be consulted.

LIBRARIES HAVE books on architecture, and many libraries keep newspaper and magazine files that may provide photographs of houses that resemble the one to be remodeled.

Study the elevations (sides) of the house, and make sure that the addition is kept in line with the main part of the house. Note the roof and the placement of doors and windows. If one finds the right house, and the addition is about the size planned, the picture can be copied for ideas.

The addition should accommodate whatever function is planned for it. Is it to sleep one or more people? Is it to be a dining area? An extra bath?

EACH OF these rooms requires a certain basic amount of space for furniture and fixtures.

The do-it-yourselfer should draw the dimensions of furnishings to scale, so that he can see how they will fit into the room. A straight chair is figured at about 18 inches, but a windsor chair may run to 26 inches, a wing chair to 32 inches.

Many people plan small dining rooms without the space necessary around the table to push dining chairs back. A dining table may be five or more feet long, but it may extend to eight or more feet for special occasions. Six chairs or more may be required in the room. If there is a china cabinet, it should be figured at another four feet. You need room to open the door, and room to open drawers of a buffet server, if there is one. Many people use serving shelves on the wall, and these may take another foot or more.

MANY WOMEN cannot comprehend floor plans, this architect points out. His own wife cannot understand rough sketches, blueprints or anything that isn't three-dimensional. A photograph is the nearest thing to it, unless the do-it-yourselfer can build a model of the room.

"This would surely achieve perfect harmony. A small model of a project might be built from cigar boxes, and it will save headaches later."

If he is remodeling a kitchen, the do-it-yourselfer should really investigate every new idea connected with kitchens. Women like utility, convenience and style in the kitchen. They like ironing boards that spring out of walls, double sinks that permit sloshing things from one sink to another, accessible places for trays and small appliances. They like self-cleaning ovens, dishwashers and a freezer compartment in refrigerators even if they own a large freezer.

ONE BIG mistake made by do-it-yourselfers is forgetting to take into consideration the height of the kitchen worker. Cupboards may be put up so high that a little woman can't reach them.

Libraries usually have books and catalogs that illustrate the proper placement of utilities and architecural catalogs used by architects in assessing new building materials.

This architect says that if he ever builds another house for his wife, he will have her sign a release before building begins.

Women often say "that sounds great" and then later say they didn't understand what you really meant, he says. For example, they want many doors and windows, but they complain when they cannot properly place a grand piano or big sofa in the room.

On Moving Fence Posts

Want to move a fence post?

Dig around the base of the post to a depth of one foot. Wiggle post to loosen, and water around base with a hose. Let water soak in. Set a two-by-four on the ground next to the post and on it put your auto tire jack. Wrap strong welded chain around the post and over the jack lifter-bar.

Then hoist away with the jack and the post should slip out.

THE BOOK PAGES

A Portfolio From Marin's Most Controversial Painter

By DON KEOWN

CUCARO by Robert E. Hopkins; Sentinel Art Books, 64 pages, $6.95.

THE MOTOR BALLOON "AMERICA" by Edward Mabley; Stephen Greene Press, 93 pages, $4.95.

Commercially, Pascual (Pat) Cucaro of Sausalito is a prime candidate for Marin County's most successful painter. And critically, he is unquestionably our most controversial.

Cucaro has succeeded Walter Keane in the Bay Area not only as a prolific seller, but also as a favorite target of the critics.

His wistful clowns are now as familiar as Keane's wide-eyed children.

But it must be noted that whereas Keane drew almost unanimous condemnation and even disdain from highbrow critics, Cucaro has attracted a much more mixed response. True, there have been critics who have gushed venom in evaluating his work. But there have also been critics who have defended him with equal vigor.

Whatever the differences among critics, the general public has responded most favorably toward Cucaro and Cucaro art. And these fans have now been afforded an opportunity to acquire a book that is, in its essence, a portfolio of his work.

"Cucaro" is being offered in three editions. Out first was a limited, leatherbound edition with 81 engravings and 40 color plates, accompanied by two original Cucaro graphics for each book, and priced at $150.

Graphics or no graphics, $150 books are beyond our interest range.

But now there is a $6.95 clothbound edition in circulation, containing the same engravings and color plates. And this fits far better within our means, and, we suspect, within the resources of the typical Cucaro admirer as well.

But if you still resist the cost, a paperback edition is scheduled for publication some time in mid-1970.

"Cucaro" opens with a brief biography (printed in three languages) of the Italian immigrants' son who fought his way up the tough art ladder to commercial recognition and success. It was written by Robert E. Hopkins, and, if hardly inspired, nevertheless provides an adequate backgrounding for the reader. But the main attraction of the book is, of course, the Cucaro art.

His work here is divided into four portfolios, by time periods, so that the viewer can note the changing interests and styles. But he can also observe that the distinctive Cucaro approach and touch remain throughout. A Cucaro is very much a Cucaro, in 1946 or 1969.

Reproduction of the art is generally quite good and the book is attractively designed. The black binding with gold signature script title is rich in its simplicity.

The biggest drawback is the restriction imposed by the page size. Unlike the usual king-sized pages of an art tome, Cucaro's work has been reproduced on standard nine-by-six inch pages, usually with several paintings or sketches to a page. This proves to be a handicap, particularly for what Cucaro calls his "people-people" paintings — crowds in some such setting as a bazaar or carnival. There is simply too much compression.

His clowns, dating back to a boyhood association with the circus, fare much better, as do his portraits of self and family. But our own special favorites are his street scenes, be they of Naples, Paris, San Francisco or Taxco. Here, it seems to us, Cucaro demonstrates an even greater sensitivity than in his studies of the human face. And these streets are drawn so starkly and so dramatically that the limited space accorded them in the book proves only a minor obstacle in the way of their appreciation.

"Cucaro" is available now only through the Cory Galleries of 377 Geary Street and 360 Jefferson Street, San Francisco, but plans are under way for distribution through book stores and possibly other sources.

Pat Cucaro is an interesting human being as well as a talented artist, with a keen feeling for people and places. He has a flair, too, for publicity, a trait that has backfired and sometimes alienates the more conservative art connoisseurs. But it has also served to add to his legend and to increase his followers. "Cucaro," the book, should enjoy a wide acceptance among them, just as has Cucaro, the individualist and painter.

THEATER and television writer-director Edward Mabley has reached back into the early 20th Century to re-create a colorful but almost forgotten event in American history.

In his "The Motor Balloon 'America' " he recalls the excitement of Oct. 15, 1910, when, at Atlantic City, N.J., six men and a cat boarded a motorized "cabin" of oil cloth and isinglass that was dangling from a battered, blimp-like gas-filled bag to attempt an Atlantic crossing.

It was a heroic if unsuccessful and inadequately planned endeavor. And editorialized the Chicago Tribune afterwards: "We can fully understand why (Walter) Wellman and his companions embarked on a voyage which for foolhardiness exceeds anything in the history of human recklessness, but what gets us is how a perfectly sane cat ever consented to go."

If the attempted flight wound up in distress and eventual rescue, its participants, cat and all, were nevertheless treated as heroes, and they did, indeed, set records and make a substantial contribution toward man's eventual utilization of the air as a means of transport and travel.

Mabley, in telling a most interesting story, has also provided his readers with a great deal of general information on the development of the dirigible and on early aviation generally.

PASCUAL (PAT) CUCARO, right, converses with another colorful member of Northern California's art colony, Benny Buffano, at a party that marked the appearance of a leatherbound limited edition of the book "Cucaro."

THE AUTHOR of "In the Early World" (Pantheon, $7.95), hailed by Joseph Featherstone as perhaps "the best book about teaching ever written," is Elwyn S. Richardson, a rural New Zealand teacher.

And in his book Richardson tells how with an innovative and democratic approach to teaching he inspired in the youngsters entrusted to him a new enthusiasm for learning.

Richardson put his own special talents and interests, such as pottery and botany, to good and stimulating use in his classroom. Creative effort was closely related to regular curriculum.

His account of his tenure at Oruaiti is detailed and incisive, and offers one of the more persuasive rebuttals to those who claim that effective teaching can be attained only through orthodox, time-tried and proven "three-R"-only methods and techniques. Less conforming teachers who now find themselves on the defensive should cull from its pages ammunition against their conservative critics and courage to continue with ideas and ideals.

DOVER Publications has published in two volumes a new and unabridged edition of "Twentieth-Century Stage Decoration," a book by Walter Rene Fuerst and Samuel J. Hume that first appeared in 1929. The first volume contains the text, the second the illustrating photographs, with each priced at $3. Adolphe Appia wrote the introduction that is more confusing than illuminating.

SIX MEN AND A CAT were about to wind up their attempted trans-Atlantic flight in a motorized balloon well short of their mark when this photograph was taken in 1910 from a rescue vessel. The picture is from the book "The Motor Balloon 'America' " by Edward Mabley.

Sleuths & Suspense

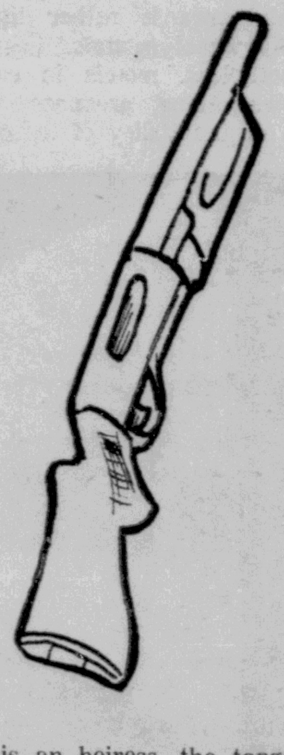
THE SMILING MEDUSA by Jean Muir; Dodd, Mead, 186 pages, $3.95.

GIRL ON A HIGH WIRE by Rae Foley; Dodd, Mead, 218 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The damsel-in-distress plot in the hands of a competent writer continues to make a most effective suspense novel, as demonstrated by these two books.

"The Smiling Medusa" is especially good. Called to an island off the Greek coast to claim the gloomy mansion she has inherited from her grandfather, Suzy Benson finds herself in the midst of unfriendly relatives, suspicious islanders and unpredictable expatriates. Greek legend plays a part in the peril that hangs over Suzy's head. And both geography and atmosphere are handled expertly by San Francisco resident, Miss Muir, even though this is her first suspense novel.

"Girl on a High Wire" takes place in New England. Again a young woman, this time Cathy Briggs, is summoned because of a death, in this case, her aunt, former actress Geraldine Harcourt. Again the menaced maiden is an heiress, the target of envy and jealousy. And murder is followed by more murder with Cathy always in danger of becoming the next victim. It's not quite as colorful or as exciting as "The Smiling Medusa," but still it's a good one from a veteran practitioner of the craft.



Resolutions For The Do-It-Yourselfer

By ANDY LANG

Okay, it's that time of the year.

Hectic, hectic, hectic.

But no matter how busy we are, there are moments for reflection. And as we meditate, we inevitably come to the conclusion that there are certain things we will or will not do in the year ahead.

There is no practical reason why such decisions can't be made in May or July or September. It's just that it seems more logical to plan our course of action with the start of a new year.

With no expectation that all — or any — of the following resolutions will be kept, they are nevertheless presented as a set of guidelines for the do-it-yourselfer in 1970:

1. I will read and follow the directions that come with the products I purchase, realizing that the manufacturers want me to get the best possible results so that I will be a repeat customer.

2. In using power tools, I will observe all safety precautions, including those that call for proper grounding to avoid electrical shocks in the event of short circuits.

3. I will stop wasting money by using part of the contents of a container and permitting the rest of it to spoil through failing to retighten the cover or replace the cap securely.

4. When I finish a painting job, I will thoroughly clean the brush or roller so that next time I start to use it, I won't find it as stiff as a board.

5. I will use the proper thinner for the finishing material I am using, remembering that it is turpentine or mineral spirits for oil paint, water for latex paint, denatured alcohol for shellac, turpentine for varnish, lacquer thinner for lacquer, and whatever the manufacturer specifies for a particular synthetic.

6. I will use a screwdriver for driving or removing screws and not for loosening stuck windows, puncturing holes or anything else that will mar the tip.

7. I will not try to be an acrobat while on a ladder, knowing that it is safer to move the ladder a few extra times than to try to reach too far.

8. When I am in my workshop tackling a project, I will immediately stop what I am doing when someone comes in to talk to me. Many accidents occur because of inattention to the job at hand.

9. I will not replace a fuse or perform any task involving electricity while standing on a damp floor.

10. I will not engage in any do-it-yourself work until I have sufficient time to devote to it, knowing that poor results and accidents are the consequences of haste.

Handy Storage Near The Door Is A Big Asset To Home

Nothing helps that last minute rush to get under way more than some handy storage near the door for hats, coats and accessories.

A little simple construction can help you keep things easy to find, while presenting an attractive appearance to guests.

Many entries can accommodate a narrow "grand entry" closet. It need not be deeper than 18 inches. If existing guest closet space can be converted, so much the better. But if no built-in space is available, wall space may be used for a built-out.

The closet can even be a useful divider between entry hall and living room.

DIVIDING IT into two compartments will help to organize the storage. One holds coats, with a shelf above for hats and briefcases. Installing projecting rods or bars on the back wall on which to hang the coats makes unnecessary the conventional coat closet depth.

The second compartment may contain shelving, shallow drawers and a mirror. Shelves that run from floor to ceiling are useful for purses, women's hats, perhaps rain gear such as overshoes and rubbers.

Beside the shelving, three shallow drawers under a counter top can accommodate a wardrobe-worth of scarves, gloves and rainhoods. Then, too, it might be a good place to keep a few postage stamps for the letter you must mail posthaste, or some extra bus schedules.

A mirror of adequate size above the counter is another convenience.

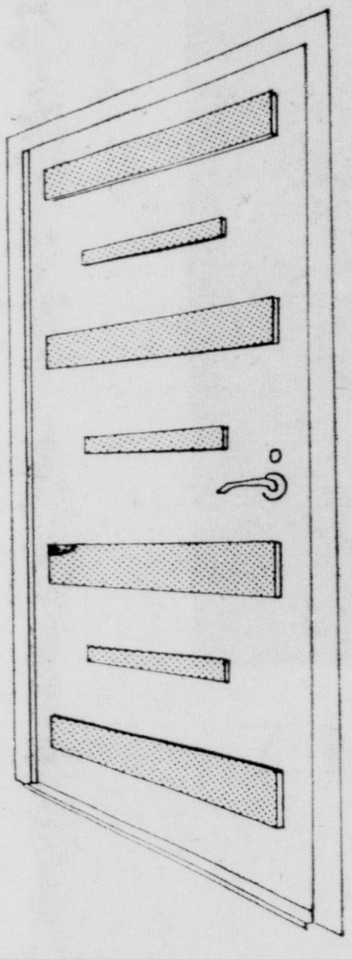
LOUVERED bifold doors will lighten the effect and provide easy and compact access.

There's a wide range of choice for finishing effects. Paint, paper of fabric can enliven the interior back wall. The half-inch thick shelves and dividing wall can be enameled and the floor covered with an easy-care flooring remnant in a wild design.

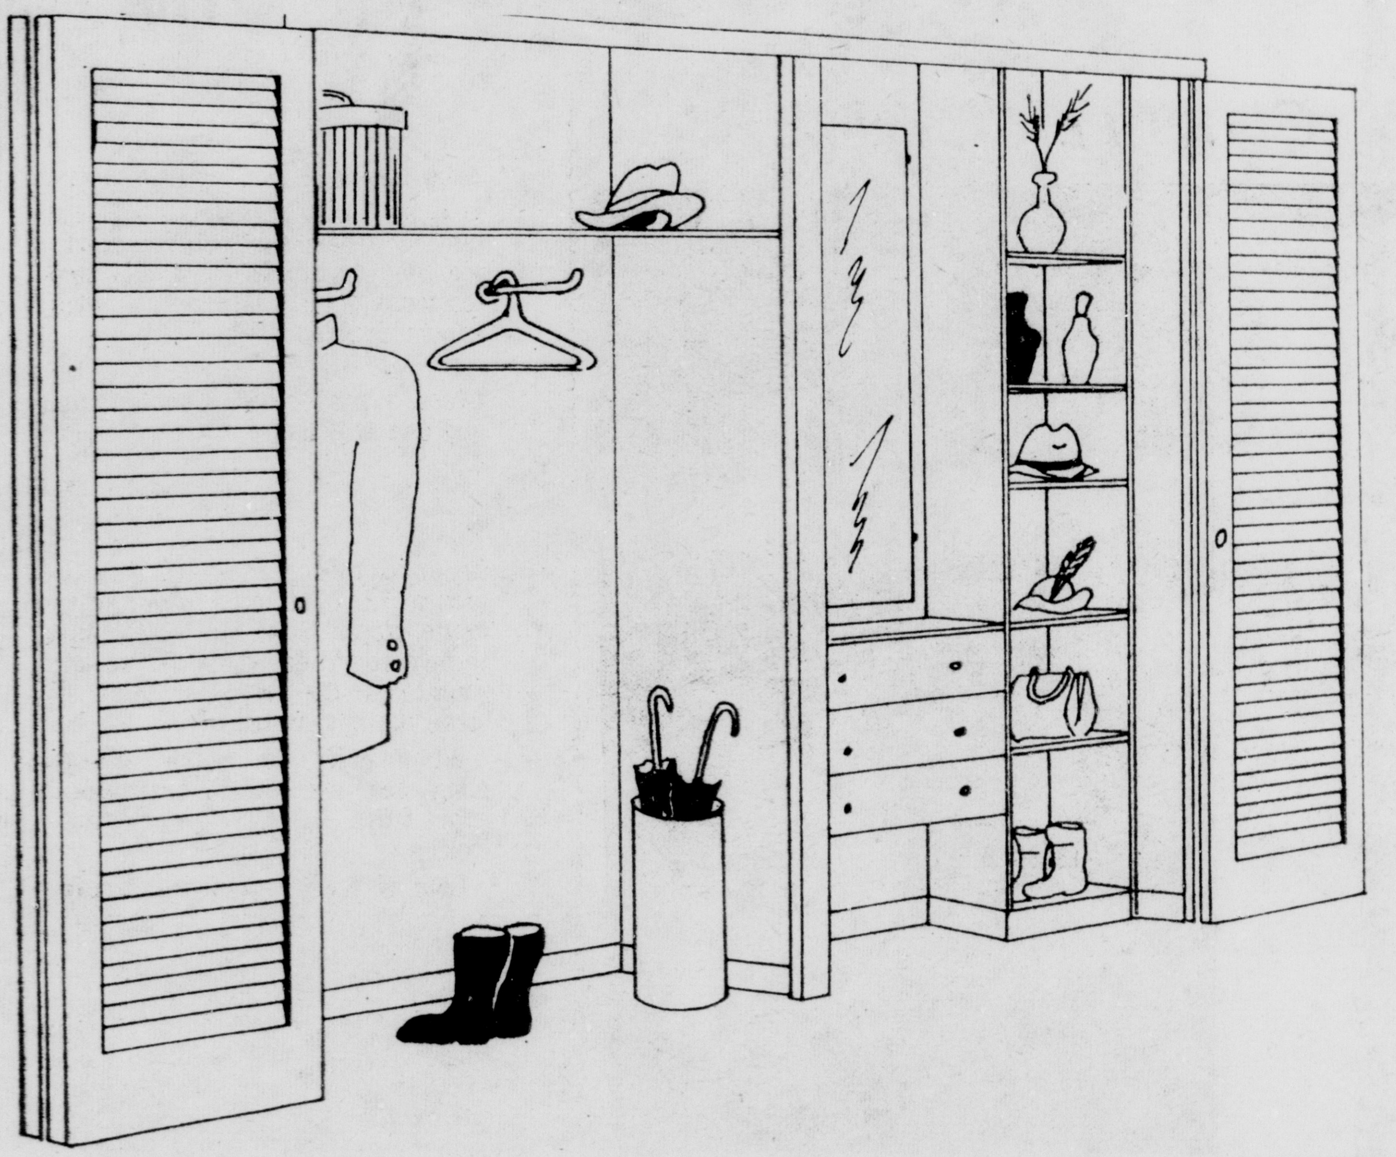
A light fixture or flush ceiling light is a helpful addition if there is an outlet handy.

PLANS FOR a larger side-by-side installation that can be modified to suit space requirements may be obtained by writing to Western Wood Products Assn., Dept. P-532, Yeon Bldg., Portland, Ore. 97204.

Enclose 15 cents in coin.



TO PEP UP a plain front door, place half-inch-thick boards horizontally on the exterior face. Alternate pieces of three and one-inch widths. The choice of color, doorknob and lighting can be used to provide additional charm.



A "GRAND ENTRY" closet is a far cry from the old Fibber McGee gloryhole, when properly organized. A two-section unit neatly stores coats, boots, umbrellas and accessories, while shallow drawers hold gloves and scarves. The closet can be built in, added on to the wall, or planned as a divider between entry and living room. Depth need be only 18 inches. Louver doors are stock item.

With no expectation that all — or any — of the following resolutions will be kept, they are nevertheless presented as a set of guidelines for the do-it-yourselfer in 1970:

1. I will read and follow the directions that come with the products I purchase, realizing that the manufacturers want me to get the best possible results so that I will be a repeat customer.

2. In using power tools, I will observe all safety precautions, including those that call for proper grounding to avoid electrical shocks in the event of short circuits.

3. I will stop wasting money by using part of the contents of a container and permitting the rest of it to spoil through failing to retighten the cover or replace the cap securely.

4. When I finish a painting job, I will thoroughly clean the brush or roller so that next time I start to use it, I won't find it as stiff as a board.

5. I will use the proper thinner for the finishing material I am using, remembering that it is turpentine or mineral spirits for oil paint, water for latex paint, denatured alcohol for shellac, turpentine for varnish, lacquer thinner for lacquer, and whatever the manufacturer specifies for a particular synthetic.

6. I will use a screwdriver for driving or removing screws and not for loosening stuck windows, puncturing holes or anything else that will mar the tip.

7. I will not try to be an acrobat while on a ladder, knowing that it is safer to move the ladder a few extra times than to try to reach too far.

8. When I am in my workshop tackling a project, I will immediately stop what I am doing when someone comes in to talk to me. Many accidents occur because of inattention to the job at hand.

9. I will not replace a fuse or perform any task involving electricity while standing on a damp floor.

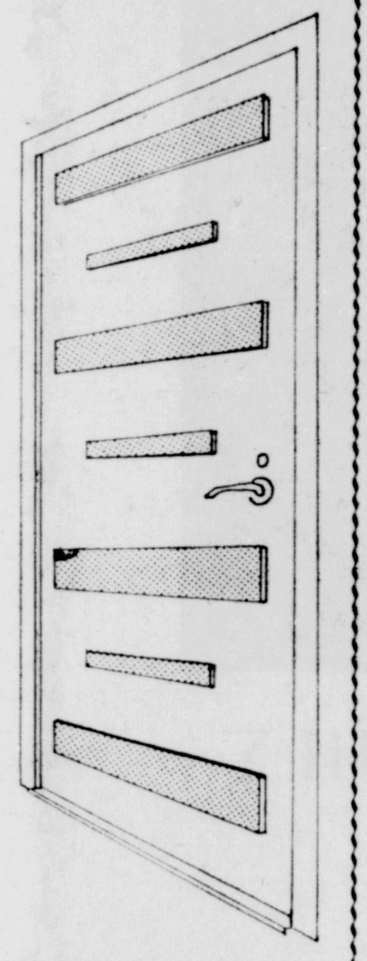
10. I will not engage in any do-it-yourself work until I have sufficient time to devote to it, knowing that poor results and accidents are the consequences of haste.

Handy Storage Near The Door Is A Big Asset To Home

Nothing helps that last minute rush to get under way more than some handy storage near the door for hats, coats and accessories.

A little simple construction can help you keep things easy to find, while presenting an attractive appearance to guests.

Many entries can accommodate a narrow "grand entry" closet. It need not be deeper than 18 inches. If existing guest closet space can be converted, so much the better. But if no built-in space is available, wall space may be used for a built-out.



TO PEP UP a plain front door, place half-inch-thick boards horizontally on the exterior face. Alternate pieces of three and one-inch widths. The choice of color, doorknob and lighting can be used to provide additional charm.

The closet can even be a useful divider between entry hall and living room.

DIVIDING IT into two compartments will help to organize the storage. One holds coats, with a shelf above for hats and briefcases. Installing projecting rods or bars on the back wall on which to hang the coats makes unnecessary the conventional coat closet depth.

The second compartment may contain shelving, shallow drawers and a mirror. Shelves that run from floor to ceiling are useful for purses, women's hats, perhaps rain gear such as overshoes and rubbers.

Beside the shelving, three shallow drawers under a counter top can accommodate a wardrobe-worth of scarves, gloves and rainhoods. Then, too, it might be a good place to keep a few postage stamps for the letter you must mail posthaste, or some extra bus schedules.

A mirror of adequate size above the counter is another convenience.

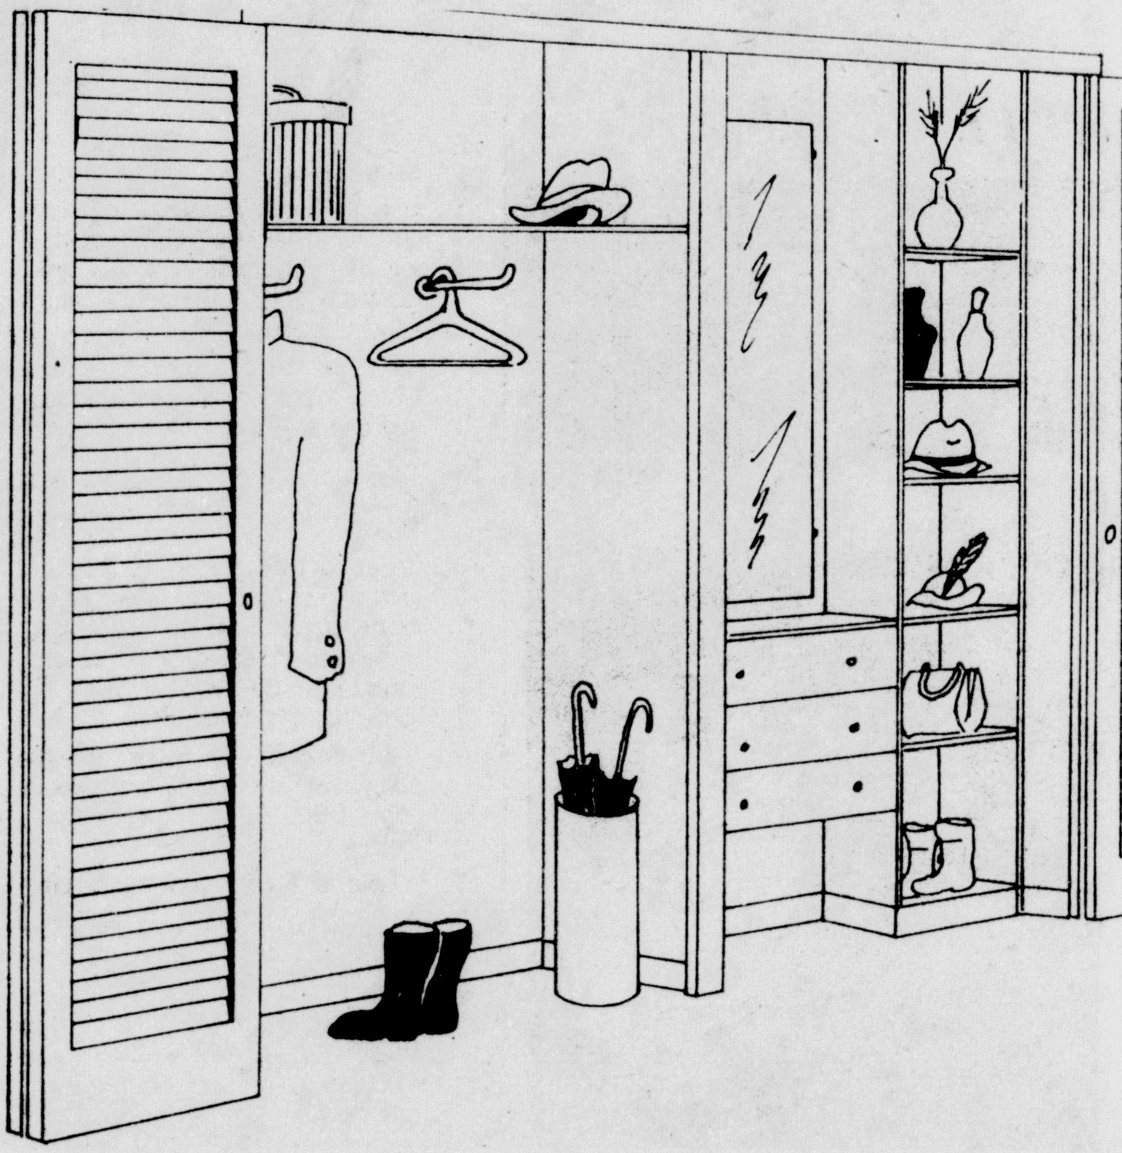
LOUVERED bifold doors will lighten the effect and provide easy and compact access.

There's a wide range of choice for finishing effects. Paint, paper of fabric can enliven the interior back wall. The half-inch thick shelves and dividing wall can be enameled and the floor covered with an easy-care flooring remnant in a wild design.

A light fixture or flush ceiling light is a helpful addition if there is an outlet handy.

PLANS FOR a larger side-by-side installation that can be modified to suit space requirements may be obtained by writing to Western Wood Products Assn., Dept. P-532, Yeon Bldg., Portland, Ore. 97204.

Enclose 15 cents in coin.



A "GRAND ENTRY" closet is a far cry from the old Fibber McGee gloryhole, when properly organized. A two-section unit neatly stores coats, boots, umbrellas and accessories, while shallow drawers hold gloves and scarves. The closet can be built in, added on to the wall, or planned as a divider between entry and living room. Depth need be only 18 inches. Louver doors are stock item.

A Man And His Times

Reviews Of New Reading

McCARTHY FOR PRESIDENT by Arthur Herzog; Viking, 295 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Paul E. Peterzell.

Last year's presidential campaign, as seen from one view inside by the Minnesota senator's Oregon campaign manager, failed to answer the twin questions of where either "new politics" or the poet-senator are headed.

"The regular Democrats, significantly, seemed to have misread the mood of 1968," says Herzog of the confrontation at Chicago. "They were certain that the McCarthyites would rejoin the fold once the nomination was in — as reformist dissidents had done before."

And Herzog makes clear that the regulars were wrong. "The party was resisting fresh blood just when, for the first time in many years, an army of new donors had arrived."

The author offers some stirring side speculations. The reregistration drive conducted for McCarthy in California, he notes, got about 3 per cent of the GOP vote, "and that would have been enough for Sen. Thomas Kuchel to defeat Dr. Max Rafferty in the Republican primary."

Herzog even comes up with a Marin angle.

Early in the compaign, he reports, "there was no money — the entire treasury consisted of $5,000 given by a generous San Francisco woman, June Degnan, who later would make other substantial contributions." This was June Oppen Degnan of Ross.

Herzog also details McCarthy's defeatism. A week before the convention, McCarthy told a British reporter "that he could not make it at Chicago — a statement picked up, oddly, by only one American newspaper," Herzog writes.

Herzog concludes with the observation that "Eugene McCarthy made 1968 a year Americans will long remember. A man met his times and there were certain incalculable results. Whether the man and his times will collide again no one can be sure."

SEN. EUGENE McCARTHY was pictured in a thoughtful mood as he answered the questions of David Frost during a television interview in the midst of his 1968 presidential campaign.

The Latest Novel By Longstreet

PEDLOCK SAINT, PEDLOCK SINNER by Stephen Longstreet; Delacorte Press, 469 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Stephen Longstreet, that virtuoso of fiction, has turned out another slickly-plotted, readable novel.

With skill and wit he directs the age-old conflict between idealistic youth and compromising middle age — as exemplified by young Rabbi David Mendoza, a chaplain fresh from Vietnam, and his uncle, Rabbi Charles Pedlock, shepherd of a delightful flock of hypocrites who find consolation at Temple Oheb Sholom in High Beverly, Calif. (where else?).

Old sinner Pedlock is a Jewish version of Elmer Gantry crossed with Billy Graham. He's a lecher, adulterer, charmer-of-widows, and violater-of-virgins. His one sartorial indulgence is black alligator shoes and his mating cry is Solomon's Song — King James Version.

But he's also a successful fund-raiser, a spell-binding and convincing preacher, and a suffering human being. Rabbi Pedlock is, in every sense, a winner — but his youthful, war-scarred nephew is a loser.

Young Rabbi Mendoza has his best moments in the second chapter — a grim, realistic account of a day aboard a hospital plane headed home from Vietnam. After that, it's all downhill for David — as a convincing character — and his doubts and struggles seem more adolescent than heroic.

Women are very much present in all Longstreet's novels and this time we are invited to watch luscious, long-legged Polly Bannock, a ripe, half-Mormon nurse, plead with David to convert her to Judaism while she converts him to sex.

Minna, sinner Charles Pedlock's patient wife, endures his indiscreet romping with panting, temporarily virginal Mona and cool, sophisticated Sally, and ends by being the most genuinely believable female of them all.

Longstreet's display of his knowledge of Judaism, both Orthodox and Reformed, is expert and informative. But he should have written two books — one a serious treatise of the philosophical problems of modern Jewry, and the other a sexy, fast-moving love story. But he chose to combine the two (sugar-coating?) and the result is surprisingly entertaining.

Longstreet, a scenarist and writer of screen-plays, has captured, with complete fidelity, the lilting rhythm of Jewish-American dialogue and conversation — so don't be surprised to find this story on television.

Though this novel is the third in a series about the Pedlocks — a family of wealthy American Jews — it can be read as an independent tale.

The Sordid, Murky World Of Forged Art Frauds

FAKE! by Clifford Irving; McGraw-Hill, 237 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Laura Devendorf.

If you own a Picasso, Matisse, Derain or Dufy don't mention it! The person you're trying to impress may have read Clifford Irving's "FAKE!"

In fact, having read it, anyone with nerve enough to part with real cash for these or several other painters of the period must either have watched the artist create the work himself or be an incurable masochist.

This incredible, yet true, story traces the activities of Elmyr de Hory, a style forger (not copyist) so expert that often artists themselves verified his work as their own. Through him, collectors have been bilked of uncounted millions. Yet the reluctant criminal saw almost none of the rewards and was kept to his task only through a series of involvements with unscrupulous companions.

This often sordid tale which sweeps the art and homosexual worlds of two continents is all the more spellbinding for its Dick-And-Jane directness. But the biggest point it makes is that collecting, far more than a love of art, is a colossal ego trip for dealers and buyers on down, without which the whole de Hory fraud would have been impossible.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

"Time To Go House" (Little, Brown, $4.25) is the first children's book to come from Walter D. Edmonds in far too long a time.

Edmonds has the knack for reeling off yarns for juniors in the tradition and style of the old storytellers. And "Time To Go House" finds him in his finest form.

Edmonds' principal character is the little mouse, Smalleata. And the grand adventure is the migration from field to the house for winter. It brings Smalleata into contact with new dangers and experiences, but fortunately adult mice including Uncle Stilton, are on hand to lend advice.

Edmonds, a Newbery Prize winner, again proves himself a marvelous tale-spinner who keeps things moving at a brisk and entertaining pace.

Some other new books for tykes and juniors:

"The Rabbit and the Turnip" (Doubleday, $1.95) is a small animal story for tos under 6, based upon a Chinese fable. Richard Sadler has translated it into English, while the illustrations, most appealing, are by the German Roswitha Gruttner. It is a warm story of four-footed and winged folk with a sound moral and a captivating cast. Especially recommended, and reasonably priced.

THIS IS the irrepressible little heroine of "Skrallan and the Pirates," the newest book by Astrid Lindegren, currently Sweden's best known author of stories for children.

Marin's Adrien Stoutenburg is responsible for "Fee, Fi, Fo, Fum" (Viking, $4.95), a collection of old legends about friendly giants that she retells in her own expert way. Her giants hail from many sources — from the Bible and from the cultures of England, Africa, Ireland, Yugoslavia and the American Indians, to name a few. All possess the special fascination that fictional giants have always held for children. Illustrations are by Rocco Negri.

A pretty blonde Swede, all of 3-years-old, is the heroine of "Skrallan and the Pirates" (Doubleday, $4.95) by Astrid Lindegren. Skrallan spends her summers on Saltcrow Islands, and there she indulges in the fancies and games that all tots enjoy. The cameras of Sven-Eric Deler and Stig Hallgren have followed the appealing child to record her play and activities in color. The splendid scenery adds yet another dimension to an exceptionally attractive book.

William Nordner has authored two new books for hobbyists, "How to Build Model Cars" (Meredith, $2.95) and "How to Build Model Ships" (Meredith, $2.95). Both books contain detailed instructions and both are generously illustrated with the author's own drawings. While the books are aimed at "10-year-olds and older," they are sufficiently authoritative to be of interest and assistance to hobbyists of any age who have not yet reached the advanced or expert level. For beginners, they are especially valuable.

'Pop Corn & Ma Goodness'' (Viking, $4.50) by Edna Mitchell Preston with Robert Andrew Parker illustrations is a good-humored romp making splendid use of word sounds. With some unique rhymes of her own, the author tells what happens after Pop Corn meets up with Ma Goodness. It has the flavor of the nonsense poem, and yet a dash of reality. And the rollicking color illustrations are lively eye-catchers.

TIME

Time is a clock's arm ticking around and round.

Time brings the days and months,
and years come and go again.

Time is sunrise and sunset.

Time is something that comes and goes and never comes back quite the same as it was before.

Time is a big, heavy spindle going back and forth.

Time takes the tides in and out of the ocean, sea and bay.

In time there is love and hatred, happiness and sadness,
tears and laughter.

Time creates your whole life-time.

CORTE MADERA — ANITA NAGEL

STARVE YOUR DOUBTS

Wise Men, what were your thoughts as you traveled the sands,
Carrying frankincense, gold, and the essence of myrrh,
Your gifts for the young Christ asleep on the straw?
Did you come just to worship and pay Him your homage,
Or were there some doubts in your minds . . . of His god-ness?
Did you give credence to rumors of Joseph and Mary?
Standing there close in the stable with animals breathing,
Did you talk with the shepherds, discussing the Star?
Did they tell of the light that had flooded the heavens,
And an angel choir singing "Glory to God in the highest"?
Did you look at the infant, and see Him your King?

SAN RAFAEL — RUTH MURRAY JONES

NEW YEAR'S PRAYER

Sing a song of the New Year
Hear the cooing of the dove,
Give us, Oh Lord, no dirge;
Rather, lead us in a paean to love.

NOVATO — JEAN GARIO

CHATTERERS

Wing to wing when
Magpies fly the skies
Shouting causes
In raucous ring
Dark goes the sun
Eclipsing silent pauses.

SAUSALITO — LEON SPIRO

UNTITLED

In Sausalito sunness
fading now
framing now
in orange tones
the Golden Gate
from city extricate
to stillness
in twilight — now night
oh! stillness, Sausalito.
Winter sidewalks crowd
with leaves
and not the treadmill
tourist feet heaves
winter evening and the night
on a Sausalito hillside.
what a haven we have found
on this choice bit of ground
between the Golden Gates.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

ENGLISH ORGAN MUSIC — Simon Preston at the organ of Colston Hall, Bristol — Argo ZRG 528:

The major work in this collection is the organ Sonata in G by Elgar, a 19th Century Romantic piece almost orchestral in its conception. Any listener who finds thrills in the massive organ symphonies of Widor and Vierne will surely want this one.

The second side of the LP contains five short modern organ works. Bridge, Tippett and Britten are among the top English composers represented. Sound is superb throughout.

RAWSTHORNE: Symphony No. 3; GERHARD: Concerto for Orchestra — BBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Norman Del Mar — Argo ZRG 553:

The 1964 symphony is modern though not avant-garde English symphonic material and left me unmoved. The Gerhard work, though, had quite an impact. For a larger orchestra with extra percussion, and in a single movement, it employs three types of continuity: (1) instrumental timbre as the compositional impulse; (2) pulse as the creative force; and (3) action in very slow motion where the music seems suspended in a vacuum. Extremely atonal yet with easily-felt form and sense, the Concerto is a work of amazing virtuosity. The performance seems to do it justice as well.

ITALIAN RECORDER SONATAS — CORELLI, BARSANTI, VERACINI, BIGAGLIA, VIVALDI — Frans Bruggen, recorder/Bykma, cello/Leonhardt, harpsichord — Telefunken SAWT 9518-A Ex:

Frans Bruggen is the most skilled recorder player on records today. Anyone who has had even passing acquaintance with the instruments knows their maddening tendency to come up with wrong or off-key notes even when all your fingers are supposedly in the right places. Bruggen never misses, and this can't all be due to post-editing of the tape. His tone is round, rich and smooth, and his virtuosity in fast passages little short of astounding.

The period covered, around 1700, marked the final flowering of recorder playing in Baroque Europe. All five sonatas are complex, varied and tuneful.

VIVALDI: Concerti a cinque, a quattro, a tre — Frans Bruggen and other instrumentalists — Telefunken SAWT 9528-A Ex:

More Bruggen, even to some of his own liner notes in which he admits with high good humor to the criticisms so often leveled at Vivaldi, i.e.: Perhaps he made a stencil of a particular passage of notes, and then stencilled it wherever he wanted it, treble, bass, all over the score. . . . Anyway, the fact we can laugh at some aspects of a thing we love doesn't mean we love it any less.

Any Vivaldi lovers will go ape over this LP.

Bonsai Plant Care And Culture Prove Fascinating To Marinites

Garden Page

Bonsai, anyone?

The answer has to be an overwhelming yes, for more and more Marinites are taking a fancy to these picturesque trees, dwarfed and twisted in Japanese fashion.

It is true that in Japan a gardener may start a young bonsai that will reach its perfection in the lifetime of his grandchildren. Patience is a big factor in shaping and training a specimen to the shape desired.

But, if patience isn't your virtue, don't despair, for most nurserymen have ready-grown bonsai plants in pots which you can enjoy and cherish in your home.

FOR THOSE who want to start a bonsai from a seedling, or hunt down older rugged-looking specimens to train, there are simplified procedures which will bring more rapid results.

Bonsai developed from year-old seedlings can be attractive specimens in five or 10 years. If you find a larger plant to start with — in the wild, in your own garden or in the nursery — you can have an attractive piece immediately.

If starting with older plants, look for misshaped, irregular growth rather than shapely plants such as are preferred for planting in the garden. Prune unwanted branches to add to the interest of specimen form.

KEEP IN mind the shape you're trying to achieve. A twisted look as though it had lived a rugged life on a rocky mountain top is ideal.

Back to the year-old seedling for bonsai: These are available at nurseries and have certain advantages. The trunk and branches will be pliable and easy to train. There are excellent manuals available, which show you how to wire the branches and trunks to achieve artistic shapes.

Pruning the young plants is confined to removing a few unwanted branches with sharp shears, then pinching-back new growth as it appears. The results are stouter trunks and small foliage.

START YOUR seedling in a small pot. Bonsai containers, available at nurseries and florist shops, are usually shallow — longer and wider than they are deep. Increase the size of the container from year to year until the specimen has reached the ultimate size you wish.

When you place the small tree in the container, try tilting it slightly for artistic effect. If the bowl is oblong, set the plant closer to one end than the other; if it's round, put the bonsai in the center.

Soil for bonsai specimens should be porous and not excessively rich. Equal parts of garden loam, leaf mold and sand is the usual mixture.

Drainage holes in the container should be covered with a fine wire screening or a piece of crockery set over the hole to prevent soil loss. A layer of gravel in the bottom of the container is recommended. Over that, add a layer of sand. Place the plant in the container, spread out its roots and then add the soil mixture. Press the soil firmly, then water it thoroughly with a fine spray.

CARE OF bonsai specimens differ from that of plants in the ground or in larger redwood tubs. They depend on your help to live in a small area of soil. Therefore, watering becomes very important.

Once a day with a fine mist is average, but in warm weather they may need water as many as three times a day.

Keep your bonsai out of direct hot sun and don't expose it to strong, drying winds. Don't be afraid of cold weather, as most bonsai plants are naturally hardy — conifers, deciduous shrubs and trees, or hardy evergreens. Naturally, if you're using a tender plant, you would give it winter protection.

If in doubt, ask your nurseryman.

WHETHER YOU'RE looking for older specimens or bonsai seedlings, choosing the plants is half the fun. There's a good variety available, and your imagination will happily run wild. Remember that the plants which are naturally slow-growing and picturesque are the best bets.

BONSAI PLANTS are a delightful hobby. In Japan, a gardener may start a young bonsai that will reach its perfection in the lifetimes of his grandchildren. But in this country, more impatient gardeners can purchase ready-grown bonsai plants in pots, such as the one above, at the nurseries and florist shops.

Before You Plant Those New Bareroot Roses —

As the New Year gets underway, so does the California rosarian's calendar of activities in the Golden State.

January is not only the month of pruning old roses, but a busy time for planting new ones.

Before rushing out and buying the first roses you see advertised, read the following advice from the California Association of Nurserymen about selecting and planting bareroot roses bushes:

THE MOST important step is in the selection of healthy bareroot stock. The good is easy to discern from the bad, and any nurseryman will be happy to explain the difference to you. Basically, you want to determine if the prospective purchase seems well formed with at least three strong canes (branches).

Beware of the shrivelled-up ones — or those with weak canes.

Roses are graded No. 1, No. 1½, and No. 2, with No. 1 being the best. No. 2 grade is discarded by most reputable rose growers. These are often sold as "bargain roses" — especially when sold without a variety name and just referred to as "pink," "yellow," etc.

Another thing to remember about rose buying is that the new All-American First Prize, and other 1970 introductions, will be in great demand. Supply generally doesn't meet demand, so select your's early in the season.

NOW FOR the planting of those new roses you bring home from the nursery: The requirements are not that complicated, and will assure beautiful results.

First, select a sunny planting site. The location should receive sun for at least half a day and more is preferable, especially in coastal gardens.

A well-drained soil is ideal, but a lack of such can be compensated for at time of planting. The planting hole should be large enough to permit you to spread out the roots of the rose. They should never be crammed into a hole in the ground.

If your soil isn't all it should be, it is advisable to mix it with a nurserymen's planter mix before returning it back into the hole.

WITH A good-sized planting hole, mound the soil and planter mix preparation into the shape of a cone and spread the roots so that they settle over this mound.

At the base of the rose is the bud union. This is located in the area where the canes branch out from the shank — and resembles a thumbnail. The rose should be planted at a depth so the bud union is slightly above the final soil level — about one inch above.

When the level has been determined, fill-in around the roots with the soil you have taken from the hole and combined with planter mix to create a rich, organic planting medium. When the hole is completely full, firm the area with your feet. Make sure the soil is packed firmly, eliminating any air pockets that may have formed.

MAKE A water basin around the bush. If the bud union has been lowered during the planting, now is the time to raise it before making this basin. This becomes the irrigation basin and it should be filled with water immediately, both to settle the soil and to keep the roots moist.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Lily bulbs are still available for planting. Give them a well-drained soil — rich in humus (as is provided by a nurseryman's planter mix used when setting-out the bulbs).

✓Crabgrass controls should be applied now to kill seeds that are overwintering — and waiting to germinate in spring. Ask your nurseryman to recommend a product for this job.

✓Christmas gift plants should be watered regularly so they won't dry out in the warm air of your home.

✓Check the camellias and azaleas in bloom now at your nearby nursery to see if they're the ones you've been looking for.

Winter's A Busy Planting Time For Marin Gardeners

January ushers in one of the busiest planting seasons for Marin gardeners.

From now till late March is the best time to plant any number of dormant trees and shrubs. Especially when you consider that most fruit trees, many shade trees, flowering specimens, vines, various berries and grapes can be easily planted in winter — more economically!

IF YOU LONG for a home fruit orchard, now is the time to start it. The bareroot prices are attractive and the variety is at its peak: From apples, peaches, plums, cherries, and other tasty fruit, to walnuts, pecans and almonds. Individual varieties have winter and summer cultural requirements that mean success or failure in your garden.

In planting a home orchard, consider how many trees your garden can accommodate. When temptation is great and space is at a premium, use dwarf fruit trees. While their overall size is less than normal, their fruit is of standard size and quality.

Most deciduous trees can be planted in the bareroot season — during the dormancy period. The list runs from alders and birches to sycamores and willows — with a host of others in-between.

THERE ARE excellent shade trees — at a tidy savings, you can enjoy that much more shade next summer from these bigger bareroot specimens.

Roses head the list of plants available during the bareroot season. Most nurseries will have their greatest selection of roses at this time. This will include 1970 All-American, First Prize, and other introductions available for the very first time.

INGRID BERGMAN, left, with Leslie Howard in "Intermezzo" and Katherine Hepburn, right, with John Barrymore in "A Bill of Divorcement," were introduced to Hollywood and stardom by David Selznick. Their brilliant performances are part of "Hollywood: The Selznick Years," a special to be presented Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

IN THE MUSIC ROOM of his home in Peekskill, N.Y., famed American composer Aaron Copland looks over the bound manuscripts of some of his scores for motion pictures, four of which he will narrate and conduct on the first of this season's New York Philharmonic Young People's Concerts. Titled "Music for the Movies," the program will be presented Sunday at 6 p.m. on Channel 10.

"Where You Try Before You Buy"

What To Do About A Clogged Kitchen Sink

When fats and greases flow down the kitchen sink day after day, as they almost invariably do in most homes, it is only a question of time before there is a stoppage.

When solid materials, such as pieces of vegetable, are also permitted to enter the sink drain, the problem is compounded.

This being a period when it isn't always easy to obtain a plumber when you need him — especially for so-called small jobs — it is essential that someone in the family know something about unclogging sink drains.

MOST OF the time the stoppage will give way with the use of a rubber plunger or "plumber's friend," one of which should be standard equipment in every house.

The rubber cup of the plunger should be placed directly over the drain. Hold the handle with both hands, press it down, then lift it up with a kind of snap motion. Don't be discouraged if nothing happens the first few times.

It often takes 10 or 20 such actions to unclog the pipe and start the water flowing freely again.

IF THIS doesn't work, use a "snake" or auger, another item that should be around the house.

There are several variations of this tool, which is basically a flexible wire with a hook on the end of it. If yours has a crank handle, it should be turned in a clockwise direction after the wire has been inserted in the drain and jiggled around with an up-and-down movement.

In the event that neither the plunger nor the auger produces results, the trap under the sink may have to be cleaned out. Take off the cleanout plug at the bottom of the U with a wrench, unscrewing it in a counter-clockwise direction.

If there is no plug, unscrew the nuts that hold the U in place.

BE SURE TO place a pail or other container under the trap before opening it, since some water will come out. After the plug or U has been removed, use a snake or piece of wire with a hook on the end of it to pull out any clogged material on either side of the trap.

Commercial chemical drain cleaners are often effective when used according to directions.

Following the directions is vital, as there are many different kinds of cleaners on the market. The manufacturers of these products say that their regular use will prevent stoppages by dissolving accumulated matter, such as grease.

CHATTER CENTER

SINCE CONVERSATION is making a comeback, it's nice to have a suitable, comfortable and attractive place for the "oral exchange of sentiments, observations, opinions, ideas," as a current dictionary calls this talk-talk. Such a spot, shown here, offers cozy seating, some conversation-starters on the table at left and the one in the center. The room's atmosphere is comfortably conducive to an easy flow of words. Starting with the walls of warm-appearing Masonite textured hardboard, the decorator added some interesting touches — an ultra-modern painting, spindle-type room divider, a hanging plant, an attractive pilasters-and-shelving unit over settee, and a convenient lamp on endtable.

Do Your Homework Now If You Plan An Addition To The House

By VIVIAN BROWN

If the do-it-yourselfer is planning an addition to the house next spring, his wife should get him to spend the winter studying the project to give it a professional look, advises a well-known architect.

It may be the difference between a project that looks good and one that looks patchy.

"I GET LIVID when I see how do-it-yourselfers ruin the lines of a lovely house. It is like an attractive person who tolerates a skin blemish; or, a homemade dress that is carelessly thrown together. It could be different, if they'd just give it some thought," he says.

What secrets in house remodeling set the architect's look apart from the do-it-yourselfer's look?

Lots of them, says this architect, who prefers anonymity. The principal secret is detail.

FOR EXAMPLE, many do-it-yourselfers put a room on the house without considering whether it is compatible with the existing architecture. They cannot visualize the finished room.

Amateurs, he says, can educate themselves on this point.

One way is to photograph the exterior of the house from every angle while the trees are denuded and everything is pretty stark around the building. The photographs may then be enlarged and used as a base on which to sketch the planned addition. Or, tracing paper can be used to copy the photograph, and then the contemplated addition can be drawn on the paper. Three or four sketches should be made and friends and family should be consulted.

LIBRARIES HAVE books on architecture, and many libraries keep newspaper and magazine files that may provide photographs of houses that resemble the one to be remodeled.

Study the elevations (sides) of the house, and make sure that the addition is kept in line with the main part of the house. Note the roof and the placement of doors and windows. If one finds the right house, and the addition is about the size planned, the picture can be copied for ideas.

The addition should accommodate whatever function is planned for it. Is it to sleep one or more people? Is it to be a dining area? An extra bath?

EACH OF these rooms requires a certain basic amount of space for furniture and fixtures.

The do-it-yourselfer should draw the dimensions of furnishings to scale, so that he can see how they will fit into the room. A straight chair is figured at about 18 inches, but a windsor chair may run to 26 inches, a wing chair to 32 inches.

Many people plan small dining rooms without the space necessary around the table to push dining chairs back. A dining table may be five or more feet long, but it may extend to eight or more feet for special occasions. Six chairs or more may be required in the room. If there is a china cabinet, it should be figured at another four feet. You need room to open the door, and room to open drawers of a buffet server, if there is one. Many people use serving shelves on the wall, and these may take another foot or more.

MANY WOMEN cannot comprehend floor plans, this architect points out. His own wife cannot understand rough sketches, blueprints or anything that isn't three-dimensional. A photograph is the nearest thing to it, unless the do-it-yourselfer can build a model of the room.

"This would surely achieve perfect harmony. A small model of a project might be built from cigar boxes, and it will save headaches later."

If he is remodeling a kitchen, the do-it-yourselfer should really investigate every new idea connected with kitchens. Women like utility, convenience and style in the kitchen. They like ironing boards that spring out of walls, double sinks that permit sloshing things from one sink to another, accessible places for trays and small appliances. They like self-cleaning ovens, dishwashers and a freezer compartment in refrigerators even if they own a large freezer.

ONE BIG mistake made by do-it-yourselfers is forgetting to take into consideration the height of the kitchen worker. Cupboards may be put up so high that a little woman can't reach them.

Libraries usually have books and catalogs that illustrate the proper placement of utilities and architecural catalogs used by architects in assessing new building materials.

This architect says that if he ever builds another house for his wife, he will have her sign a release before building begins.

Women often say "that sounds great" and then later say they didn't understand what you really meant, he says. For example, they want many doors and windows, but they complain when they cannot properly place a grand piano or big sofa in the room.

On Moving Fence Posts

Want to move a fence post?

Dig around the base of the post to a depth of one foot. Wiggle post to loosen, and water around base with a hose. Let water soak in. Set a two-by-four on the ground next to the post and on it put your auto tire jack. Wrap strong welded chain around the post and over the jack lifter-bar.

Then hoist away with the jack and the post should slip out.

Resolutions For The Do-It-Yourselfer

By ANDY LANG

Okay, it's that time of the year.

Hectic, hectic, hectic.

But no matter how busy we are, there are moments for reflection. And as we meditate, we inevitably come to the conclusion that there are certain things we will or will not do in the year ahead.

There is no practical reason why such decisions can't be made in May or July or September. It's just that it seems more logical to plan our course of action with the start of a new year.

With no expectation that all — or any — of the following resolutions will be kept, they are nevertheless presented as a set of guidelines for the do-it-yourselfer in 1970:

1. I will read and follow the directions that come with the products I purchase, realizing that the manufacturers want me to get the best possible results so that I will be a repeat customer.

2. In using power tools, I will observe all safety precautions, including those that call for proper grounding to avoid electrical shocks in the event of short circuits.

3. I will stop wasting money by using part of the contents of a container and permitting the rest of it to spoil through failing to retighten the cover or replace the cap securely.

4. When I finish a painting job, I will thoroughly clean the brush or roller so that next time I start to use it, I won't find it as stiff as a board.

5. I will use the proper thinner for the finishing material I am using, remembering that it is turpentine or mineral spirits for oil paint, water for latex paint, denatured alcohol for shellac, turpentine for varnish, lacquer thinner for lacquer, and whatever the manufacturer specifies for a particular synthetic.

6. I will use a screwdriver for driving or removing screws and not for loosening stuck windows, puncturing holes or anything else that will mar the tip.

7. I will not try to be an acrobat while on a ladder, knowing that it is safer to move the ladder a few extra times than to try to reach too far.

8. When I am in my workshop tackling a project, I will immediately stop what I am doing when someone comes in to talk to me. Many accidents occur because of inattention to the job at hand.

9. I will not replace a fuse or perform any task involving electricity while standing on a damp floor.

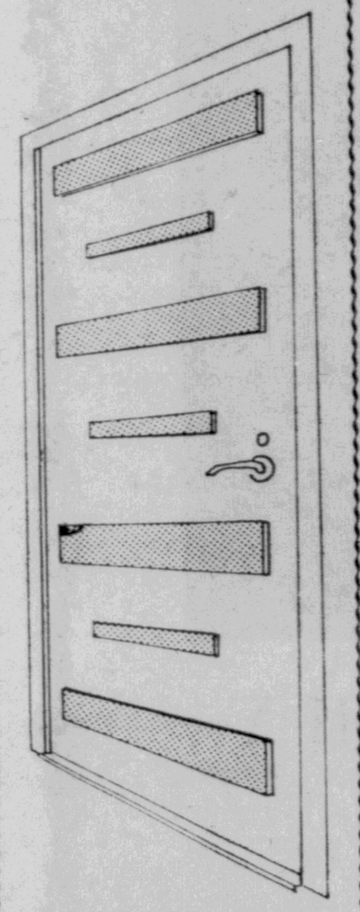
10. I will not engage in any do-it-yourself work until I have sufficient time to devote to it, knowing that poor results and accidents are the consequences of haste.

Handy Storage Near The Door Is A Big Asset To Home

Nothing helps that last minute rush to get under way more than some handy storage near the door for hats, coats and accessories.

A little simple construction can help you keep things easy to find, while presenting an attractive appearance to guests.

Many entries can accommodate a narrow "grand entry" closet. It need not be deeper than 18 inches. If existing guest closet space can be converted, so much the better. But if no built-in space is available, wall space may be used for a built-out.



TO PEP UP a plain front door, place half-inch-thick boards horizontally on the exterior face. Alternate pieces of three and one-inch widths. The choice of color, doorknob and lighting can be used to provide additional charm.

The closet can even be a useful divider between entry hall and living room.

DIVIDING IT into two compartments will help to organize the storage. One holds coats, with a shelf above for hats and briefcases. Installing projecting rods or bars on the back wall on which to hang the coats makes unnecessary the conventional coat closet depth.

The second compartment may contain shelving, shallow drawers and a mirror. Shelves that run from floor to ceiling are useful for purses, women's hats, perhaps rain gear such as overshoes and rubbers.

Beside the shelving, three shallow drawers under a counter top can accommodate a wardrobe-worth of scarves, gloves and rainhoods. Then, too, it might be a good place to keep a few postage stamps for the letter you must mail posthaste, or some extra bus schedules.

A mirror of adequate size above the counter is another convenience.

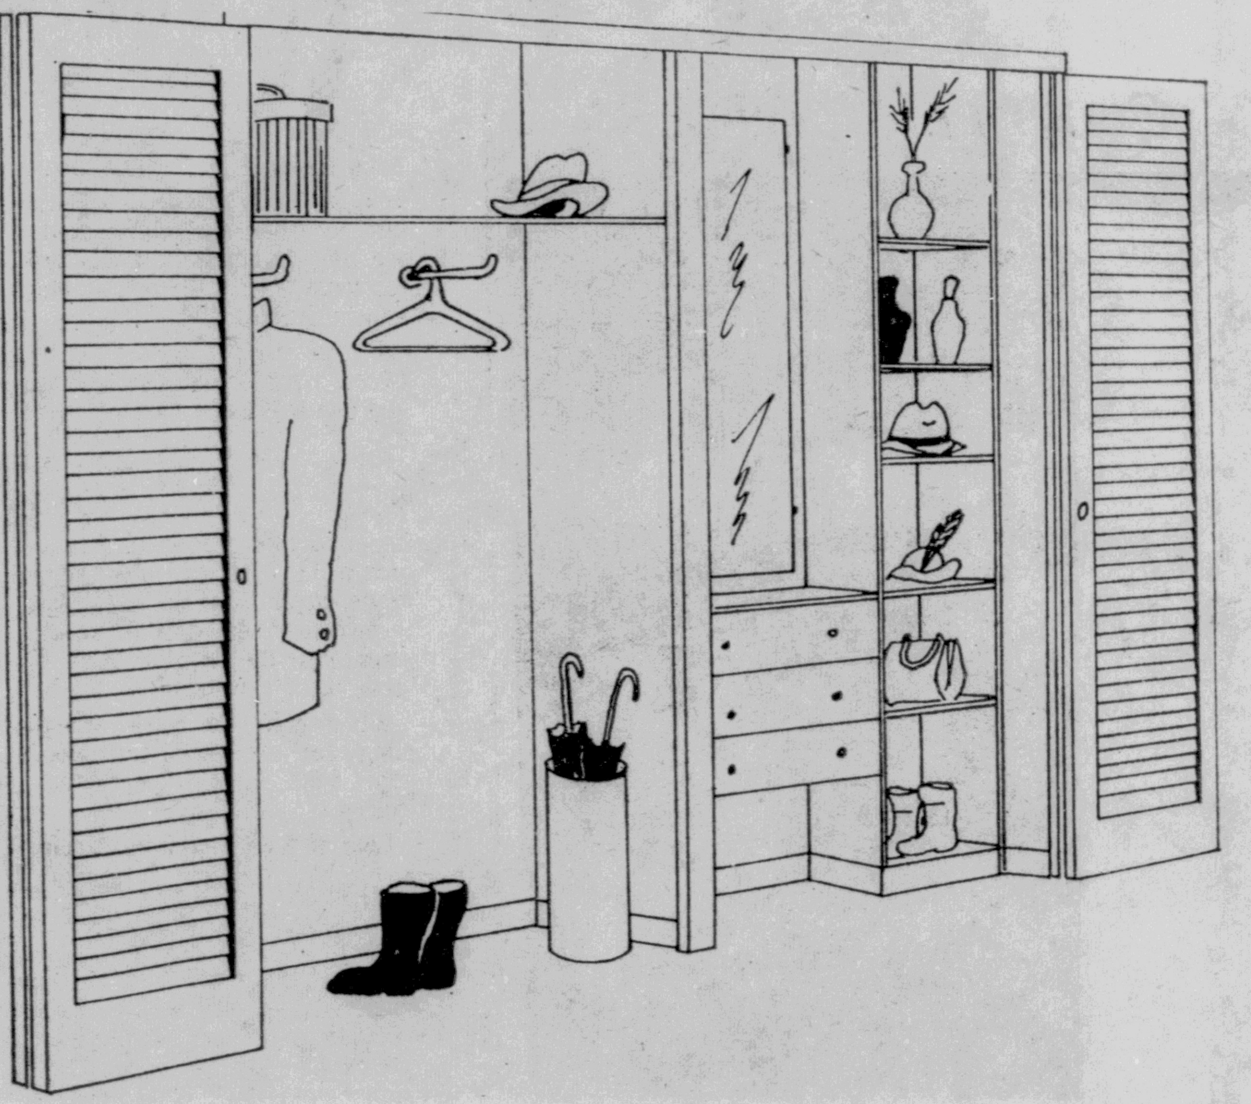
LOUVERED bifold doors will lighten the effect and provide easy and compact access.

There's a wide range of choice for finishing effects. Paint, paper of fabric can enliven the interior back wall. The half-inch thick shelves and dividing wall can be enameled and the floor covered with an easy-care flooring remnant in a wild design.

A light fixture or flush ceiling light is a helpful addition if there is an outlet handy.

PLANS FOR a larger side-by-side installation that can be modified to suit space requirements may be obtained by writing to Western Wood Products Assn., Dept. P-532, Yeon Bldg., Portland, Ore. 97204.

Enclose 15 cents in coin.



A "GRAND ENTRY" closet is a far cry from the old Fibber McGee gloryhole, when properly organized. A two-section unit neatly stores coats, boots, umbrellas and accessories, while shallow drawers hold gloves and scarves. The closet can be built in, added on to the wall, or planned as a divider between entry and living room. Depth need be only 18 inches. Louver doors are stock item.

What To Expect From TV In The '70s

By RICK DuBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television in the 1970s is likely to offer these developments:

More stations, with specialized program material and audiences, as a result of the growth of cable and community-antenna television. Following the current radio pattern, an example of this might well be all-news stations.

The growth of homes as family entertainment centers as prices drop for do-it-yourself videotape machines, and programs — via cassettes — become more available as an alternative and complement to network shows. In this area, instructional and informational programs seem certain to be widely used.

A greater reflection, in network broadcasts, of the tastes and values of the current young generation. Creators from this generation will naturally grow into positions of video authority and prominence. The audience of this generation, too, will reach the age where it is likely to stay home more often and watch television.

More "special" network programming as the competition increases for the added leisure time of views, particularly those in sophisticated urban areas, where most persons now live. Executives agree audiences are more hip nowadays — but some powerful outdated ratings surveys still emphasize tastes in outlying provincial areas because of oldtime population patterns and samplings, and are holding back logical trends.

Furthermore, being mass-oriented, the major broadcasting organizations comprise, quite naturally, a basically conservative entertainment and communications force. They want to appeal to as many people as possible, and offend as few as they can, in order to gain ratings and sponsors and profits. Almost unanimously, top network executives see few drastic changes in form and content for programming in the 1970s.

TELEVISION has such enormous impact that even relatively small and natural changes register immediately in the national consciousness. It is therefore provocative when all three network programming bosses affirm, with enthusiasm, some new directions their organizations will take, with the apparent emphasis on young-thinking people.

For example, Mort Werner, NBC-TV's program chief: "I think things have to be different. We have a generation out there that is pretty good at script editing."

Like his counterparts, Werner sees more live-on-tape shows "with a certain sense of immediacy" in the future. He also thinks of doing away with standard-length programs when the project is right; of fine novels serialized; of more format comedy series example: "Laugh-In" rather than routine variety shows, and of all-specials nights "a lot more of that."

"I'd like to take one night some time to show the public television from around the world," he says.

Mike Dann, program boss of CBS-TV, which has attracted many older viewers, says: "Change is coming, and it's going to be fairly drastic, I think. I don't mean in permissiveness, or kinds of drama, or the decline of situation comedy, or things like that. America is undergoing a massive social revolution, and it's certainly going to find its way to television."

At ABC-TV, meanwhile, the new head of programming, Martin Starger, looks toward "longer form" shows and "a greater upsurge of specials," agreeing that audiences are more sophisticated and "tired of standard series." He said:

"I'M NOT SO sure we won't see on a regular basis, a single program for a whole night. Or perhaps one or two big programs."

Starger, like others, sees wider use of foreign productions, as with the movie industry recently. He also takes a positive attitude toward newer-breed movies slated for video despite some viewer fears over their earthiness. He notes that "Georgy Girl" and "A Man And A Woman" appeared on ABC-TV recently, and says the future will hold more "adult, real, contemporary" subjects.

Television, of course, is most exciting when covering real events. And NBC President Julian Goodman says: "What we might see is a return to more liveness on TV — particularly in the news area, offering some of the things people think television does best. Perhaps a regular program; maybe not hard news events. Let's say, for example, a world trade fair in Japan."

The networks indicate little future sympathy for the opinionated, so-called "new journalism." NBC news chief Reaven Frank offers the "classic definition of American Journalism: That it is self-responsible rather than to any outside aim or school of thought." And Richard Salant, head of CBS News, says of the "new journalism:"

"It's not new and it's not journalism. It represents the worst features of the early penny press of the United States. And journalism means to get at the truth without regard to personal feelings or opinions."

SALANT'S CHIEF interest is getting more air time for news.

Over at ABC-TV, news executive Bill Sheehan has the same concern. Sheehan also thinks the future's added stations, with more specific audience groups, may mean more live broadcasts — "maybe proceedings of the House of Representatives down to city council meetings."

Such added channels may even result in a counterpart to the underground press, says Salant. "Of course they'll have to clean up their language a little," he says. "But I'll watch."

What To Expect From TV In The '70s

By RICK DuBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television in the 1970s is likely to offer these developments:

More stations, with specialized program material and audiences, as a result of the growth of cable and community-antenna television. Following the current radio pattern, an example of this might well be all-news stations.

The growth of homes as family entertainment centers as prices drop for do-it-yourself videotape machines, and programs — via cassettes — become more available as an alternative and complement to network shows. In this area, instructional and informational programs seem certain to be widely used.

A greater reflection, in network broadcasts, of the tastes and values of the current young generation. Creators from this generation will naturally grow into positions of video authority and prominence. The audience of this generation, too, will reach the age where it is likely to stay home more often and watch television.

More "special" network programming as the competition increases for the added leisure time of views, particularly those in sophisticated urban areas, where most persons now live. Executives agree audiences are more hip nowadays — but some powerful outdated ratings surveys still emphasize tastes in outlying provincial areas because of oldtime population patterns and samplings, and are holding back logical trends.

Furthermore, being mass-oriented, the major broadcasting organizations comprise, quite naturally, a basically conservative entertainment and communications force. They want to appeal to as many people as possible, and offend as few as they can, in order to gain ratings and sponsors and profits. Almost unanimously, top network executives see few drastic changes in form and content for programming in the 1970s.

TELEVISION has such enormous impact that even relatively small and natural changes register immediately in the national consciousness. It is therefore provocative when all three network programming bosses affirm, with enthusiasm, some new directions their organizations will take, with the apparent emphasis on young-thinking people.

For example, Mort Werner, NBC-TV's program chief: "I think things have to be different. We have a generation out there that is pretty good at script editing."

Like his counterparts, Werner sees more live-on-tape shows "with a certain sense of immediacy" in the future. He also thinks of doing away with standard-length programs when the project is right; of fine novels serialized; of more format comedy series example: "Laugh-In" rather than routine variety shows, and of all-specials nights "a lot more of that."

"I'd like to take one night some time to show the public television from around the world," he says.

Mike Dann, program boss of CBS-TV, which has attracted many older viewers, says: "Change is coming, and it's going to be fairly drastic, I think. I don't mean in permissiveness, or kinds of drama, or the decline of situation comedy, or things like that. America is undergoing a massive social revolution, and it's certainly going to find its way to television."

At ABC-TV, meanwhile, the new head of programming, Martin Starger, looks toward "longer form" shows and "a greater upsurge of specials," agreeing that audiences are more sophisticated and "tired of standard series." He said:

"I'M NOT SO sure we won't see on a regular basis, a single program for a whole night. Or perhaps one or two big programs."

Starger, like others, sees wider use of foreign productions, as with the movie industry recently. He also takes a positive attitude toward newer-breed movies slated for video despite some viewer fears over their earthiness. He notes that "Georgy Girl" and "A Man And A Woman" appeared on ABC-TV recently, and says the future will hold more "adult, real, contemporary" subjects.

Television, of course, is most exciting when covering real events. And NBC President Julian Goodman says: "What we might see is a return to more liveness on TV — particularly in the news area, offering some of the things people think television does best. Perhaps a regular program; maybe not hard news events. Let's say, for example, a world trade fair in Japan."

The networks indicate little future sympathy for the opinionated, so-called "new journalism." NBC news chief Reaven Frank offers the "classic definition of American Journalism: That it is self-responsible rather than to any outside aim or school of thought." And Richard Salant, head of CBS News, says of the "new journalism:"

"It's not new and it's not journalism. It represents the worst features of the early penny press of the United States. And journalism means to get at the truth without regard to personal feelings or opinions."

SALANT'S CHIEF interest is getting more air time for news.

Over at ABC-TV, news executive Bill Sheehan has the same concern. Sheehan also thinks the future's added stations, with more specific audience groups, may mean more live broadcasts — "maybe proceedings of the House of Representatives down to city council meetings."

Such added channels may even result in a counterpart to the underground press, says Salant. "Of course they'll have to clean up their language a little," he says. "But I'll watch."

INGRID BERGMAN, left, with Leslie Howard in "Intermezzo" and Katherine Hepburn, right, with John Barrymore in "A Bill of Divorcement," were introduced to Hollywood and stardom by David Selznick. Their brilliant performances are part of "Hollywood: The Selznick Years," a special to be presented Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

IN THE MUSIC ROOM of his home in Peekskill, N.Y., famed American composer Aaron Copland looks over the bound manuscripts of some of his scores for motion pictures, four of which he will narrate and conduct on the first of this season's New York Philharmonic Young People's Concerts. Titled "Music for the Movies," the program will be presented Sunday at 6 p.m. on Channel 10.

What To Expect From TV In The '70s

By RICK DuBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television in the 1970s is likely to offer these developments:

More stations, with specialized program material and audiences, as a result of the growth of cable and community-antenna television. Following the current radio pattern, an example of this might well be all-news stations.

The growth of homes as family entertainment centers as prices drop for do-it-yourself videotape machines, and programs — via cassettes — become more available as an alternative and complement to network shows. In this area, instructional and informational programs seem certain to be widely used.

A greater reflection, in network broadcasts, of the tastes and values of the current young generation. Creators from this generation will naturally grow into positions of video authority and prominence. The audience of this generation, too, will reach the age where it is likely to stay home more often and watch television.

More "special" network programming as the competition increases for the added leisure time of views, particularly those in sophisticated urban areas, where most persons now live. Executives agree audiences are more hip nowadays — but some powerful outdated ratings surveys still emphasize tastes in outlying provincial areas because of oldtime population patterns and samplings, and are holding back logical trends.

Furthermore, being mass-oriented, the major broadcasting organizations comprise, quite naturally, a basically conservative entertainment and communications force. They want to appeal to as many people as possible, and offend as few as they can, in order to gain ratings and sponsors and profits. Almost unanimously, top network executives see few drastic changes in form and content for programming in the 1970s.

TELEVISION has such enormous impact that even relatively small and natural changes register immediately in the national consciousness. It is therefore provocative when all three network programming bosses affirm, with enthusiasm, some new directions their organizations will take, with the apparent emphasis on young-thinking people.

For example, Mort Werner, NBC-TV's program chief: "I think things have to be different. We have a generation out there that is pretty good at script editing."

Like his counterparts, Werner sees more live-on-tape shows "with a certain sense of immediacy" in the future. He also thinks of doing away with standard-length programs when the project is right; of fine novels serialized; of more format comedy series example: "Laugh-In" rather than routine variety shows, and of all-specials nights "a lot more of that."

"I'd like to take one night some time to show the public television from around the world," he says.

Mike Dann, program boss of CBS-TV, which has attracted many older viewers, says: "Change is coming, and it's going to be fairly drastic, I think. I don't mean in permissiveness, or kinds of drama, or the decline of situation comedy, or things like that. America is undergoing a massive social revolution, and it's certainly going to find its way to television."

At ABC-TV, meanwhile, the new head of programming, Martin Starger, looks toward "longer form" shows and "a greater upsurge of specials," agreeing that audiences are more sophisticated and "tired of standard series." He said:

"I'M NOT SO sure we won't see on a regular basis, a single program for a whole night. Or perhaps one or two big programs."

Starger, like others, sees wider use of foreign productions, as with the movie industry recently. He also takes a positive attitude toward newer-breed movies slated for video despite some viewer fears over their earthiness. He notes that "Georgy Girl" and "A Man And A Woman" appeared on ABC-TV recently, and says the future will hold more "adult, real, contemporary" subjects.

Television, of course, is most exciting when covering real events. And NBC President Julian Goodman says: "What we might see is a return to more liveness on TV — particularly in the news area, offering some of the things people think television does best. Perhaps a regular program; maybe not hard news events. Let's say, for example, a world trade fair in Japan."

The networks indicate little future sympathy for the opinionated, so-called "new journalism." NBC news chief Reaven Frank offers the "classic definition of American Journalism: That it is self-responsible rather than to any outside aim or school of thought." And Richard Salant, head of CBS News, says of the "new journalism:"

"It's not new and it's not journalism. It represents the worst features of the early penny press of the United States. And journalism means to get at the truth without regard to personal feelings or opinions."

SALANT'S CHIEF interest is getting more air time for news.

Over at ABC-TV, news executive Bill Sheehan has the same concern. Sheehan also thinks the future's added stations, with more specific audience groups, may mean more live broadcasts — "maybe proceedings of the House of Representatives down to city council meetings."

Such added channels may even result in a counterpart to the underground press, says Salant. "Of course they'll have to clean up their language a little," he says. "But I'll watch."
